PREFACE

ūsus magister est optimus (Cicero, Rab. Post 4.9.)

This volume accompanies Reading Latin (Text), C.U.P. 1986 and is to be used in conjunction with it. For an introduction to the Reading Latin course – its aims, methodology and future development – and our acknowledgements of all the help we have received in its production, please refer to the Introduction of the Text volume.

Notes to Grammar, Vocabulary and Exercises

- 1 All dates are B.C., unless otherwise specified.
- 2 The running grammar for each section comes in four parts:
 - (a) Running vocabulary.
 - (b) Learning vocabulary. Words set to be learnt will not be glossed in running vocabularies again, unless they occur in the Text with a different meaning. On p. 557 there is a total vocabulary of all words set to be learnt with their full range of meanings given in this course, and a note of where they should have been learnt (teachers should use this information when devising their own tests).
 - (c) Grammar and exercises. It is extremely important to note that the exercises should be regarded as a pool out of which the teacher/students should choose what to do, and whether in or out of class. Some of the simpler exercises we have already split into necessary and optional sections, but this principle should be applied to all of them.
 - (d) Dēliciae Latīnae / further reading.
- 3 On p. 448 there is a full reference grammar, based on the running grammar explanations, but in many cases adding further information to that given in the running explanations.

4 On p. 548 there is an Appendix on the Latin language.

5 On p. 557 there is the total learning vocabulary, and on p. 578 an English–Latin vocabulary for those doing the English–Latin sentence and prose exercises.

6 At the end of the book, p. 593, there is a supplementary Latin-English vocabulary, containing important words which have been met, but not learnt in this course. Those who wish to continue with their Latin studies should attempt to learn them.

7 In cross-references, superior figures appended to a section number indicate Notes, e.g. 1394. If the reference is in the form '140.1', the last digit indicates a numbered sub-section.

8 Linking devices are used occasionally in passages of original Latin poetry to indicate words that should be taken together. ——links words next to each other, Thinks words separated from each other. Where such words are glossed, they will be found in separate entries in close proximity to one another. In later sections, a longer linking device ——shows the limits of a larger phrase.

9 The case which follows an adjective or a verb is usually indicated by e.g. '(+acc.)'. But occasionally you will meet e.g. '(x: acc.)'.

10 In places where standard beginners' texts print v (i.e. consonantal u), we have in accordance with early MS practice printed u. But in some later Latin texts we have reverted to v, which is commonly found in early printed books.

In learning vocabularies, where a new meaning is listed for a word already learned, 'he meaning(s) previously met are placed in brackets after the new meaning(s). E.g. at 2A: bene good! fine! (well, thoroughly, rightly).

12 Bold numbers in pageheads, e.g. 15, refer to sections of the Running Grammar. Where these numbers have an arrow, e.g. ←15 16→, the arrow shows the direction to go to find the section indicated.

Pronunciation

Rules of word stress (accent)

- 1 A word of two syllables is stressed on the first syllable, e.g. ámō, ámās.
- 2 A word of more than two syllables is stressed on the penultimate (i.e. second syllable from the end) if that syllable is HEAVY, e.g. astútus, audiúntur (see p. 318 for the terms 'heavy', 'light').
- 3 In all other cases, words of more than two syllables are stressed on the antepenultimate (i.e. third syllable from the end), e.g. amábitis, pulchérrimus.
- 4 Words of one syllable (monosyllables) always have the stress, e.g. nóx. But prepositions before a noun are not accented, e.g. ad hóminem.
- 5 Some words, e.g. -que, -ne and -ue, which are appended to the word which precedes them, cause the stress to fall on the last syllable of that word, e.g uírum but uirúmque.

For a clear account of Classical Latin pronunciation see W. S. Allen, Vox Latina (2nd edition), Cambridge 1975.

GLOSSARY OF ENGLISH-LATIN GRAMMAR

This explains the most important terminology of Latin grammar, with examples in English. To make it as practically useful as possible, we provide simple definitions with down-to-earth examples of each term. Students should bear in mind, however, that (1) there is only a limited 'fit' between English grammar and Latin grammar, and (2) brevity and simplicity lead to technical inaccuracy (grammatical terms are notoriously difficult to define). So this index should be regarded as a simplified guide to the subject, for use when you forget the definition of a term used in the grammar or to refresh your memory of grammatical terms before you begin the course.

Before beginning the course, you should be acquainted with the following terms: noun, adjective, pronoun, conjunction, preposition, verb, person, number, tense, gender, case, singular, plural.

ablative: name of a case of the noun, pronoun and adjective. Functions defined at Reference Grammar L.

accidence: grammar which deals with variable forms of words, e.g. declensions, conjugations.

accusative: name of a case of the noun, pronoun or adjective. Function defined at Reference Grammar L.

active: a verb is active when the subject is doing the action, e.g. 'she (subject) runs', 'Thomas Aquinas (subject) reads his book'.

adjective: words which define the quality of a noun or pronoun by describing it, e.g. 'steep hill', 'red house', 'clever me'. There are also adjectival clauses, for which see relative clauses. Possessive adjectives are 'my', 'your', 'our', 'his', 'her', 'their'. In Latin adjectives must agree with nouns or pronouns in case, number and gender.

adverb: word which defines the quality of a verb by showing how the action of the verb is carried out, e.g. 'she ran quickly', 'she works enthusiastically'.

Adverbial clauses do the same job, e.g. 'she ran as quickly as she was able'. Adverbs in Latin are indeclinable.

agree(ment): an adjective agrees with a noun when it adopts the same case, number and gender as the noun. E.g. if a noun is nominative singular masculine, an adjective which is to describe it must also be nominative singular masculine.

apposition: nouns or noun-plus-adjective phrases which add further information about a noun already mentioned are said to be 'in apposition' to it, e.g. 'the house, a red-brick building, was placed on the side of a hill' - here 'a red-brick building' is 'in apposition' to 'the house'.

article: the definite article is the word 'the', the indefinite article the word 'a'. aspect: whether the action of the verb is seen as a simple statement, as continuing or repeated, e.g. 'I run', 'I am running' (or, in English, emphasised 'I do run').

auxiliary (verb): in 'she will love', 'she does love', 'she has loved', the verbs 'will', 'does' and 'have' are auxiliary verbs, brought in to help the verb 'love' (auxilium = help), defining its tense and aspect. 'May', 'might', 'would', 'should' are auxiliaries indicating the mood of the verb to which they are attached. Latin only uses auxiliary verbs in the perfect, pluperfect and future perfect deponent and passive.

case: form of the noun, pronoun or adjective which defines the relationship between that word and the rest of the sentence, e.g. a Latin word adopting the form which shows that it is in the nominative case (e.g. serua) might show that the word is the subject of its clause; a Latin word adopting the form which shows that it is in the accusative case (e.g. seruam) might show that it is the object of the sentence. There are six cases in Latin: nominative, vocative, accusative, genitive, dative and ablative. Most have more than one function. causal clause: clause expressing the reason why something has happened or will happen, e.g. clauses beginning 'because . . .', 'since . . .'

clause: part of a sentence containing a subject and finite verb. E.g. main clause 'she had finished', 'she hated it', 'she may succeed'; subordinate clause 'when she had finished', 'which she hated', 'so that she may succeed'. Cf. phrase. (See adjective, adverb, noun.)

comparative: form of adjective or adverb which implies a comparison, e.g.

'hotter', 'better', 'more slowly'.

complement: when a subject is said to be something, or to be called, to be thought, or to seem something, the 'something' is the complement of the verb, e.g. 'she is intelligent', 'it seems OK', 'she is thought to be a promising scholar'.

concessive clause: clause introduced by the word 'although', e.g. 'although it is raining, we shall go to the shops'.

conditional clause: clause introduced by the word 'if', e.g. 'If it rains today, I shall not go to the shops.' The technical term for the 'if' clause is 'protasis', and for the main clause 'apodosis' ('pay-off').

Glossary of English-Latin grammar conjugation (conjugate): the parts of a verb are its conjugation, e.g. the conjugation of 'I love' in the present indicative active is 'I love, you love, he/she/it loves, we love, you love, they love'.

conjunction: words (indeclinable in Latin) which link clauses or phrases or sentences, e.g. 'When the light was out and she went up to have dinner, the burglar entered and took the piano. But he was not unseen . . . 'Co-ordinating conjunctions link together units (i.e. clauses, sentences, phrases) of equal grammatical value e.g. 'He went and stood and laughed out loud; but she sulked and stalked off and had a drink.' Subordinating conjunctions, words like 'when', 'although', 'if', 'because', 'since', 'after', introduce units of different grammatical value compared with the main clause. See main verb. consecutive clause: see result clause.

consonant: a letter which is not a vowel, e.g. 'b', 'c', 'd', 'f', 'g', 'h', etc.

dative: name of case of the noun, pronoun and adjective. For function, see Reference Grammar L.

declension (decline): the forms of a noun, pronoun or adjective. To decline a noun is to list all its forms (i.e. nominative, vocative, accusative, genitive, dative, ablative) in both singular and plural.

deponent: a verb whose dictionary form (1st person singular) ends in -or e.g. minor, hortor, sequor etc., and whose meaning is always active.

direct speech: speech which is quoted in the exact words of the speaker, e.g. 'Give me that book' (cf. indirect speech).

final clause: a clause which expresses the idea '(in order) to', i.e. it expresses purpose. E.g. 'in order to swim the river, she took off her shoes', 'to cross the railway, use the bridge'.

finite (verb): a verb which has a defined number and person, e.g. 'she runs' (third person, singular). Contrast 'to run', 'running', which are examples of the infinite verb (cf. infinitive).

future perfect tense: a verb form of the type 'I shall have -ed', e.g. 'I shall have tried', 'you will have gone', 'he will have spoken'.

future tense: a verb form of the type 'I shall/will -- ', e.g. 'I shall go', 'you will be', 'they will run'.

gender: whether a noun, pronoun or adjective is masculine, feminine or neuter. genitive: a case of the noun, pronoun, or adjective. Function defined at Reference Grammar L.

historic sequence (also called 'secondary sequence'): when the main verb of a sentence is in a past tense ('I have -ed' counts as a present tense for the purposes of sequence).

imperative: the form of a verb which gives a command, e.g. 'run!' imperfect tense: verb form of the type 'I was -ing', 'I used to -', 'I kept on ing'. It indicates continued or repeated action in the past.

indeclinable: a word which has only one form.

indicative: a verb form which states something as a fact, not as a wish or command, e.g. 'she runs'. Compare 'run!', 'may she run!', etc.

indirect object: term for the person to whom something is given or said, e.g. 'she said to him, "Give it to me"; 'she told him to give her the book'.

indirect speech: words which are reported, not, as in direct speech, stated exactly as the speaker said or thought them, e.g. direct command 'let me go', indirect command 'she told them to let her go'; direct statement 'he has gone', indirect statement 'he said that he had gone'; direct question 'where am I?', indirect question 'she wondered where she was'. Any verb of speaking or thinking can introduce indirect speech.

infinitive: verb form prefixed in English by 'to', e.g. 'to run', 'to have walked' inflexion: the different endings that a word takes to express its meaning in a sentence, e.g. 'he' (subject), 'him' (object) indicate case and may be said to be 'inflected'. Cf. 'they say', 'we said', indicating tense.

interrogative: asking a question, e.g. 'who?' is an interrogative pronoun.

intransitive (verb): a verb is intransitive when it does not require a direct object to complete its meaning, e.g. 'I stand', 'I sit'. In English such words can, at a stretch, be used transitively as well, when they adopt a different meaning, e.g. 'I sit (= take) an exam'; 'I cannot stand (= endure) that man'.

jussive (subjunctive): related to giving orders. The form of the jussive subjunctive in English is 'let him/them/me/us'.

locative case: the case used to indicate where something is at. It is used in Latin with names of towns and one-town islands, e.g. 'at Rome', 'on Malta'.

main verb: the main verb(s) of a sentence is(are) the verb(s) left when all other verbs have been cut out (e.g. infinitives, participles, verbs in subordinating clauses), e.g. '(Although being something of a bibliophile) (who loved nothing more than a good read) (if she could get one), she sold her books (when the examinations were over) and lived in misery the rest of her life with her friends (who were totally illiterate)'. Main verbs - 'sold' and 'lived'. mood: whether a verb is indicative, subjunctive or imperative. morphology: study of the forms which words take.

nominative: a case of the noun, pronoun or adjective. For function, see 6.2,4. noun: name of a person ('woman', 'child'), place ('London'), thing ('table', 'chair', 'mountain') or abstraction ('virtue', 'courage', 'thought', 'quality').

Glossary of English-Latin grammar

Noun clauses are clauses which do the job of a noun in the sentence, e.g. all indirect speech (e.g. 'he says words'; 'words' = noun, object: 'he says that she is divine'; 'that she is divine' = noun-clause, object), constructions following 'I fear that/lest, I doubt that, I prevent x from' and 'it happened that . . .' number: whether something is singular or plural; 'table' and 'he' are singular, object: a direct object is that onto which the action of the subject and verb directly move, e.g. 'she hits the ball', 'they love books', 'we can see Rome'. Cf. indirect object.

'tables' and 'they' are plural.

participle: a verb-form with the qualities and functions of an adjective, e.g. 'a running sore', 'a woman thinking . . .' In Latin there are present participles active (meaning '-ing'), future participles active (meaning 'about to-; on the point of -ing'), and perfect participles active (meaning 'having -ed') and passive (meaning 'having been -ed').

passive: a verb is passive when the subject is not doing the action, but having the action done to it. The same action may be described in both the active and the passive 'voice', e.g. 'she hit the ball' (active), 'the ball was hit by her' (passive);

'we visited Rome' (active), 'Rome was visited by us' (passive).

perfect tense: verb-form of the type 'I -ed', 'I have -ed', 'I did -', expressing a simple action in the past, e.g. 'I walked', 'she has gone', 'we did see it'.

person: the persons are expressed by the pronouns 'I', 'we' (first persons, singular and plural); 'you' (second person singular and plural); 'he'/'she'/'it', 'they' (third persons singular and plural).

phrase: part of a sentence not having a finite verb, often introduced by a preposition, e.g. 'in the house' (prepositional phrase); 'going to work, he -' (participle phrase); 'I wish to do it' (infinitive phrase).

pluperfect tense: a verb-form of the type 'I had -ed', e.g. 'I had walked', 'they had gone'.

plural: more than one, e.g. 'tables' is plural, 'table' is singular.

predicate: what is said about the subject of a sentence, e.g. 'The man',

predicative: to predicate something of someone is to say something new about them. So when adjectives (including participles) and nouns say something new, i.e. not previously acknowledged, about a person or thing, they are being used 'predicatively'. In English, predicative adjectives and participles usually come after the nouns they go with, e.g. 'I saw the man working', 'the woman went away happy', 'Caesar became consul', 'she is a help to them' (the last two are predicative nouns). Contrast 'I saw the working man', 'the happy woman went away', in which the adjectives describe what is already understood or acknowledged, adding nothing new (such adjectives are technically called 'attributive').

preposition: word coming before a noun or pronoun which (in Latin) affects the noun/pronoun's case, e.g. 'into the house', 'from the pot', 'from the hill', 'with my friend', 'by train'. Such expressions are called 'prepositional phrases'.

present tense: verb-form of the type 'I -- ', 'I am -- ing', 'I do -- ', e.g. 'I love', 'I am loving', 'I do love'.

primary sequence: when the main verb of a sentence is present, future, or perfect in the form 'I have -ed'.

principal parts: (in Latin) the four parts of an active verb (present, infinitive, perfect and perfect participle) from which all other parts are formed; deponent verbs have only three such parts (present, infinitive, and perfect participle).

pronoun: this refers to a noun, without naming it, e.g. 'he' (as against 'the man', or 'Caesar'), 'they' (as against 'the women', or 'the Mitfords'), 'we', 'you', 'who', 'which'.

question (direct): a sentence ending in '?' (see also indirect speech).

reflexive: a pronoun or adjective is reflexive when it refers to (i.e. is the same person or thing as) the subject of the clause in which it stands, e.g. 'they warmed themselves by the fire', 'when they had checked their equipment, the leader gave them (not reflexive, since 'leader' is the subject) orders'.

regular: a 'regular' verb, noun, or adjective follows the pattern of the type to which it belongs, without deviation.

relative clause: a clause introduced by a relative pronoun such as 'who', 'which', 'what', 'whose', 'whom', 'that'; the relative pronoun refers back to a previous noun or pronoun (sometimes it refers forward to it) and the whole clause helps to describe or define the noun or pronoun referred to (hence it is an adjectival clause) e.g. 'the book which I am reading is rubbish', 'she presented the man whom she had brought', 'Who dreads, yet undismayed/Dares face his terror . . . Him let saint Thomas guide'.

result clause: a clause which expresses the result or consequence of an action. It takes the form 'so . . . that | as to . . . 'e.g. 'they were so forgetful that they left (as to leave) all their money behind'.

secondary sequence: see historic sequence.

semi-deponent: a verb which takes active forms in present, future and imperfect tenses, but deponent forms in perfect, future perfect and pluperfect. sequence: see primary and historic.

singular: expresses one of something, e.g. 'table' is singular, 'tables' is plural; 'he' (singular), 'they' (plural).

Glossary of English-Latin grammar

statement: an utterance presented as a fact, e.g. 'I am carrying this pot'. Cf. question 'Am I carrying this pot?', command 'Carry this pot!'

subject: the subject of a sentence is, in the case of active verbs, the person/thing doing the action or being in the state (e.g. 'Gloria hits out'; 'Gloria is champion'); in the case of passive verbs, the subject is the person or thing on the receiving end of the action, e.g. 'the ball was hit by Gloria'.

subjunctive: the mood of the verb used in certain main and subordinate clauses in Latin and English, often expressing wishes or possibilities or commands, e.g. 'may I win!', 'let him think!', 'she left in order that she might catch the bus'.

subordinating clause (sub-clause): any clause which is not the main one (e.g. see noun, relative clause, result clause, final clause, adverb, temporal clause, causal clause, concessive clause, conditional clause, participle, infinitive). Cf. phrase. Also see main verb.

suffix: a small addition to the end of a word which changes its meaning, e.g. 'act', 'actor', 'action', 'active'.

superlative: the form of an adjective or adverb which expresses its highest degree, e.g. 'the fastest horse', 'he jumped very high', 'she worked extremely hard'.

syllable: a vowel or a vowel + consonant combination, pronounced without interruption as a word or part of a word, e.g. 'the' (one syllable), 'Julius' (three syllables), 'antidisestablishmentarianism' (eleven syllables).

syntax: grammar which deals with the constructions of a sentence (e.g. indirect speech, result clauses, temporal clauses, participle phrases etc.).

temporal clause: a clause expressing the time when something happened in relation to the rest of the sentence, e.g. 'when . . .', 'after . . .', 'while . . .', 'before . . .', 'as soon as . . .'.

tense: the time at which the action of a verb is meant to take place. See under present tense, future tense, imperfect tense, perfect tense, future perfect tense, pluperfect tense.

transitive (verb): a verb which takes a direct object to complete its meaning, e.g. 'I put the book on the table', 'I make a chart' (it is very difficult to think of a context in which 'I put' and 'I make' could make a sentence on their own. This is not the case with intransitive verbs, e.g. 'I sit').

verb: a word expressing action or state, e.g. 'run', 'jump', 'stand', 'think', 'be', 'say'. (See under active and passive). Every complete sentence has at least one. vocative: a case of the noun, pronoun or adjective, used when addressing someone (e.g. 'you too, Brutus?', 'et tū, Brūte?').

voice: whether a verb is active or passive.

vowel: 'a', 'e', 'i', 'o', 'u'. Diphthongs are two vowels pronounced as a single syllable (e.g. 'ou', 'ae').

General notes

- 1 All vowels are pronounced short unless marked with a (macron) over them. So observe different vowel length of 'i' in, e.g., fīlia, etc. It may be helpful, but is not essential, to mark macra in your exercises.
- 2 'above a vowel indicates stress. Stress marks are included in all tables and throughout the Reference Grammar.
- 3 You should learn the learning vocabulary for each section before attempting the exercises. Please see Text, p. viii for suggested methodology.

Grammar for Introduction – familia Euclionis

1 sum 'I am'

1st person singular (1st s.) su-m 'I am' 'you are' 2nd person singular (2nd s.) es1 'he/she/it is' 'there is' 3rd person singular (3rd s.) es-t 1st person plural (1st pl.) sú-mus 'we are' 2nd person plural (2nd pl.) és-tis 'you (pl.) are' 3rd person plural (3rd pl.) su-nt 'they/there are' 1 Really es-s

Notes

- 1 sum is the most common verb in Latin.
- 2 Whereas English takes two words to express 'I am', Latin takes one. This is because the endings of the verb -m, -s, -t, -mus, -tis, -nt — indicate the person doing the action. Thus in full:

 $-m = I^1$ -s = you (s.)-t = he, she, it, there -mus = we-tis = you (pl.)-nt =they, there

1 In other verbs -ō='I'

3 sum is irregular because, as you can see, the stem changes from su- to es-. If it is any consolation, all verbs meaning 'to be' are irregular, e.g. English 'I am', 'you are', 'he is'; French (deriving from Latin) 'je suis', 'tu es', 'il est' etc.

- 4 In the 3rd s. and 3rd pl., est and sunt mean only 'is' and 'are' if the subject is named, e.g. senex est = 'he is an old man'; Euclio senex est = 'Euclio is an old man'; seruae sunt = 'they are slave-women'; omnës seruae sunt = 'all are slave-women'.
- 5 Note the following points about word-order in sentences with sum:
 - Where subject and complement are stated
 - (i) the unemphatic order is: subject complement sum. E.g. Euclio senex est 'Euclio is an old man'.
 - (ii) other orders place emphasis on the first word, e.g.

senex est Eucliö (complement sum subject) senex Eucliö est (complement subject sum)

Both mean 'an old man, that's what Euclio is.'

The order 'subject sum complement' emphasizes the subject.

- (iii) The verb sum may come first and is then emphatic, e.g. est enim Eucliö auarus (sum subject complement) 'for Euclio is (in fact) a miser.'
- Where the subject is not stated in Latin, the usual order is: complement sum. E.g.

Staphyla est 'it's Staphyla'.

est/sunt at the beginning of a sentence commonly indicate the existence of something, and are often best translated 'there is/ there are'. E.g.

est locus . . . 'there is a place . . .'

In such sentences, more information will be expected e.g., 'there is a place, where roses grow', 'there are people, who like Latin.'

NB In (a) (i) and (ii) and (b) observe how complement + sum usually stick together to form the predicate, e.g.

Eucliö senex-est senex-est Eucliö sum is likely to go closely with the word preceding it, except where the order has been altered for special emphasis (as in e.g. senex Eucliö est).

2 Present indicative active (1st conjugation): amō 'I love', 'I am loving', 'I do love'

3rd s. áma-t 'he/she/it loves'

1st pl. amā-mus 'we love' 2nd pl. amā-tis 'you (pl.) love' 3rd pl. áma-nt 'they love'

1st s. hábe-ō 'I have' 'I am having' 'I do have'
2nd s. hábē-s 'you have' etc.
3rd s. hábe-t 'he/she/it has'
1st pl. habé-mus 'we have'
2nd pl. habé-tis 'you (pl.) have'
3rd pl. hábe-nt 'they have'

Notes

1 All verbs called 1st conjugation conjugate in the present like am-ō, e.g. habit-ō 'I live', intr-ō 'I enter', uoc-ō 'I call', clām-ō 'I shout', par-ō 'I prepare', cēl-ō 'I hide'.

All verbs called 2nd conjugation, which all end in -eō, conjugate like habe-ō, e.g. time-ō 'I fear'.

- 2 Observe that these regular verbs are built up out of a stem + endings. The stem gives the meaning of the verb (ama-'love', habe-'have'), the endings give the person, i.e.:
 - -ō 'I' (cf. su-m)
 - -s 'you'
 - -t 'he/she/it; there'

-mus 'we'

- -tis 'you (pl.)'
- -nt 'they/there'
- 3 Observe that the 'key' vowel of 1st conjugation verbs is A (amA-), of 2nd conjugation is E (habE-). The only exception is the 1st s. amō 'I love', though this was originally amaō.

4 Terminology

Conjugation means 'the setting out of a verb in all its persons' as illustrated in 2 and 3. Thus to conjugate a verb means to set it out as at 2 and 3. Indicative means that the action is being presented as a fact (though it need not be actually true). E.g.:

'I speak to you' (fact, true)

'The pig flies past the window' (presented as a fact, but not true!)

Active means the subject is performing the action, e.g. 'Euclio runs'; 'Staphyla sees the daughter'.

Tense means the time at which the action is taking place. Thus 'present' means 'present tense', i.e. the action is happening in the present, e.g. 'I am running'. Cf. future tense 'I will run', etc.

Meaning

The present indicative active of e.g. amo has three meanings, i.e. 'I love, I am loving, I do love'. Each of these three 'aspects' (as they are called) of the present tense represents the actions in a slightly different way. 'I love' is the plainest statement of fact, 'I am loving' gives a more vivid, 'close-up', continuous picture (you can see it actually going on), 'I do love' is emphatic. You must select by context which meaning suits best. Remember, however, that in general the emphatic meaning is indicated in Latin by the verb being put first in the sentence.

Exercises

Morphology

- 1 Conjugate: cēlō; timeō; portō; habeō; (optional: habitō; clāmō; intrō; uocō; sum).
- 2 Translate, then change pl. to s. and vice versa: clāmās; habent; intrat; uocō; sumus; portāmus; timēs; habētis; est; timet; uocant; cēlātis; timēmus; habeō; sunt.
- 3 Translate into Latin: you (pl.) have; I do hide; we are carrying; they call; you (s.) are afraid of; she is dwelling; there are; it has; there enters; she is.

The cases in Latin: terminology and meaning

The terms 'nominative', 'accusative', 'genitive', 'dative' and 'ablative' are the technical terms for five of the six so-called 'cases' of Latin nouns and adjectives. (The sixth case, the vocative, is used to address people, e.g. 'welcome, friend', but since its form is the same as the nominative in almost all instances, we have left it out of the charts.) The cases will be referred to as nom., acc., gen., dat., and abl. When laid out in this form the cases are called a 'declension'. 'Declining' a noun means to go through all its cases. The different forms of the cases are of absolutely vital importance in Latin and must be learned by heart till you know them to perfection. The reason is as follows. In English, we determine the meaning of a sentence by the order in which the words come. The sentence 'man bites dog' means something quite different from 'dog bites man', for no other reason than that the words come in a different order. A Roman would have been bewildered by this, because in Latin wordorder does not determine the grammatical functions of the words in the sentence (though it plays its part in emphasis): what is vital is the form the words take. In 'daughter calls the slave', 'daughter' is the subject of the sentence, and 'slave' the object. A Roman used the nom. form to indicate a subject, and the acc. form to indicate an object. Thus when he wrote or said the word for daughter, fīlia, he indicated not only what the word meant, but also its function in the sentence - in this case, subject; likewise, when he said 'slave', seruum, the form he used would tell him that slave was the object of the sentence. Thus, hearing filia seruum, a Roman would conclude at once that a daughter was doing something to a slave. Had the Roman heard filiam seruus, he would have concluded that a slave, seruus, which is here in the nom. case, was doing something to a daughter, filiam, here in the acc. case. WORD-ORDER IN LATIN IS OF SECONDARY IMPORTANCE since its function relates not to grammar or syntax so much as to emphasis, contrast and style. To English-speakers word-order is, of course, the critical indicator of meaning. In Latin, grammar or syntax is indicated by WORD FORM. WORD FORM IS VITAL.

We can note here that English has a residual case system left. E.g., 'I like beer', not 'me like beer'; 'he loves me', not 'him loves I'; and cf. he, him / she, her, hers / they, them, theirs.

1 Noun: the name of something (real or abstract), e.g. 'house', 'door', 'idea', 'intelligence'.

2 Nominative case: the most important functions are (i) as subject of a sentence, and (ii) as complement after the verb 'to be'. Nominative means 'naming' (nomino 'I name'). In Latin, the subject of a sentence is 'in the verb', e.g.

habeō means 'I have' habet means 'he/she/it has'

If one wants to 'name' the subject, it goes into the nom. case, e.g.

habeō serua 'I (the slave) have' habet serua 'she (the slave) has', 'the slave has' habet uir 'he (the man) has', 'the man has'

3 Accusative case: the most important function is as object of a verb. The acc. case denotes the person or thing on the receiving end of the action, e.g. 'the man bites the dog'. One may also look at it as limiting or defining the extent of the action, e.g. 'the man bites' (what does he bite? A bullet? A jam sandwich? No-) 'the dog'. So the accusative case can also limit or define the extent of a description, e.g. nūdus pedēs 'naked in respect of the feet', 'with naked feet'.

4 NB The verb 'to be' is NEVER followed by a direct object in the acc., but frequently by a 'complement', in the NOM. E.g. 'Phaedra is the daughter' Phaedra fīlia est. This is perfectly reasonable, since 'daughter' obviously describes Phaedra. They are both the same person, and will be in the same case.

5 Genitive case: this case expresses various senses of the English 'of'. Its root is the same as genitor, 'author', 'originator'; 'father'. Thus it denotes the idea 'belonging to' (possession), e.g. 'slave of Euclio', and origin, e.g. 'son of Euclio'. Cf. English 'dog's dinner' (= 'dinner of dog') and 'dogs' dinner' (= 'dinner of the dogs'), where dog's and dogs' are genitive forms.

Dative and ablative cases: these will only be used in very limited ways in the Text at the moment, but you should attempt to learn their forms now. Dative and ablative forms will appear in exercise work.

6 Word-order: the usual word-order in English for a simple sentence consisting of subject, verb and object is: (i) subject (ii) verb (iii) object, e.g. 'The man (subj.) bites (verb) the dog (obj.).'

In Latin the usual order is (i) subject (ii) object (iii) verb. See 1⁵ above and Reference Grammar W for a full discussion.

Singular and plural; masculine, feminine and neuter

As well as having 'case', nouns can be either singular (s.), when there will be one of the persons or things named, or plural (pl.), when there will be more than one. This feature is called the 'number' of a noun. Nouns also possess 'gender', i.e. are masculine (m.), feminine (f.) or neuter (n.).

1st declension nouns: seru-a ae 1 feminine (f.) 'slave-woman'

The pattern which nouns follow is called 'declension'. Nouns 'decline'.

Section 1A

Notes

- 1 Since it is only in special circumstances that Latin uses a word corresponding to 'the' and 'a', serua can mean 'slave-woman', 'the slave-woman', or 'a slave-woman'. The same applies to all nouns in Latin.
- 2 All 1st decl. nouns end in -a in the nom. s. This is called the 'ending', the rest of the noun is called the 'stem'. So the stem of serua is seru-, the ending -a. The same applies to all 1st decl. nouns. Cf. fīli-a, famili-a, Phaedr-a, Staphyl-a, aul-a, corōn-a, scaen-a.
- 3 Most 1st decl. nouns are f. in gender (common exceptions are e.g. agricol-a 'farmer', naut-a 'sailor', both m.).
- 4 Note ambiguities:
 - (a) seru-ae can be gen. s., dat. s., or nom. pl.
 - (b) seru-a is nom. s., but seru- \bar{a} = abl. s. (not ambiguous if you note vowel length carefully: -a nom. / - \bar{a} abl.)
 - (c) seru-īs can be dat. or abl. pl.
- 5 Nouns of this declension you should have learned are: famili-a 'household', fīli-a 'daughter', Phaedr-a 'Phaedra', seru-a 'slave-woman', Staphyl-a 'Staphyla', aul-a 'pot', corōn-a 'garland', scaen-a 'stage', 'scene'.
- 9 2nd decl. nouns: seru-us ī 2 masculine (m.) 'male slave'

	S.		pl.
nom.	séru-us séru-um	'male slave' 'male slave'	séru-ī séru-ōs	'male slaves'

gen.	séru-ī	'of the male slave'	seru-őrum	'of the male slaves'
dat.	séru-ō		séru-īs
abl.	séru-ō		séru-īs

Notes

- 1 The vocative case, used when addressing people (e.g. 'hello, Brutus'), ends in -e in the 2nd decl. m., e.g. 'you too, Brutus?' et tū, Brūte? (see 17A for full discussion).
- 2 Observe ambiguities:
 - (a) seru-ō can be dat. or abl. s.
 - (b) seru-īs can be dat. or abl. pl.
 - (c) seru-ī can be gen. s. or nom. pl.
 - (d) Watch -um endings of acc. s. and gen. pl.
- 3 The other noun of this decl. you should have learned is coqu-us 'cook'.

Exercises

- 1 Decline: coquus; aula; (optional: seruus, familia, corona, scaena).

- 3 Translate each sentence, then change noun(s) and verb to pl. or s. as appropriate. E.g. coquus seruam uocat: the cook calls the slave-girl. coquī seruās uocant.
 - (a) sum seruus.
 - (b) aulam portō.
 - (c) coronas habent.
 - (d) serua timet seruum.
 - (e) seruās uocātis.
 - (f) seruae aulās portant.
 - (g) cēlāmus aulās.
 - (h) seruās cēlant coquī.

Prepositions

Prepositions (praepositus 'placed in front') are the little words placed in front of nouns e.g. in 'into', ad 'towards' etc. Learn the following important prepositions.

in, ad + acc.

in 'into', 'onto', e.g. in scaenam intrat 'he enters onto (i.e. right onto) the stage' ad 'to(wards)' e.g. ad scaenam aulam portat 'he carries the pot towards (not necessarily onto) the stage'

Observe that the acc. denotes direction towards which something moves. Compare the next preposition.

in 'in', 'on', e.g. in scaenā est 'he is on the stage' Observe that in + abl. denotes position at.

Exercise

Write the Latin for: onto the stage; in the pot; onto the garlands; into the pots; in the household; towards the slave-woman; in the slaves; towards the daughter.

Translation hint

It is extremely important that Latin words be taken in the order in which they appear in a sentence, but that judgement about the final meaning of the sentence be suspended until all the necessary clues have been provided. Take, for example, the following sentences:

aulam igitur clam sub terrā cēlō

One should approach it as follows:

aulam 'pot': -am = accusative case, so something is happening to igitur 'therefore' (fixed) clam 'secretly' (fixed) sub 'underneath'

Section 1A

terrā 'earth', so probably 'underneath the earth' cēlō something to do with 'hide', person ending -ō, so 'I hide'. That gives us subject and verb; aulam must be object, so 'I hide the pot under the earth'. Add 'therefore' and 'secretly' in aptest place.

in aedīs intrant seruus et serua et nūptiās parant in 'in' or 'into', depending on case of following noun aedīs = plural, so 'house'. Accusative, so 'into the house' intrant = something to do with entering. -ant = 'they', so 'they enter' seruus = something to do with a slave. But -us shows subject, so the slave must be doing something. Can he be 'entering'? But intrant is plural, 'they enter'. Oh dear!

et 'and'. Ah. Perhaps another subject about to appear serua 'slave-woman', -a ending shows subject. Excellent: 'The slave and the slave-woman are entering into the house' et 'and'. More people entering? Or another clause?

nūptiās 'marriage-rites'. -ās shows object. So something being done to the marriage-rites parant: something about preparing. -ant shows 'they'. So 'they prepare the marriage-rites'. Presumably 'they' are the two slaves of the earlier clause. So 'The slave and slave-woman enter the house and prepare the marriage-rites.'

This is the best way to approach a Latin sentence. A number of the exercises will encourage you to do this kind of analysis.

Reading exercise

- 1 Read each of these sentences, then without translating, say what the subject of the second verb is (in Latin). Finally, translate each sentence into English.
 - seruus in scaenam intrat. coronas portat.
 - coqui in aedibus sunt. seruās uocant.
 - est in familia Euclionis serua. Staphyla est.
 - in scaenam intrat Dēmaenetus. aulam aurī plēnam habet.
 - coquus et serua clāmant. seruum enim timent.
- 2 Take each word as it comes and define its 'job' in the sentence (e.g. Dēmaenetus coquum . . . – Demaenetus is subject, so Demaenetus is doing something. coquum is object, so Demaenetus is doing something to a cook). Then add an appropriate verb in the right form (e.g. Demaenetus calls a cook-Dēmaenetus coquum uocat).

- aulam seruus . . .
- serua coronam, aulam seruus . . . 1
- seruās seruī . . .
- familia coquos . . .
- Lar seruos . . .
- aurum ego . . .
- Eucliō familiam . . .
- aulās aurī plēnās et coronās seruae . . .

- 3 Define subject, verb, object and prepositional phrases in the following passages and answer the questions:
 - And now the sun had stretched out all the hills, And now was dropped1 into the western bay; At last he rose, and twitched his mantle blue: Tomorrow to fresh woods and pastures new.

(Milton, Lycidas 190-3)

1 What 'was dropped'?

Still green1 with bays each ancient Altar stands, Above the reach of sacrilegious hands; Secure¹ from Flames, from Envy's fiercer rage, Destructive War, and all-involving Age. See from each clime the learn'd their incense bring! (Pope, Essay on Criticism 181-5)

1 What is 'green' and 'secure'?

- 4 With the help of the running vocabulary for 1A, work through the Latin passage 'Demaenetus . . .', following these steps:
 - As you meet each word, ask

(i) its meaning

(ii) its job in the sentence (i.e. subject or object? part of a phrase?). e.g.

Dēmaenetus coquos et tībīcinās uidet.

Demaenetus 'Demaenetus', subject; coquos 'cooks', object; et 'and' almost certainly joining something to coquos; tībīcinās 'pipegirls', object - part of a phrase coquos et tibicinas: uidet '(he) sees', verb: 'Demaenetus the cooks and pipe-girls (he) sees'.

- Next produce a version in good English, e.g. 'Demaenetus sees the cooks and pipe-girls'.
- When you have worked through the whole passage, go back to the Latin and read the piece aloud, taking care to phrase correctly, thinking through the meaning as you read.

Dēmaenetus coquos et tībīcinās uidet. ad nūptiās fīliae ueniunt. in aedīs Demaeneti intrant et nuptias parant. nunc aedes Demaeneti coquorum et tībīcinārum plēnae sunt. Dēmaenetus autem timet. aulam enim aurī plēnam habet. nam sī aula Dēmaenetī in aedibus est aurī plena, fūrēs ualdē timet Dēmaenetus. aulam Dēmaenetus cēlat. nunc aurum saluum est. nunc saluus Dēmaenetus. nunc salua aula. Lar enim aulam habet plēnam aurī. nunc prope Larem Dēmaenetī aula sub terrā latet. nunc igitur ad Larem appropinquat Dēmaenetus et supplicat. 'ō Lar, ego Dēmaenetus tē uocō. ō tūtēla meae familiae, aulam ad tē aurī plēnam portō. fīliae nūptiae sunt hodië. ego autem fürës timeö. nam aedës meae fürum plënae sunt. të 10 ōrō et obsecrō, aulam Dēmaenetī aurī plēnam seruā.'

English-Latin

Section 1A

Translate the Latin sentences into English. Then translate the English sentences into Latin, using the pattern of the Latin ones to help you arrange the word-order correctly.

- coquus aulam Demaeneti portat. The slave has the cooks' garlands.
- tū clāmās, ego autem aulās portō. The slave girl is afraid. Therefore I am calling the cook.
- cūr scaena plēna est seruorum? Why is the household full of cooks?
- (d) ego Lar tē uocō. cūr mē timēs? (It is) I, Phaedra (who)1 enter. Why are you (pl.) hiding the pot?
- sī aurum habet, Dēmaenetus timet. If they hide the pot, the slaves are afraid.
- coronas et aulas portant serui. (It is)1 a cook and a slave-girl Demaenetus is summoning.

11 3rd declension nouns (consonant stem): fur fur-is 3m. 'thief'

	5.		pl.
		'thief'		'thieves'
acc.	fűr-em	'thief'		'thieves'
		'of the thief'		'of thieves'
dat.	fūr-ī		fűr-ibus
abl.	fűr-e		fűr-ibus

NB. This is the standard pattern of endings for 3rd decl. nouns whose stems end in a consonant. There are, however, slight changes of pattern in nouns whose stem ends in the vowel-i- (the so-called 'i-stem' nouns) as follows.

12 3rd declension nouns (i-stem) aedis aed-is 3f. 'room', 'temple'; in plural 'temples', 'house'

nom. aéd-is
                     'room', 'temple'
 acc. aéd-em
                     'room', 'temple'
gen. aéd-is
                     'of the room', 'of the temple'
 dat. aéd-ī
 abl. aéd-e (aéd-ī)

                   'temples' / 'house'
gen. aéd-ium
                   'of temples' / 'of the house' aéd-ibus
 abl. aéd-ibus
```

Notes

1 aed-is in the s. means 'room', 'temple'; in the pl. usually 'house'.

Observe acc. pl. in -īs, gen. pl. in -ium, and alternative abl. s. in -ī. This dominance of -i- is the mark of i-stem nouns of the third declension. In fact originally all the cases would have had the -i-, since it is part of the stem. The s. of turris 3f. 'tower', which keeps the old forms even in classical Latin, will demonstrate this: turri-s, turri-m, turri-s, turrī, turrī.

Note that we indicate in the grammar sections which nouns and adjectives are i-stem, but for practical reasons we present the endings as for consonant stems, i.e. aed-is, not (the technically correct) aedi-s.

13 Stems and endings of 3rd decl. nouns

1 3rd decl. nouns have a great variety of endings in the nom. s. What unites them all is that their gen. s. has the same ending, e.g. Eucliō Eucliōn-is, senex sen-is. You must therefore learn both the decl. and the gen. s. as well as the gender of these 3rd decl. nouns, i.e. not aedis 'temple', pl. 'house', but aedis aed-is 3f. 'temple', pl. 'house'.

The gen. s. is doubly important, because it gives you the STEM OF THE NOUN to which the endings are added to make the declension. Thus when you have learned senex sen-is 3m., you know that the stem is sen-. IT IS THE GEN. S. WHICH GIVES YOU THIS.

3 You also need to be able to work back from the stem to the nom. s. in order to find the word in a dictionary. E.g. if you see pācem in the text, you must be able to deduce that the nom. s. is pāx, otherwise you will not be able to look the word up. Observe the following common patterns of CONSONANT STEMS:

(a) stems ending in -l- or -r- keep l and r in the nom., e.g. consul-is→nom. consul 'consul' fūr-is→nom. fūr 'thief'

(b) stems ending in -d- or -t- end in -s in the nom., e.g. ped-is→nom. pēs 'foot' dōt-is→nom. dōs 'dowry'

(c) stems ending in -c- or -g- end in -x in the nom., e.g.

rēg-is→nom. rēx 'king'

duc-is→nom. dux 'general'

(d) stems ending in -ōn or -iōn end in -ō or -iō in the nom., e.g.

Scīpiōn-is→nom. Scīpiō 'Scipio' praedōn-is→nom. praedō 'pirate'

Exercises

1 Decline: honor, für, (optional: Eucliö (s.), Lar, aedis).

2 Name the case of each of these words: Euclionis, fürem, aedium, honores, Lar, senum, aedīs, honorem, fūr, Laris.

3 Translate each sentence, then change noun(s) and verb(s) to s. or pl. as appropriate, e.g. fürem seruus timet - the slave is afraid of a thief - füres seruī timent.

deinde thesaurum senis für uidet.

Lar honorem non habet.

igitur senem deus non curat.

quare tamen supplicatis, senes?

unguentum senex tandem possidet.

in aedibus senex nunc habitat.

für aulam aurī plēnam semper amat.

honorem tamen non habet für.

quare in aedis non intras, senex?

seruam clam amat senex.

1st/2nd declension adjectives: mult-us a um 'much', 'many'

m. nom. múlt-us múlt-a múlt-um acc. múlt-um múlt-am múlt-um múlt-ī múlt-ae múlt-ī dat. múlt-ō múlt-ae múlt-ō abl. múlt-ō múlt-ā múlt-ō pl. m. nom. múlt-ī múlt-ae múlt-a acc. mult-os múlt-ās múlt-a gen. mult-orum mult-ārum mult-ōrum dat. múlt-īs múlt-īs múlt-īs abl. múlt-īs múlt-īs múlt-īs

Notes

1 Adjectives (from the stem adiectus 'added to') give additional information about a noun, e.g. fast horse, steep hill (adjectives are often called 'describing words').

2 Since nouns can be m., f. or n., adjectives need to have m., f. and n. forms so that they can 'AGREE' grammatically with the noun they describe. So adjectives must agree with nouns in gender.

3 Adjectives must also 'AGREE' with nouns in number, s. or pl.

4 Finally, they must 'AGREE' with nouns in case (nom., acc., gen., dat. or abl.). A noun in the acc. can only be described by an adjective in the acc.

5 In summary, if a noun is to be described by an adjective in Latin, the adjective will have to agree with it in gender, number and case. Here are three examples:

'I see many temples' - 'temples' are the object, and plural; the word we shall use in Latin is aedīs, which is f. So if 'many' is to agree with 'temples', it will need to be acc., pl. and f. Answer: multās aedīs.

'He shows much respect' - 'respect' is object, s. The word we shall use, honor honor-is, is m. So 'much' will have to be acc. s. m. Answer: multum honorem.

'I hear the voice of many slaves' - 'slaves' is gen. and pl.; the word we shall use, serua, is f. So 'many' will be gen. pl. f. Answer: multārum seruārum.

6 It is worth emphasising here that an adjective does not necessarily describe a noun it is standing next to. It describes a noun it agrees with in case, number and gender, e.g.:

multum fīlia servat thēsaurum. multum = acc. s. m.; fīlia = nom. s. f.; thēsaurum = acc. s. m. I.e. 'It's a great deal of treasure the daughter keeps.'

nūllum fūrum consilium placet. nūllum = acc. s. m. or nom./acc. s. n.; fūrum = gen. pl.; consilium = nom./acc. s. n. I.e. 'No scheme of thieves is pleasing.'

multus usually precedes its noun, e.g. multī seruī 'many slaves'. When it follows its noun it is emphatic, e.g. seruos multos habeo 'I really do have lots of slaves'.

7 Adjectives can be used on their own as nouns, when gender will indicate meaning, e.g. bonus (m.) 'a good man', bonum (n.) 'a good thing'.

2nd declension neuter nouns: somni-um ī 2n. 'dream'

gen.	sómni-um sómni-um sómni or sómni-i sómni-ö sómni-ö	'dream' 'dream' 'of the dream'	pl. sómni-a sómni-a somni-órum sómni-īs sómni-īs	'dreams' 'dreams' 'of dreams'
------	--	--------------------------------	--	-------------------------------

Notes

- There is only one neuter noun type of the 2nd decl.; they all end in -um in nom. s. Cf. aur-um 'gold', unguent-um 'ointment'.
- 2 As with other neuters, the nom. and acc. s. and pl. are the same (see 26).
- 3 Do not confuse the neuter s. forms with the acc. s. of 2nd decl. m. nouns like seru-us (seru-um) or gen. pl. of 3rd decl. nouns like aedis (aedium). Be sure that you learn nouns like somnium as type 2 neuter.
- 4 As with all neuters, there is a danger of confusing the pl. forms in -a with 1st decl. f. nouns like serua.
- 5 Note the gen. s. somnī or somniī. Nouns of the 2nd decl. ending in -ius (e.g. fīlius 'son') usually have gen. s. in -ī (e.g. fīlī) and nom. pl. always in -iī (e.g. fīliī).
- 6 Gen., dat., abl. s. and pl. endings are the same as for seruus (9).

Exercises

1 Here to learn is a list of 2nd decl. neuter nouns like somnium:

exiti-um ī 2n. 'death', 'destruction' ingeni-um ī 2n. 'talent', 'ability' perīcul-um ī 2n. 'danger'

- 2 Pick out the gen. pls. from the following list. Say what nouns they come from, with what meaning (e.g. periculorum = gen. pl. of pericul-um ī danger): honorum, ingenium, aedibus, fūrum, exitio, seruum, unguentorum, aurum, senum, thēsaurīs.
- 3 Pick out, and give the meanings of, the pl. nouns in the following list: scaena, serua, ingenia, familia, cūra, unguentīs, fīliā, somnia, corona, perīcula.

2nd declension noun (irregular): de-us ī 2m. 'god'

	S.		pl.
nom.	dé-us	'god'	dī	'gods'
acc.	dé-um	'god'	déōs	'gods'
gen.	dé-ī	'of the god'	de-őrum (dé-um)	'of the gods'
dat.	dé-ō		dīs
abl.	dé-ō		dīs

Vocatives

The vocative case (uocō 'I call') is used when addressing a person. Its form is the same as the nominative in all nouns, except 2nd declension m., where -us of nom. s. becomes -e (e.g. Dēmaenete 'Demaenetus!', serue 'O slave') and the -ius of nom. s. becomes -ī (e.g. fīlius 'son'; fīlī 'son!').

NB. The vocative s. of meus 'my' is mī, e.g. mī fīlī 'O my son'.

Apposition 17B

Consider this sentence:

sum Dēmaenetus, Euclionis auus 'I am Demaenetus, Euclio's grandfather'

The phrase Euclionis auus gives more information about Demaenetus. It is said to be 'in apposition' to Dēmaenetus (from adpositus 'placed near'). Note that auus, the main piece of information, is the same case as Dēmaenetus.

Note

Appositional phrases may be added to a noun in any case. E.g. sum seruus Dēmaenetī senis 'I am the slave of Demaenetus the old man'. senis (gen.) is in apposition to Dēmaenetī (gen.).

Exercises

1 Attach the correct form of multus to these nouns (in ambiguous cases, give all possible alternatives): cūrās, aurum, fūrēs, senem, honōris, aedem, seruōrum, senum, aedīs, corōnae, (optional: seruum, unguenta, aedis, familiam, aedium, honor, aedēs).

2 Pair the given form of multus with the nouns with which it can agree:

multus: senex, cūra, Larem, familiae, seruus multī: honor, aedēs, Laris, senēs, seruī multīs: honoribus, aedīs, cūram, seruum, deum, senibus, aurum multās: senis, honorēs, aedīs, cūram, familiās multae: seruae, aedī, cūram, senēs, dī multa: aedēs, unguenta, senem, cūra, coronārum (optional: multos: aedīs, unguentum, cūrās, seruos, fūrēs multō: aurum, Larem, cūram, honōrī, aedem multorum: aedium, unguentorum, seruum, senum, deorum, coronārum multārum: fūrum, aurum, honorem, seruārum, aedium)

- 3 Translate into Latin: many slave-girls (nom.); of much respect; of many garlands; much gold; many an old man (acc.); of many thieves; many old men (acc.).
- 4 Translate these sentences:
 - (a) multī fūrēs sunt in aedibus.
 - multās cūrās multī senēs habent.
 - (c) multae seruae plēnae sunt cūrārum.
 - (d) multum aurum Euclio, multas aulas aurī plēnas habet.
 - seruos senex habet multos. (See 146.)
- 5 Translate these sentences:
 - (a) nulla potentia longa est. (Ovid)
 - (b) uīta nec bonum¹ nec malum¹ est. (Seneca)
 - nobilitas sola est atque unica uirtus. (Juvenal)
 - longa est uīta sī plēna est. (Seneca)

Optional exercises

1 Identify the case (or cases, where ambiguities exist) of the following words, say what they mean, and then turn s. into pl. and pl. into s.: seruae, honori, thēsaurīs, familiā, deum, fīliā, dīs, corona, senum.

2 Give the declension and case of each of the following words: thesaurum, honorum, deorum, seruarum, aedium.

3 Case work

Group the following words by case (i.e. list all nominatives, accusatives, genitives etc.). When you have done that, identify s. and pl. within each group: Euclionem, senī, thēsauro, fīliae, familia, deī, corona, scaenās, dī, aedēs, honoribus, seruārum, multīs.

Identify the following noun forms by showing:

what case they are whether s. or pl. their nom. s. form, gen. s. form and gender their meaning e.g. senem is acc. s. of senex sen-is, m. 'old man'. Remember ambiguities!

- (i) 3rd declension: aedēs, patris, senibus, honorum, senem, aedibus, honorī, sene, aedium, honoris, senēs, aedīs
- (ii) 1st declension f.: Phaedrae, aulārum, coronās, scaenā, cūrīs, fīliārum, familiae, Staphylam, seruīs, aulam, coronae, scaenās
- (iii) 2nd declension m.: seruī, coquus, thēsaurum, seruīs, coquī, seruō, deōs, thēsaurīs, coquō, deī
- (iv) Various declensions: sene, seruīs, patris, coquīs, honorī, aedīs, aulārum, honorum, deum, seruārum

Reading exercises

1 English and Latin

Pick out subject(s), verb(s) and object(s) in the following English sentences. Identify also adjectives, and say with what nouns they agree.

- In the long echoing streets the laughing dancers throng. (Keats)
- And the long carpets rose along the gusty floor. (Keats)

- 2 In each of these sentences, the verb comes first or second. Say in each case whether the subject is s. or pl., then, moving on, say in order as they come whether the following words are subjects or objects of the verb. Next, translate into English. Finally read out the sentences in Latin with the correct phrasing.
 - clāmant seruī, senex, seruae.
 - dat igitur honorem multum Phaedra.
 - nunc possidet Lar aedīs.
 - amant dī multum honorem.
 - dat aurum multās cūrās.
 - habitant quoque in aedibus seruī.
 - est aurum in aulā multum.
 - timent autem fūrēs multī senēs.
 - quare intrant senex et seruus in scaenam?
 - tandem explicat Lar cūrās senis.
- 3 In order of appearance, translate each word and say whether it is the subject or the object or genitive. Then supply a suitable verb in the correct person and translate the sentence into English.
 - senem seruus . . .
 - aedīs deus . . .
 - honores Lar . . .
 - (d) für aurum . . .
 - Euclionis filiam dī . . .
 - fīliae senum honorēs . . .
 - aedem deus . . .
 - unguenta dī . . .
 - Larem Phaedra, Phaedram Lar . . . 1
 - seruos Phaedra et seruas . . .
- 1 The verb must be s. 28

- 4 Take the Latin as it comes and say, as you translate, what the function of each word is (subject, object, verb etc.), grouping words into phrases where necessary. Translate into English. Then read out the Latin correctly phrased, thinking through the meaning as you read.
 - aulās enim habet multās Eucliō senex.
 - aedīs fūrum plēnās multī timent senēs.
 - thēsaurum Euclionis clam uidet serua.
 - nūllus est in aedibus seruus.
 - Phaedram, filiam Euclionis, et Staphylam, filiae Euclionis seruam, Lar amat.
 - deinde Eucliö aulam, quod füres ualde timet, celat.
 - mē igitur Phaedra amat, Phaedram ego.
 - nam aurum Eucliö multum habet, coronas multas, multum unguentum.
 - senex autem füres, quod multum habet aurum, ualde timet.
 - multum seruī unguentum ad Larem, multās coronās portant.

Reading exercise / Test exercise

Read through this passage, as for Reading Exercise no. 4 in 1A (p. 16). For an adjective, say (i) what it belongs with (if it follows its noun) (ii) what sort of noun you will expect with it (if it precedes). Use the running vocabulary for 1B for any words you do not know. At the end, after translating the passage, read it out in Latin, correctly phrased.

Lar in scaenam intrat. deus est Euclionis familiae. seruat Lar sub terra thēsaurum Dēmaenetī. multus in aulā thēsaurus est. ignōrat autem dē thēsaurō Eucliō, quod Larem non cūrat. nam nūllum dat unguentum, nūllās coronās, honorem nūllum. Deliciae Latinae

These sections, which will occur at the end of Grammar and Exercise sections, will consist of a mixture of hints on word-building, word exercises, Latin words and phrases in everyday use, and easy pieces of original Latin for translation. The title means 'Latin delights'.

NB. The vocabulary help in Deliciae Latinae sections is aimed at helping you to translate as quickly and easily as possible. Consequently, we do not always give full grammatical information about words.

Derivations

The Roman Empire extended over modern Italy, Spain, Portugal and France, all of whose languages are descended directly from Latin. Britain was part of the Roman Empire, but it was overrun by Anglo-Saxons in the years following the end of Roman rule, so that there was no major Latin influence on the language at this stage - Anglo-Saxon was the predominant tongue. Latin was, however, still the language of the church in Britain so all interaction was not wholly lost. (Bede (Baeda), the eighth-century monk from Jarrow near Newcastle upon Tyne, wrote his history of the English church in Latin.) The turning-point for the English language came in 1066 when the Norman Duke William the Conqueror took England. French-speaking kings ruled England for some 300 years (till Agincourt (1415), when English again became the official language of royalty). The Latin-based French language became incorporated into Middle English, adding enormous richness to it, e.g. Middle English gives us 'kingly', French/Latin adds 'regal', 'royal', 'sovereign'. It is largely through French that English has the Latin component that it does.

Section 1B

Consequently, Latin is very useful to anyone who wants to learn the Romance languages (i.e. languages descended from the language of the Romans), and vice versa knowledge of Romance languages can help you to understand Latin. Four hints:

- Identify the stem of the Latin word as well as its nom. s. form, e.g. senex gives us 'senile' (from the Latin adjective senīlis, formed from sen- the stem of senex).
- Many English words ending in -ion come from Latin via French.
- Many English words ending in -ate, -ance, -ent, -ence come from Latin, again via French.
- English derivatives have 'j' and 'v' where the Latin words from which they come have i and u used as consonants (i.e. before or between vowels). So Iānuārius produces 'January' and uideō produces 'video'. The reverse process will help you to see whether a word has a Latin root, e.g. 'juvenile' comes from Latin iuuenīlis.

Note

English has taken some of its Latin-based words direct from Latin rather than through an intermediary language such as French, e.g. 'wine' from uīnum, 'wall' from uallum (see Appendix p. 554). Other English words look similar to Latin not because they have been taken from Latin, but because both English and Latin share a common linguistic ancestor, Indo-European, the vocabulary of which is preserved in different ways in the various derivative tongues. Thus the Indo-European word for 'two', which can be reconstructed as *duō, emerges in English as two, German zwei, Sanskrit dvau, and Latin as duo (whence French deux, Italian due, Spanish dos).

Word-building

The stem of one word gives the clue to the meaning of many other (a) Stems words, e.g. seru- in the form seru-us or seru-a means 'slave'; as a verb, with a verb-ending, seruiō, it means 'I am a slave to'.

coqu- in the noun form coquus = 'a/the cook'; in the verb form coquō='I cook' aed- in the form aedes = 'a/the house'; with the suffix -fico (='make'): aedifico = 'I build'; in the form aedīlis, it means 'aedile', a Roman state official originally with a particular responsibility for building

(b) Prefixes A 'prefix' (prae 'in front of', fixus 'fixed') is a word fixed in front of another. Most prepositions (see 10), e.g. in 'into', 'in', 'on', ad 'towards' etc., can also be used as prefixes, and as such slightly alter the meaning of the 'root' word to which they are fixed, e.g.

> root word sum 'I am': adsum 'I am near'; īnsum 'I am in' root word portō 'I carry': importō 'I carry in'; apportō 'I carry to' (observe that inp- becomes imp- and adp- becomes app-)

Note the following prepositions which are commonly used as prefixes:

> cum (con-) 'with' prae 'before, in front of, at the head of' post 'after'

Exercise

Split the following Latin words up into prefix and root, and say what they might mean: conuocō, inhabitō, inuocō, praeuideō, comportō, praesum, posthabeō.

(c) Verb-stems different from the present stem

As you will soon discover, Latin verbs have a number of different 'stems'. So far you have learnt the present stem, e.g. uoc-ō 'I call'. But most 1st conjugation verbs have another stem in -āt- i.e. uoc-āt-. This stem was very fruitful in forming other Latin words, and so French words, and so English words, particularly those in -ate or -ation. Thus vocation, convocation, invocate etc.

Exercise

Give an English word in -ate or -ation from the following Latin words, and say what it means: supplico, explico, importo, do, habito.

uideo has another stem, uis-, and possideo has possess- - giving us what English nouns, by the addition of what letters?

Word exercises

1 Give English words connected with the following Latin words: familia, corona, scaena, timeo, deus, multus, uideo.

2 With what Latin words are the following connected? pecuniary, honorific, amatory, thesaurus, porter, clamorous, filial, edifice (Latin ae becomes e), unguent, furtive, servile, nullify.

Everyday Latin

We use Latin words and phrases every day of our lives:

a.m. = ante meridiem. What does ante mean?

p.m. = post meridiem. What does post mean? What is a post mortem? What is a post scriptum?

iānua = 'door'. Iānus (Janus) was a Roman god who had two faces, so that he could look out and in like a door and, like the month January, forward to the new year and back to the old tandem = 'at length', just like the bicycle made for two (introduced originally as a learned joke; the Latin word was never used of space)

uox (= 'voice') populī, uox deī - meaning? Cf. agnus ('lamb') deī

Frequently in English we give Latin words their correct Latin plurals, e.g. we talk of termini, pl. of the Latin terminus. What would you say of someone who gave the plural of 'ignoramus' as 'ignorami' (ignor-ō 1)?

Consider the following plurals: data ('given things'), agenda ('things to be done'), media ('things in the middle'). They are neuter plurals, declining like multus, directly from Latin. What are their singular forms?

Real Latin

et (Deus) ait (said) 'ego sum Deus patris tuī, Deus (of) Abraham, Deus (of) Isaac, et Deus (of) Jacob.' (Exodus 3.6) 'ego sum quī (who) sum.' (Exodus 3.14)

Conversational Latin

Contrary to popular belief, Latin always has been a spoken as well as a written language. Most of our texts from ancient times, of course, reflect the literary, written, form. But in Plautus, Terence and the letters of Cicero we do hear the voice of Romans. Here are some common conversational gambits:

saluē or saluus sīs or auē (or hauē) 'Hello!' (lit. 'Greetings', 'May you be safe', 'Hail!') ualē 'Goodbye!' (lit. 'Be strong') sīs or sī placet or nisi molestum est or grātum erit sī . . . or amābō tē 'Please' (lit. 'If you will', 'If it pleases', 'If it's no trouble', 'It would be nice if . . .', 'I will like you (if you . . .)') grātiās tibi agō 'Thank you' (lit. 'I give thanks to you') ut uales? or quid agis? or quid fit? 'How are you?' (lit. 'Are you strong?', 'What are you doing?', 'What is happening?') est or est ita or etiam or ita or ita uero or sane or certe 'Yes' (lit. 'It is', 'It is so', 'Even', 'Thus', 'Thus indeed', 'Certainly', 'Surely') non or non ita or minime 'No' (lit. 'Not', 'Not so', 'Least') age or agedum 'Come on' rēctē 'Right' (lit. 'Correctly') malum 'Damn!' (lit. 'A bad thing') dī tē perdant! 'Damn you!' (Lit. 'May the gods destroy you') īnsānum bonum 'Damned good' (Lit. 'A crazy good thing')

Latin conversation did not die out with the end of the Roman Empire. Erasmus of Rotterdam, the great Dutch humanist, originally wrote his Colloquia Familiāria (first published in 1518) partly as an aid to teaching Latin conversation. The first 'Colloquy' introduces the pupil to various modes of greeting. These are the formulae recommended to lovers ('Greetings my . . .'):

mea Cornēliola ('little Cornelia') ('life') mea uita mea lūx ('light') meum dēlicium ('darling', 'delight') meum suāuium ('sweetheart', lit. 'kiss') ('honey') saluē mel meum mea uoluptās ūnica ('only joy') ('sweetheart', lit. 'little heart') meum corculum ('hope') mea spēs meum sölätium ('comfort') meum decus ('glory')

Grammar and exercises for 1C

Present imperative active 1st and 2nd conjugation

1st conj. 2nd conj. 'have!' 2nd s. ámā 'love!' hábē habé-te 'love!' 2nd pl. amā-te 'have!'

Notes

1 These forms express a command in Latin.

2 The understood subject is 'you' (s. or pl.).

3 The s. form is the bare stem of the verb; the pl. adds -te.

Exercises

1 Construct and translate the s. and pl. imperatives of these verbs: timeo, rogo, taceō, cōgitō, moneō, cūrō, possideō, (optional: habeō, stō, explicō, cēlō, amō, uideō, maneō).

2 Translate into English: dā coronam!; portā aquam!; in aedibus manēte!; tacē!; thēsaurum seruā!; monēte fīliam!

3 Translate into Latin: see! (pl.); ask Euclio! (s.); be quiet! (pl.); hide the pot! (pl.).

eō 'I go', 'I come' (irregular): present indicative active

'I go', 'I come', 'I am going/coming', 'I do go/come' 1st s. e-ō 'you go', 'you come' etc. 2nd s. 1-s

3rd s. i-t

1st pl. i-mus

2nd pl. 1-tis

3rd pl. é-u-nt

Imperatives

2nd s. ī 'go!' etc

2nd pl. i-te

Notes

1 The stem of the verb is simply i- (as shown by the imperative s.).

2 There are many compound words based on eō, e.g. adeō 'I approach', 'I go up to' (cf. ad 'towards', 'near'); see learning vocabulary for 1C.

Exercises

1 Translate into English and then turn s. into pl. and vice versa: ī; eunt; ītis; eō; it; īmus; exītis; abīmus; abītis; redeunt; redītis; īte; redeō; exeunt.

2 Translate into Latin: we are going away; they return; go away! (s.); you (pl.) are approaching; she is coming out; I am going; go back! (pl.); you (s.) go.

20 1st and 2nd declension adjectives: meus, tuus me-us a um 'my', 'mine', and tu-us a um 'your(s)' decline exactly like multus a um, and agree with their nouns in the same way. Observe that tu-us means 'your(s)' when you are one person.

NB. The vocative of meus is mī (cf. 17A), e.g. mī fīlī 'O my son'.

21 1st and 2nd declension adjectives: miser miser-a miser-um

NB. Arrows indicate that the form shown is the same for all genders.

Exercises

1 Add the appropriate forms of meus and tuus to the following nouns (see 20) and say what case they are: igne; aedīs; honōris; familiā; oculōrum; dominō; aquae; Eucliōnem; senex.

2 Add the appropriate form of miser to the following nouns and say what case they are: Euclioni; Phaedra; deus; filiam; aedibus; domini; seruarum; coquis; senum.

22 Personal pronouns: ego 'I' and tū 'you'

nom.	égo 'I'	tū 'you'
acc.	mē	tē
gen.	méī	túī
dat.	míhi (mī)	tíbi
abl.	mē	tē

Notes

1 tū is used when one person is being referred to (cf. tuus).

2 When 'I' or 'you' are subject of a verb, we have seen that Latin does not need to express them separately, since the verb itself indicates the person by its personal endings -ō, -s, -t etc. But Latin does use ego, tū when the speaker wants to stress the identity of the person talking or draw a specific contrast between one person and another. E.g.

(a) ego Euclionem amo, tū Phaedram 'I like Euclio, whereas you like Phaedra'

(b) ego deum cūrō, tū senem uexās 'I care for the god, you simply annoy the old man'

It is a matter of emphasis, especially when a contrast is involved.

3 meī and tuī are 'objective' genitives, i.e. 'of me', 'of you' means 'directed at me/you'. For example, amor tuī means 'love of/for you' in the sense 'love directed at you'. The idea 'belonging to me/you' is performed by the adjectives meus, tuus e.g. pater meus = 'my father', i.e. 'the father belonging to me'.

Exercises

- 1 Translate these sentences, then change nouns and their adjectives and verb to the s. or pl. as appropriate:
 - (a) manent in dominī meī aedibus neque seruae neque seruī.
 - (b) malī senis mala serua dominum meum uexat.
 - (c) tuus uīcīnus uīcīnum meum uidet.
 - (d) senis miserī seruus in aedibus numquam manet.
 - (e) seruae miserae ad Larem meum numquam adeunt neque supplicant.
 - (f) dominus malus seruās statim uerberat miserās.
- 2 In these sentences, most adjectives are not directly next to the noun they qualify. Read through each sentence, predicting the gender, number and case of the noun you await (where the adjective comes first) and indicating when the adjective is 'solved'. Then translate.
 - (a) malus igitur senex non multum habet honorem.
 - (b) meā est tuus ignis in aulā.
 - (c) meis tamen in aedibus multi habitant patres.
 - (d) malos enim senes Lar non amat meus.
 - (e) meusne tuum seruat pater ignem? (-ne = ?)
- 3 Translate these sentences:
 - (a) sõla pecūnia rēgnat. (Petronius)
 - (b) uēritās numquam perit. (Seneca)
 - (c) semper auarus eget. (Horace)
 - (d) non deterret sapientem mors. (Cicero)

23 Prepositions

Note that \bar{a} , ab '(away) from' and \bar{e} , ex 'out of', 'from' take the ablative (cf. in + abl. at 10).

NB. ab and ex are the forms used before following vowels, e.g. ab aulā, ex igne.

Exercise

Translate into Latin: out of the water; into the eye; away from the fire; towards the masters; away from the house; onto the stage (optional: out of the pot; towards the thieves; from the old men; into the house.)

Reading exercises

- 1 Take the Latin as it comes and, as you translate, say what each word is doing in the sentence, taking care to ascribe adjectives to the correct nouns (if they follow them) or to predict the number, gender and case of the noun (if the adjective precedes). Then supply a suitable verb in the correct person and translate into correct English.
 - (a) uīcīnum senex miser . . .
 - (b) dominus enim meus tuum ignem . . .
 - (c) neque ego meum neque tū tuum seruum . . . 1
 - (d) deinde mē seruī malī . . .
 - (e) seruos malos uicinus meus . . .

 - (i) oculos meos serua tua semper . . .
 - (j) quare aurum et unguentum et coronas Euclio miser numquam . . .?

- 2 Analyse noun-functions, adjectives, and verbs:
 - (a) Close up the casement, draw the blind,
 Shut out that stealing moon,
 She wears too much the guise she wore
 Before our lutes were strewn
 With years-deep dust, and names we read
 On a white stone were hewn. (Thomas Hardy)
 - (b) Hail, native language, that by sinews weak
 Didst move my first endeavouring tongue to speak,
 And mad'st imperfect words with childish trips,
 Half unpronounced, slide through my infant lips . . .

Prefixes

in-can = 'into', 'in' (e.g. ineō 'I go in', īnsum 'I am in'), but it can equally well be a negative, e.g. $\bar{i}ns\bar{a}nus = in + s\bar{a}nus$ 'not sane', 'mad'

 \bar{e} , ex usually means 'out of', 'out', e.g. exit 'he goes out', exstingu \bar{o} 'I put out', expello 'I push out'

 \bar{a} , ab = 'away (from)', e.g. $abe\bar{o}$ 'I go away'

re- (only used as a prefix) = 'back', 'again', e.g. redit 'he returns'. (Observe that re- becomes red- before vowels)

2 Give English words, with meanings, formed from the following stems mans-(maneō); monit- (moneō). Use prefixes as necessary.

These are from a collection of dicta Catōnis 'Sayings of Cato', (= Marcus Cato, 234–149 B.C.), written in the third or fourth century A.D. but ascribed to that grand old man who epitomised Roman wisdom and tradition to later generations. They were firm favourites from the Middle Ages till the seventeenth century in England.

Grammar and exercises for 1D

24 Present indicative active (3rd conjugation): dīcō 'I speak', 'I say'

1st s. díc-ō 'I say'
2nd s. díc-i-s 'you say'
3rd s. díc-i-t 'he/she/it says'
1st pl. díc-i-mus 'we say'

2nd pl. díc-i-tis 'you (pl.) say'
3rd pl. díc-u-nt 'they say'

Imperatives

2nd s. dīc 'say!' (irregular) 2nd pl. dīc-i-te 'say!'

Notes

- 1 Note the key vowel in the 3rd conj. the short -i- throughout (cf. amō, habeō). This -i- is not part of the stem in the way that -e- in habeō (stem habe-) was.
- 2 Observe that the 3rd pl. is dīc-u-nt.
- 3 A similar verb to this is dūcō 'I lead', 'I take'.
- 4 Normal imperatives of 3rd conj. verbs are -e, -ite (see 36). Note that the vowels in these endings are all short. Cf. imperatives of audiō in 25.

25 Present indicative active (4th conjugation): audiō 'I hear', 'I listen to'

1st s. aúdi-ō 'I hear'

2nd s. aúdī-s 'you hear'

3rd s. aúdi-t 'he/she/it hears'

1st pl. audī-mus 'we hear'

2nd pl. audī-tis 'you (pl.) hear'

Imperatives

2nd s. aúdī 'listen!'
2nd pl. audī-te 'listen!'

3rd pl. aúdi-u-nt 'they hear'

Notes

1 The key vowel in the 4th conj. is -i-, which follows the same pattern of long and short as the -e- of the 2nd conj., and is, like that, part of the stem. So -i- appears throughout (contrast the -i- in dīcō).

Section 1D 28

2 Observe the 3rd pl. in i-unt; cf. dīc-unt.

Exercises

1 Translate into Latin: she says; they are leading; we hear; we say; you (pl.) hear; speak! (s.); listen! (pl.); lead! (pl.); you (s.) are saying; he hears; they are listening.

2 Identify the conjugation (1, 2, 3 or 4) of the following verbs and translate them: cūrō, cēlat, habētis, dūcunt, rogās, possidēmus, audiō, (optional:

iubētis, supplico, clāmāmus).

3 Translate and turn s. into pl. and vice versa: dīcitis, audiunt, supplicāmus, audīs, dīcō, dūcimus, audīmus, clāmant, tacēs, (optional: rogat, dīcit, cōgitō, manētis, amātis, dūcunt, moneō, uocās, dūcis).

Notes

- 1 All n. nouns have the same forms for the nom. and acc. in both s. and pl. (-a); cf. 15. Only the context will tell you whether they are subject or object. Note that if verb is singular then a neuter pl. must be the object; if verb is plural, then neuter s. must be the object.
- 2 All 3rd decl. nouns in -men are neuter, and follow the pattern of nomen.
- 3 nomen is a consonant-stem noun. There are also 3rd decl. neuter i-stems. You will meet these later.

NB. We have already met miser which, apart from the nom. s. m., declines like multus on the stem miser- (21). pulcher is identical, except that it declines on the stem pulchr-.

28 2nd decl. nouns: puer puer-ī 2m. 'boy', uir uir-ī 2m. 'man', culter cultr-ī 2m. 'knife' culter cultr-ī 2m. 'knife'1

abl.	cúltr-ō	cúltr-īs

¹ This noun declines exactly like seru-us on the stem cultr-. Only nom. s. m. is different. Cf. pulcher (27).

Section 1D 32

Exercises

1 Give the correct form of the adjectives magnus, miser, pulcher for these cases of nomen: nomen, nominis, nomine, nomina, nominum.

2 Give the correct form of pulcher and miser to describe each of these nouns (e.g. senem acc. s. m., so senem pulchrum): uxōrum, sorōribus, uirō, uxōris, fēminae, frātrī, aedīs, Larem, seruā, aedēs, fēminīs, dominī, seruōs.

Optional exercise

Add the appropriate form of miser, then of pulcher, to the following words and translate (e.g. Eucliönem = acc. s. m. – miserum/pulchrum 'unhappy/ handsome Euclio'): sorore, dīuitis, uir, uxōrī, fēminae, puellīs, fīliī, uīcīnō, Larem, frātrum, seruā.

29 Interrogative pronoun/adjective quis/quī, quis/quae, quid/quod 'who?', 'which?', 'what?'

Notes

1 'Interrogative' means 'asking a question'.

2 Observe that the endings are a mixture of 2nd and 3rd declension. You will meet this again (it is called the 'pronominal' declension).

3 Adjective and pronoun are identical except for nom. s. and the acc. s. n.

4 For the pronoun use, cf. 'who is calling?' quis uocat? 'what do I see?' quid uideō?; for the adjective 'what man is it?' quī (quis) uir est?, 'what gold do I see?' quod aurum uideō?

Exercises

1 Translate into Latin the underlined words with the appropriate form of quis or qui+ noun. You will need to ask whether the question word is a pronoun or an adjective, and then define its case.

- (a) Whose (s. m.) are these books?
- (b) Which women do we see?
- (c) What is this?
- (d) What name is this?
- (e) Whom (m. s.) do you hate most?
- (f) What woman's are these?
- (g) Whom (f. s.) should we persecute?
- (h) Which man is guilty?

30 domus 'house', 'home'

domus used with prepositions means 'house'. But when it means 'home' it is used without the preposition in the following ways: domum '(to) home'; domī 'at home'; domō 'from home'. Cf. aedēs which means only 'house': in aedīs 'into the house', in aedībus 'in the house'.

31 satis 'enough', nimis 'too much', 'too many'

Both these words control nouns in the gen. case (the so-called 'partitive' genitive indicating part of a whole), e.g. satis pecūniae 'enough (of) money', nimis honōris 'too much (of) respect'. satis and nimis are fixed in form.

32 -que

-que means 'and' and either (i) links the noun it is joined to with the previous word e.g. seruum patremque 'slave and father' or (ii) in poetry indicates that a list is coming, e.g. seruumque patremque sororemque 'both slave and father and sister'.

Exercises

- 1 In each of these sentences, there is one adjective which precedes and does not stand next to the noun it qualifies. Read through each sentence, predicting the gender, number and case of the noun awaited, noting when the adjective is 'solved'. Then translate.
 - (a) non multam possident pecuniam optimae uxores.
 - (b) multī meās sororēs amant filiī.
 - (c) seruos miseros optimi non uexant senes.
 - (d) malī frātrēs pulchrās uerberant sororēs.
 - (e) multī fēminās pulchrās domum dūcunt senēs.

Before doing Exercises 2 and 3, revise carefully the ablative forms of nouns of the 1st, 2nd and 3rd declension.

- 2 Translate into English: in aedīs; in aulā; ad Larem; ab ignibus; in aquam; ex aulīs; in aedibus; in aquā; ā dominō; ex oculīs; (optional: ad dominum; in scaenam; in nōmine; ā seruā; in aulam; in scaenā).
- 3 Translate into Latin: in the house (use aedes); towards the girl; towards the brothers; away from the wife; onto the stage; in the house; out of water; away from the fires; (optional: in the waters; from the stage; into the family; in the eye; towards the masters; out of the household).
- 4 Translate: nimis coronārum; satis seruorum; nimis aquae; satis nominum; nimis sororum; satis ignis.
- 5 Translate these sentences:
 - (a) quem uirum audiō?
 - (b) cuius nomen nunc dicitis?
 - (c) in aedibus Euclionis satis aurī semper est.
 - (d) habet fīlia Euclionis misera nimis cūrārum.
 - (e) tū autem quam fēminam domum dūcis? (optional)
 - (f) puer pulcher est, uir tamen malus.
 - (g) pater meus nimis pecūniae habet, satis cūrārum.
 - (h) quare pulchra femina pauperem numquam amat?
 - (i) optimī uirī satis aurī semper habent.

6 Translate these sentences:

- (a) uir bonus est quis? (Horace)
- (b) quis non paupertatem extimescit? (Cicero)
- (c) quis bene celat amorem? (Ovid)

- (d) quid est beāta uīta? sēcūritās et perpetua tranquillitās. (Seneca)

Reading

1 Observe the following:

ego tē uxōrem habeō = I regard you as a wife. ego tē pauperem faciō = I make you poor | a poor man (NB. faciō conjugates like audiō, but -i- is short throughout).

Supply a part of habeō or faciō which will make sense of the following combinations and translate. Then read out in Latin, phrasing correctly.

- (a) tandem uir mē fīlium . . .
- (b) Eucliō uīcīnum dīuitem . . .

Reading exercise / Test exercise

Read the following passage carefully, translating in order of the words and analysing the function of each one, defining word-groups, and anticipating, as far as you can, what is to come. Then translate into correct English. Finally, read the passage aloud with the correct phrasing, thinking through the meaning as you read. Use the running vocabulary of 1D.

Megadōrum, uirum dīuitem et Eucliōnis uīcīnum, soror Eunomia ex aedibus uocat. Eunomia enim anxia (worried) est, quod Megadōrus uxōrem nōn habet. English-Latin Translate the Latin sentences into English. Then translate the English sentences into Latin, using the pattern of the Latin ones to help you arrange the word-order correctly.

- (a) ut ego soror optima sum, ita tū frāter optimus.

 Just as Phaedra is an excellent daughter, so Euclio is an excellent father.
- (b) dominus meus fratrem uirum optimum habet.

I consider beautiful women (to be) bad wives.

(c) quid nomen uxoris est tuae? Who is the brother of my neighbour?

- (d) uir pauper uxōrem pauperem domum dūcit. The best husbands marry beautiful wives.
- (e) feminae in aedibus stant.

 The girls are going into the water.
- (f) satis ego aurī habeō, satis pecūniae.

Grammar and exercises for 1E

Present indicative active (3rd/4th conjugation): capiō 'I

1st s. cápi-ō 2nd s. cápi-s

3rd s. cápi-t

'I capture' etc.

Section 1E

1st pl. cápi-mus 2nd pl. cápi-tis 3rd pl. cápi-u-nt

Notes

1 There are a number of verbs which draw their forms from both 3rd and 4th conjs. You have met faciō, 'I make, do'.

2 capiō appears to be straight 4th conjugation in the pres. ind. act., but observe a difference. True, it keeps the -i- all the way through, but the -i- remains short as in the 3rd conj.

uolō 'I wish', 'I want' (irregular): present indicative active 1st s. uól-ō

'I wish', 'I want' etc.

2nd s. uī-s

3rd s. uul-t (uol-t)

1st pl. uól-u-mus

2nd pl. uúl-tis (uól-tis)

3rd pl. uól-u-nt

NB. The stem of uolo is irregular but observe that the personal endings are regular, i.e. -o, -s, -t etc.

ferō 'I bear', 'I carry, 'I lead' (irregular): present indicative active

'I bear' etc. 1st s. fér-ō

2nd s. fer-s

3rd s. fer-t

1st pl. fér-i-mus

2nd pl. fér-tis

3rd pl. fér-u-nt

NB. It is the absence of -i- between stem and ending in 2nd, 3rd s. and 2nd pl. that makes this irregular.

36 Present imperatives active (all conjugations) ámā 'love!' hábē 'have!' pósc-e 'ask!' aúdī 'hear!' cáp-e 'take!' audī-te pósc-ite cápi-te habe-te amã-te

Note

1 We use posco for 3rd conj. as dīco has an irregular imperative, and capio 'I take', 'I capture' should be learnt now, as it will exemplify 3rd/4th conj. throughout.

2 Note the similarity of 3rd and 3rd/4th conjugation imperative forms. Despite the presence of the -i- in capio, the imperative form in the s. is still cap-e.

Irregular imperatives sum	eō	dīcō	dūcō	ferō	faciō fac 'do', 'make!' fáci-te és-te	1-te	dic-i-te	dűc-i-te	161-16	Taci-te

Notes

1 Herewith a mnemonic to help you remember four of the irregular imperatives: 'dīc had a dūc with fer on its back, and that's a fac'.

2 Observe the lack of -i- in ferte.

Exercises

1 Translate into Latin: you (s.) make; hear! (pl.); they carry; bring! (s., two verbs); she wishes; we do; he bears; go! (pl.); you (s.) want; demand! (s.); I do; take (s.) the dowry (optional: we make; you (s.) endure; you (pl.) bring; you (pl.) wish; love your father! (s.)).

2 Translate the following, then change s. to pl. and vice versa: facimus; fert; uult; ferunt; dīc; ferte; uolumus; est; eunt; facis; dūcite; īte; capite (optional: fac; uīs; es; habent; dīcit; audīte; faciunt; fers).

3rd. decl. nouns: onus oner-is 3n. 'load', 'burden'

nom. onus óner-a acc. onus óner-a oner-is oner-um oner-i oner-ibus oner-e oner-ibus

NB. All 3rd decl. nouns in -us, -eris are n. (cf. nomen 26). Observe that, as usual, the nom. and acc. forms are the same; and that, like nomen, the nom. and acc. pl. end in -a. It is vital to know the full categorisation (i.e. onus oner-is 3n.) of nouns like onus, for fear of confusing them with 2nd decl. m. nouns like thēsaurus, dominus etc. onus is a consonant-stem noun.

Exercises

- 1 Give the correct form of multus for these cases of onus: onus, oneris, onere, onera, oneribus.
- 2 Find the words which agree with the given form of pulcher:

pulchrō: oneris, scelere, dominī, facinus, deī, dī pulchra: femina, facinora, scelera, seruae, senex pulchrum: opus, seruum, fēminam, senēs, Larem, scelus, facinoris pulchrörum: nöminum, seruārum, deörum, senum, scelerum

Questions in -ne?

-ne attached to the FIRST word of a sentence turns a statement into a question, e.g. puerum amās 'you love the boy' - amāsne puerum? 'do you love the boy?'

NB. Emphasis is placed on the first word in such questions. puerumne amās? means 'is it the boy you love?'

Exercise

Read out these sentences in Latin, correctly phrased. Then translate. Next turn each into a question, putting the word to be questioned first, and adding -ne to it. Translate and read out the Latin again.

- est bona puella.
- īmus ad aedīs Euclionis.
- fert bene onus serua.

- optimum consilium habent.
- Eucliö filiam statim promittit.
- Megadorus satis pecuniae habet. (f)
- soror frātrem bene audit.
- scaenam uidētis.
- Eucliö honörem numquam dat.
- uxores nimis aurī semper habent.

quid + gen.

We have already met satis + gen. 'enough (of)', and nimis + gen. 'too much (of)'. quid + gen. = 'what (of)?', e.g. quid consili est? 'what (of) plan is there?' quid negoti est? 'what (of) trouble is there?' 'what's the problem?' This is another example of the so-called 'partitive' genitive (cf. 31).

Exercises

- 1 Translate: in aedīs; ē dōte; in animō; ad hominēs; ab aquā; ex ignibus; domī; ē perīculō; in exitium; ad aquās; in perīculum.
- 2 Translate these sentences:
 - ubi est Megadorus? quid consili habet?
 - uxoremne pulchram uult uir dīues? quid negotī est?
 - tē igitur bonum habeō.
 - seruī in aedibus nimis faciunt scelerum, nimis facinorum malorum.
 - quid oneris fers? quo īs?

3 Translate these sentences:

- (a) festīnā lentē. (Suetonius)
- uirtūs sõla uītam efficit beātam. (Cicero)
- nihil inuītus facit sapiēns. (Seneca)
- auctor opus laudat. (Ovid)
- nihil in uulgo modicum. (Tacitus)
- neque bonum est uoluptās neque malum. (Aulus Gellius) festīnō 1 I hurry, hasten lentē slowly uirtūs uirtūt-is 3f. goodness sol-us a um alone, only uīt-a ae 1f. life efficiō 3/4 I make (x acc., Y acc.)

opus oper-is 3n. work laudō 1 I praise uulg-us i 2n. crowd, mob modic-us a um moderate uoluptās uoluptāt-is 3f. pleasure

Reading exercises

- 1 Read through each of these pairs of sentences. In each case (1) say whether the subject of the second sentence is m., f. or n., (2) say to what or whom the second sentence refers, (3) translate the sentences, (4) read aloud in Latin, correctly phrased.
 - Megadorus filiam Euclionis sine dote domum ducit. optimus igitur homo est.
 - Megadorus domi hodie neque nuptias parat neque coquos uocat. malum est.
 - Eunomia soror Megadori est. bona femina est.
 - Eunomia frätrem habet. nön dubium est.
 - Eucliö filiam amat. malus non est.
 - Eucliö timet. nön dubium est.
 - Staphyla consilium Euclionis audit. malum est.
 - Staphyla in aedīs redit. cūrae enim plēna est.
- 2 Analyse the following piece, stating, as you read, subject, verb, object, adjective.

But anxious Cares the pensive Nymph oppress'd,

And secret Passions labour'd in her Breast.

Not youthful Kings in Battle seiz'd alive,

Not scornful Virgins who their Charms survive,

Not ardent Lovers robb'd of all their Bliss,

Not ancient Ladies when refused a Kiss,

Not Tyrants fierce that unrepenting die,

Not Cynthia when her Mantle's pinned awry,

E'er felt such Rage, Resentment and Despair,

As thou, sad Virgin! for thy ravish'd Hair. (Pope)

Reading exercise / Test exercise

Read carefully through this passage, translating in the order of the words, analysing the function of each and the groupings of the words, and anticipating the direction of the sentences. Translate into correct English. Then read aloud the passage with correct phrasing, thinking through the meaning as you read. Use the running vocabulary of 1E.

Megadorus Euclionem uīcīnum uidet. ā foro abit Euclio. anxius est. nam animus Euclionis, quod aurum non uidet, domī est, Euclio ipse (himself) forīs (outside). Euclionem blandē salūtat Megadorus, homo dīues pauperem. timet autem Eucliō, quod Megadorus uir dīues est. perspicuum est. Megadorus thesaurum Euclionis uult. non dubium est. Eucliö in aedīs it, uidet aurum, saluum est. ex aedibus igitur exit. Megadorus filiam Euclionis uxorem poscit. filiam promittit Euclio, sed sine dote. pauper enim est. dotem igitur habet nüllam. Megadorus dotem uult nüllam. bonus est et diues satis. nüptiae hodie sunt. coquum igitur uocat Megadorus in aedīs. timet autem Staphyla, quod Phaedra ē Lyconide grauida est. Megadorus uxorem domum ducit grauidam. malum est.

English-Latin

Translate the Latin sentences into English. Then translate the English sentences into Latin, using the pattern of the Latin ones to help you arrange the word-order correctly.

- irrīdēsne mē, homo malus uirum optimum? Is he, a rich man, pouring scorn on Euclio, a poor man?
- malum est. Megadorus enim filiam Euclionis uxorem facit. There's no doubt. The old man considers the girl his daughter.
- redīte ad Larem, seruī! coronās ferte multās! Go into the house, slave-woman. Bring your burdens.

quid consili est? Megadorusne dotem uult? malum est. What's up? Do you want money? There's no doubt (of that).

- quo abīs? īsne in aedīs? nūptiāsne parās hodiē? optimum est. What do they want? Are they going home? Are they carrying loads? They're good lads.
- bonum habē animum, Megadore. nam consilium bonum est. Cheer up, master. The deed's a very good one.

Word-building

Section 1E

trāns means 'across'. Sometimes it appears as trā-, e.g. trādō 'I hand over', 'I hand across (the ages)' - whence 'tradition'.

pro means 'in front of', 'on behalf of', 'for'.

Learn three important stems:

mitto has another stem miss- (thus pro + mitto 'send ahead', 'send in advance' gives 'promise') facio has another stem fact-. When facio has a prefix, it becomes -ficiō, stem fect-, e.g. prae + faciō becomes praeficiō, stem praefect-. Add -ant/-ent to your list of suffixes, e.g. efficient fero has another stem lat-

Exercise

Using the pool of prefixes and suffixes you have built up so far (pp. 32, 43), construct English words from the stems of mitto (miss-), facio (fact-), fero (lat-) and duco (duct-). Say how the English word gets its meaning. The final list should be on the long side.

Word exercise

- 1 Give the meaning and Latin connection of these English words: nuptial, animate, hominid (-id = 'son of'), voluntary, onus, fact.
- 2 Observe how fruitful the fer- stem is in English. Give the meanings of: igniferous, auriferous.
- 3 What sort of people are those who are asinine and bovine?
- 4 Note that ae- in Latin becomes e- in mediaeval Latin and so, often, in English, e.g. aequus - 'equal'.

Everyday Latin

Cf. = $c\bar{o}nfer$ 'compare!' ($cum + fer\bar{o}$ 'bring together').

A 'recipe' in English is an imperative - recipe! 'take!', from recipio. This is a useful way of remembering 3/4 imperatives.

A common neuter noun in -us in Latin is corpus. Remember it is neuter, with stem corpor-, through mēns sāna in corpore sānō 'a healthy mind in a healthy body' (Juvenal, Roman satirist, telling us what all men should pray for). Cf. corporeal, incorporate, corporation. Equally helpful may be the tag habeās corpus 'you may have the body'.

41 Present infinitive active 'to —' (= second principal part): all conjugations

1 2 3 4 3/4
'to love' 'to have' 'to say' 'to hear' 'to capture' ama-re habé-re díc-e-re audi-re cáp-e-re

Notes

1 The infinitive commonly means 'to —', e.g. amāre 'to love'. It is, in fact, an indeclinable NOUN based on a verb (derivation = in 'no', fīnis 'ending'). Consider how 'I like a run' ('run', noun, object) means virtually the same as 'I like to run' ('to run' noun, object).

2 Note the long vowel in conjs. 1, 2 and 4, and the loss of -i- in the 3rd/4th conj. infinitive.

3 The infinitive is known as the second principal part (the first principal part being the dictionary form, i.e. amō, habeō, dīcō, audiō, capiō). At the moment it is important to learn because, in conjunction with the first principal part, it tells you infallibly what conjugation the verb is. Thus:

1st p.p. 2nd p.p. $-\bar{o}$ $-\bar{a}re$ = 1st conj. $-e\bar{o}$ $-\bar{e}re$ = 2nd conj. $-\bar{o}$ -ere = 3rd conj. $-i\bar{o}$ $-\bar{i}re$ = 4th conj. $-i\bar{o}$ -ere = 3rd/4th conj.

42 Irregular infinitives: sum, eo, uolo, fero

Learn the following irregular infinitives:

sum – és-se 'to be' eō – í-re 'to go' uolō – uél-le 'to wish' ferō – fér-re 'to bear'

Exercise

Give the infinitive of these verbs and translate: habeō, explicō, cēlō, inueniō, maneō, redeō, dūcō, dīcō, poscō, stō, rogō, fugiō, āmittō, auferō, faciō, sum, (optional: uerberō, coquō, dormiō, seruō, uolō).

43 Personal pronouns: ego, nos; tū, uos

nom.	égo	'I'	nōs	'we'	tū	'you'	uōs	'you'

Notes

1 You have already met the s. forms ego, tū. Here are their plurals, nōs, uōs. Note the gen. pl. forms.

2 nostrum, uestrum are the so-called 'partitive' genitives (31), e.g. multī nostrum 'many of us'. nostrī, uestrī are 'objective' genitives (see 223), e.g. memor nostrī 'mindful of us'.

abl.	←ómi	1-1→	←ómn-ibus	\rightarrow

Notes

- 1 Just as with 2nd decl. adjectives like mult-us a um, 3rd decl. adjectives must agree in gender, number and case with the nouns they describe (14).
- 2 M. and f. forms are the same as each other in s. and pl. a useful saving of labour for the learner.
- 3 Generally, 3rd declension adjectives are -i- stems (cf. 12) and have: abl. s. in -ī, acc. pl. in -īs, n. pl. in -ia, gen. pl. in -ium

 Contrast 3rd declension consonant-stem nouns, which have:

 abl. s. in -e, acc. pl. in -ēs, n. pl. in -a, gen. pl. in -um

4 Similar to omnis: trīst-is e 'sad'; facil-is e 'easy'; difficil-is e 'difficult'.

45 3rd decl. adjectives: ingens ingens (ingent-) 'huge'

	S.		pl.

NB. Observe the stem change of this common type of adjective in -ēns and note that its n. s. form is the same as the m./f. form in the nom. Otherwise, its endings are identical to those of omnis.

46 3rd decl. adjectives: audāx audāx (audāc-) 'bold', 'courageous'

	S.		pl.
	m.[f.	n.	m.lf.	n.
nom.	aúdāx	aúdāx	audāc-ēs	audắc-ia

gen.			←audắc-ium
dat.			←audāc-ibus→
abl.	←audắc-ī→		←audấc-ibus→

NB. This very common 3rd decl. adjective type ends in -x in the nom., and has its stem in -c-. audāx follows the pattern of ingēns in the relationship between the nom. s. m. and n. forms. Other endings identical with omnis, ingēns.

Exercise

1 Decline in full: puer audāx; omnis aqua; ingēns perīculum.

2 Construct a grid consisting of 7 columns with headings as follows:

NOUN CASE NUMBER GENDER omnis ingens audax

Under the heading NOUN write the following list of nouns down the column: seruae, thēsaurī, oculōs, dominus, nōminibus, cōnsilium, cēnā, turbārum, cīuī, pecūniās, puellā, perīculō, ignis, animīs.

Leave plenty of space between each noun. In the next three columns, define exactly the case, number and gender of each of the nouns. In the last three columns make omnis, ingens and audax agree with the noun. Where the form of the noun indicates different possible cases, write down all the possibilities. E.g.:

NOUN	CASE	NUMBER	GENDER	omnis	ingēns	audāx
fīliae	gen.	s.	f.	omnis	ingentis	audācis
	dat.		f.	omnī	ingentī	audācī
	nom.	pl.	f.	omnēs	ingentēs	audācēs

3 Determine which of the nouns is in agreement with the given adjective (the answer may be one or more than one):

ingentem – nōminum, cōnsilium, deum, seruārum audāx – puellā, cōnsilium, homo, dominus, ingenia omnium – oculum, coquōrum, perīculum, honōrem trīstēs – animos, dominī, fīliae, familiam, aedīs facilia – aqua, serua, puella, familia, scelera difficilī – coquō, frāter, sororis, dominus, fīliā, turba, exitiō

When used to describe a noun, these two adjectives mean 'wealthy' or 'poor'. But they can be used on their own, when they act as nouns, and mean 'a wealthy person', 'a poor person', e.g. Eucliō dīuitēs amat 'Euclio adores the rich/rich people' (noun); but Eucliō homo pauper est 'Euclio is a poor man' (adjective).

The same principle applies to all adjectives in Latin. When used on their own, they can stand as nouns. In such circumstances, it is very important to pay close attention to the gender of the adjective, e.g. multi (pl.) on its own would mean 'many men'; multae 'many women'; multa 'many things'. omnēs could mean 'all men' or 'all women'; but omnia would mean 'all things', 'everything'.

NB. These are consonant-stem adjectives. Contrast omnis, ingens, audāx 44-6.

Word study

uestis means 'clothes' (uestiō 'I dress'), so English 'vest'. uestiārium 'dressing room' emerges in English as 'vestry'. inuestire 'to put clothes on', 'surround' gives 'investiture' and 'invest' (clothing one's money with yet more?). trāns 'across' + uest- yields 'transvestite', one who crosses over to the clothes of the opposite sex, or simply one who disguises himself: hence 'travesty'. dī- (indicating separation) + uest- gives 'divest', 'take clothes off'.

Do not confuse with 'vestige', from uestīgium 'footprint', 'trace': hence e.g. 'investigate', which means 'following on someone's tracks'.

Grammar and exercises for 1G

48 The dative case: usage and meaning

1 The dative is in one sense only the 'giving' case (the word derives from dō datus 'I give'). That is, if I give something to a person, the person who receives it is in the dative case, e.g. mihi aulam dat 'he gives me the pot / the pot to me'. But equally, it is the 'losing' case too, since if I take something from a person, the person goes into the dative case, e.g. hominī aulam auferō 'I take the pot from the man'. So one can say that the dative is the case defining the gainer or the loser, the one advantaged or disadvantaged.

2 Another 'advantage' sense is that of possession, expressed by sum + dative, e.g. est mihi pecūnia 'there is money to me', 'I have money'.

3 Another common usage of the dative is to denote the person spoken to (also, in some sense, a gainer – a gainer of the words you have spoken), e.g. fēminae dīcit multa 'he says many things to the woman'.

'To' (i.e. 'to the advantage of') and 'from' (i.e. 'to the disadvantage of') (and sometimes 'for') will translate the dative best for the time being. But you should note that the usages and meanings of the dative are very wide, and that when they are all gathered together the common idea behind them all seems to be that the person in the dative is somehow involved or interested in the action of the verb: that action has some consequences for the person, sometimes specific, sometimes quite vague. So when you come across a dative, ask first 'how is the person in the dative case affected by the verb?'

Distinguish between 'to' and 'from' indicating primarily motion (when Latin uses ad, ex, ab) and the dative usages (indicating gain or loss) outlined above.

Exercises

1 Form the dative s. and pl. of these noun + adjective phrases: senex miser; puella audāx; puer ingēns; onus multum; consilium audāx; (optional: soror optima; nomen meum; culter tuus; seruus omnis).

2 Pick out the datives in this list: cūram, animō, fāna, uirtūtī, audāciae, hominis, animōs, dīuitibus, uxor, onerī, pecūniam, fīliīs, aquae, dominō, ignibus, uīcīnum, dīs, honōrēs, fēminīs, corōnae, cōnsiliō.

3 Give the Latin for: to the huge slaves; for me; to the unhappy old man's disadvantage; to the wicked wives; for us; belonging to you (s.); (optional: to the advantage of the best citizen; belonging to the bold slave-girl; to the good father's disadvantage; for every boy).

4 Translate these sentences:

- (a) deinde Lar familiae aulam Euclioni dat auri plenam.
- (b) senex miser tamen aurum omne fano credit.
- (c) sed seruus audāx senī miserō aurum auferre uult.
- (d) Eucliō autem ita seruō clāmat malō; 'quid tibi negōtī est in fānō? quid mihi aufers?'
- (e) seruus igitur timet et Euclioni aurum non aufert.
- (f) Eucliö autem ā fānō aulam aufert, quod nunc deō aurum crēdere non uult.

49 The ablative of description

The ablative is used to describe the qualities people or things have which enable them to act as they do. This is the ablative of description, e.g. uir summā uirtūte 'a man with/of great courage', iuuenis nūllā continentiā 'a young man with/of no self-control'. Translate such ablatives as 'with' first time round, then adjust to produce a smooth English version.

Exercises

- 1 Form the ablative s. and pl. of these noun + adjective phrases: senex miser; puella audāx; puer ingēns; onus multum; consilium audāx; (optional: soror optima; nomen meum; culter tuus; seruus omnis).
- 2 Pick out the ablatives in this list: curā, animō, fānum, uirtūtis, audāciīs, homine, animī, dīuitī, uxōre, pecūniā, fīliīs, aquam, dominō, ignibus, uīcīnōs, deus, honōribus, fēminā, corōnīs, cōnsiliō, scelere.
- 3 Give the Latin for: in the shrine; away from the woman; out of the waters; in a crime; out of the mind; in the plans; out of the fires; (optional: away from worry; out of the pots; in the household; away from a brother; out of the names).
- 4 Translate these sentences:
 - (a) Eucliō uir est summā continentiā.
 - (b) Lyconides iuuenis summa pulchritudine est, nulla continentia.

Reading exercises

- 1 Read through these sentences carefully. As you translate, in the order of the words, define the function of each word (making certain that you phrase the words correctly). When you meet a dative, if you have not yet had any clue to help define its function closely (e.g. a verb like crēdō, reddō), register dative as 'affecting x' and proceed until the precise meaning emerges, e.g.:
 - crēdō (I entrust you expect an object + a dative) tibi (dative to you, solved by crēdō) aurum (object the gold, already anticipated) aurum (gold subject or object) tibi (dative with some effect on you; not solved yet we expect a verb) auferō ('I take away' aurum object, tibi 'from you', solved by construction of auferō).
 - (a) senī miserō seruus audāx multa dīcit mala.
 - (b) unguentum et coronas et aurum mihi ostende.
 - (c) uxōrī meae domī nimis cūrārum est.
 - (d) quare tu mihi meum aurum non reddis?
 - (e) ego tibi, quod uīcīnus es bonus, meam filiam promitto.
 - (f) uxores pulchrae diuitibus, quod coquis pecuniam multam dare uolunt, aurum semper auferunt.

- (g) tibi multos seruos pecuniamque multam do.
- (h) seruō audācī et seruae pulchrae nihil umquam crēdō.
- (i) uirō dīuitī, quod mihi dōs nūlla est, fīliam meam prōmittere uolō.
- (j) nōbīs corōna, unguentum uōbīs domī est.
- 2 In these sentences, the verb has been omitted. By doing as in the previous exercise, say what you anticipate. Then fill the gap (it may often be possible to insert verbs which alter the function of the dative completely). Translate.
 - (a) hominibus bonīs cīuēs omnēs pecūniam . . .
 - (b) quārē mihi aurum . . .?
 - (c) nobis animus bonus . . .
 - (d) fānō, nōn hominī audācī, Eucliō aurum . . .

Many nouns are formed from verbs or adjectives. This is often done by placing a suffix (sub-fīxus 'fixed on under', i.e. at the end) onto the verb or adjective stem. This suffix frequently gives a clue to the meaning of the noun, e.g.:

-sor or -tor (gen. s. -ōris m.) means 'the person who', e.g. amātor 'lover'

-or (gen. s. -oris m.) means 'activity', 'state' or 'condition', e.g. amor 'the state of loving', 'love'

-iō, -tiō, -siō (gen. s. -iōnis f.) means 'action or result of an action', e.g. cōgitātiō 'the act of thinking', 'thought'

-ium n. means 'action or result of an action', e.g. aedificium 'the result of making a house', 'a building'

-men (gen. s. -minis n.) means 'means, or result of an action', e.g. nō-men 'means of knowing', 'name'

Notes

- 1 The following rhythmic chant may help you to memorise future forms: '-bō -bis -bit in 1 and 2, and -am -ēs -et in 3 and 4'.
- 2 Note that in 1st and 2nd conjs., the endings -bō -bis -bit etc. follow the pattern of 3rd conj. present, i.e. dūc-ō -is -it etc. In 3rd and 4th conjs. the new 1st s. ending in -am needs to be learned.

51 Irregular futures: $sum \rightarrow er\bar{o}; e\bar{o} \rightarrow \bar{\imath}b\bar{o}$

3rd s. 1st pl. 2nd pl.	ér-i-t ér-i-mus ér-i-tis	i-b-ō 'I shall go' etc. i-bi-s i-bi-t i-bi-mus i-bi-tis
3rd pl.	ér-u-nt	í-bu-nt

Notes

- 1 The future of sum was originally $es-\bar{o}$. The s became r between vowels, hence $er\bar{o}$.
- 2 fero is regular in the future fer-am -es -et etc.

Exercises

- 1 Translate these futures, change s. to pl. and vice versa, and say to what conjugation each verb belongs: cēlābunt, inueniet, āmittēs, habēbimus, coquent, iubēbit, uerberābis, crēdet, capiētis, scrībam, facient, audiētis, (optional: obsecrābunt, dormiet, fugiēs, habitābitis, clāmābit, timēbis, uidēbimus, poscēmus, promittam, ostendent, uexābo, tacēbitis, amābunt).
- 2 Give the corresponding future form of each of these presents, then translate: crēdunt, salūtat, scrībit, fers, estis, it, rogō, cūrant, (optional: uincīs, capiō, adfertis, sunt, adiuuant, dēcipimus, scītis, possidēs, exeō, portō, tangunt, reddis, irrīdēmus, dat).
- 3 Form and translate 3rd s. and 3rd pl. of the future of the following verbs: dō, clāmō, maneō, taceō, ducō, poscō, dormiō, uinciō, capiō, fugiō, sum, redeō, (optional: obsecrō, uocō, moneō, habeō, prōmittō, dīcō, sciō, inueniō, dēcipiō, faciō).
- 4 Translate into Latin: you (s.) will hear; they will call; I shall make; we will speak; you (pl.) will be silent; he will lead; we will love; (optional: they will deceive; you (s.) will fear; I shall keep; you (pl.) will cook; she will see).
- 5 Pick out the futures in this list and translate: ferunt, ducent, uident, uerberābo, dīcis, possidēs, ducēs, amābunt, iubētis, facimus, fugiēmus, timēmus, mittēs, manēs, tacēs, dēcipiēs.

52 Three irregular verbs: possum, nolo, malo

Present ind	licative		-1-17 6-2
	possum 'I can', 'I am able'	nōlō 'I am unwilling', 'I do not want', 'I refuse'	mālō 'I prefer'
2nd s.	pós-sum pót-es pót-est	nốl-ō nỗn uĩs nỗn uult	mắl-ō mắ-uĩs mắ-uult

,	nốl-u-mus	mål-u-mus
pós-sumus pot-éstis	non uúltis	mā-uúltis
pós-sunt	nől-u-nt nől-le	māl-unt māl-le

Notes

1 possum is a combination of the stem pot- meaning 'power', 'capacity' + sum. Where t and s meet, the result is -ss e.g. potsum→possum.

2 nolo, malo are based on uolo. nolo is a combination of ne + uolo. malo is a combination of magis (ma-) 'more' + uolō 'I want (to do x) more (than

3 All three verbs control an infinitive, as they do in English, e.g. 'I am unwilling to', 'I am able to', 'I prefer to'. Note that mālō often controls two infinitives, separated by quam 'than', e.g. mālō amāre quam pugnāre 'I prefer to have love affairs rather than to fight'. The construction often has acc. nouns rather than infinitives.

4 The futures of nolo, malo, uolo are quite regular - note that nolam, mālam, mālēs are not actually found; the future of possum is again a combination of pot + sum:

Future indicative

1st s.	póterō	uól-a-m	(nốl-a-m)	(mấl-a-m)
2nd s.	pót-eris	uól-ē-s	nől-ē-s	(mấl-ē-s)
3rd s.	pót-erit	uól-e-t	nốl-e-t	mấl-e-t
1st pl.	pot-érimus	uol-ē-mus	nōl-ḗ-mus	māl-ē-mus
2nd pl.	pot-éritis	uol-é-tis	nōl-ē-tis	māl-ē-tis
3rd pl.	pót-erunt	uól-e-nt	nől-e-nt	mấl-e-nt

Exercises

1 Translate into Latin: you (s.) wish; we prefer; they refuse; he can; we will prefer; you (pl.) do not wish; you (s.) are able; they will refuse; (optional: he will wish; they can; we will be able; you (s.) prefer; we can; I shall be able).

2 Translate and convert presents into futures, futures into presents: est, possunt, uolēs, mālent, non uīs, erimus, nolumus, (optional: erunt, uult, poterit, nolet, mauultis, uis, potes).

Adjectives in -er: noster, uester; celer; acer

1st/2nd decl. adjectives: noster, uester noster 'our(s)' and uester 'your(s)' decline like pulcher pulchr-a um (27). The difference between uester and tuus is that uester means 'your(s)' when 'you' are more than one person (cf. 20).

3rd decl. adjectives ending in -er (e.g. celer celer-is celer-e 'swift', 'fast')

Notes

1 3rd decl. adjectives ending in -er (do not confuse with 2nd decl. adjectives like miser, pulcher) decline virtually identically with omnis, but do show a difference between the nom. s. m. (celer) and f. (celeris). They are i-stems (cf. 12).

2 Note that, while celer keeps the -er throughout the declension (cf. miser of the 1/2nd declension), some -er adjectives drop the 'e' (cf. pulcher of the 1/2nd declension), e.g. ācer.

Note

Normally, mille is used as an adjective and milia as a noun, e.g. $m\bar{i}lle\ m\bar{i}lit\bar{e}s = one\ thousand\ soldiers$ duo mīlia mīlitum = two thousand(s) (of) soldiers tria mīlia mīlitum = three thousand(s) (of) soldiers etc.

4th declension nouns: manus man-ūs 4f. 'hand'

pl. nom. mánu-s mánū-s mánū-s mánu-m gen. mánū-s mánu-um máni-bus mánu-ī máni-bus mánū

Notes

- 1 Most 4th decl. nouns are m. (manus is one of the few exceptions).
- 2 It is obviously very easy to confuse these with 2nd decl. nouns like, e.g., thēsaurus, so it is vital to learn the nom. and gen. s. together.
- 3 Care is needed with the -ūs ending, which might be gen. s., nom. or acc. pl. Note that the form manus can only be nom. s.

4th declension noun (irregular): domus 'house' 4f.

	S.	pl.
nom.	dómu-s	dómū-s
	dómu-m	dómū-s or dómō-s
gen.	dómū-s or dom-ī	dom-órum (dómu-um) dómu-ī or dóm-ō
abl.	dóm-ō	dóm-ibus

Notes

- 1 See 30 above for domum, domī and domō meanings.
- 2 domus has a mixture of 2nd declension forms in with the 4th.

Exercises

- 1 Give the Latin for: beautiful hand; large hand; my hand; swift hand. Now decline noun and adjective together in all cases, s. and pl.
- 2 Pick out datives and ablatives from this list (note where the form is ambiguous): uiā, amīcae, mendācēs, oppida, lūnam, nocte, nummōs, tabellās, manuī, celerī, sūmptuum, officiō facilī, scelere audācī, stilōs bonōs, sōlī, nummīs ducentīs, astūtiae tuae, cēram meam, sūmptuī magnō.

57 3rd declension monosyllables

If a 3rd decl. noun is a monosyllable with two consonants at the end of the stem, gen. pl. is in -ium, e.g.

nox noct-is, gen. pl. noctium dos dot-is, gen. pl. dotum

Cf. the normal rule for consonant-stems at 11. Nouns like nox are in fact i-stem.

Reading

Infinitives may add a simple idea to verbs like possum, uolō, nōlō, mālō etc.; e.g. uidēre possum = I can see; īre uolō = I want to go. They may also introduce more complex ideas, since the infinitive may take its own object or prepositional phrase, e.g. sōlem iterum uidēre uolō = I want to see the sun again; in aedīs Bacchidum inīre possum = I can go into the house of the Bacchises. The limits of the infinitive phrase are marked by the underlining. In the case of uolō, nōlō, mālō, iubeō, the verb itself may also have an object, which becomes attached to the infinitive phrase: e.g. tē (obj.) sōlem iterum uidēre uolō = I want you (obj.) to see the sun again. mālō is more complex still, since it often outlines a preference between two things, which are compared by quam = 'than', e.g. $l\bar{u}nam$ uidēre quam sōlem $m\bar{a}l\bar{o}$ = I prefer to see the moon to seeing the sun.

- 1 In the following sentences, translate in word-order and make explicit the boundaries of the infinitive phrase. Mark which word in the phrase is the object of the introductory verb.
 - (a) hominem bonum quam malum fīliam meam domum dūcere mālō.
 - (b) seruum hominem esse magnā audāciā nolo.
 - (c) tē tuum officium, mē facere meum dominus iubet.
 - (d) dominos uerberare seruos audacis ciues malunt.
 - (e) uxores uiros amare iubeo.
- 2 Now read out the sentences in Exercise 1 in Latin, phrasing so as to avoid any possible ambiguities. How would you read sentence (e) in response to these two questions?
 - (a) What do you tell husbands to do?
 - (b) What do you tell wives to do?

- 3 Here are some disembodied infinitive phrases. Translate in word-order, then add a part of uolō, nōlō, mālō, iubeō or possum to complete the sense. Translate into correct English. Finally, read out the Latin correctly phrased.
 - tē mihi crēdere . . .
 - seruum ad senem uiam inuenīre alteram . . .
 - nummos ducentos capere quam nīl habēre . . .
 - amīcam mē amāre meam . . .
 - stilos et ceram et tabellas te adferre . . .
 - hominēs ex oppido exīre audācīs . . .
 - Chrysalum iterum patrem decipere meum . . .
 - seruum unguentum, coronas seruam adferre mihi . . .
 - aurum Larī meō quam seruō audācī crēdere . . .
 - amīcīs auferre audācibus nummos tē ducentos . . .
- 4 In English, the following is normal: 'I want to have the gold. Give it to me'. But in Latin this would be: aurum habere uolo. da mihi.

Say in each of the following pairs of sentences which pronoun English inserts and Latin omits.

- aurum tibi crēdō, ō Lar. adseruā!
- tē dē fīliā timēre nōlō, senex. adseruābō.
- cēram et tabellās adferō. cape.
- ego lūnam uidēre possum. uidēsne tū?
- hodiē officium uobīs difficile dabo. cūrāte.

Reading exercise / Test exercise

Read carefully this passage, translating in the order of the words and defining the function of each word and phrase and anticipating the direction of the sense. Then translate into correct English. Finally, read aloud the passage, phrasing correctly, thinking out the meaning as you read. Use the running vocabulary of 2A.

est Chrysalus, seruus audāx Nīcobūlī, homo magnō ingeniō, astūtia summā. per (through) Chrysalum uult Mnēsilochus senem iterum decipere. officium difficile habet Chrysalus. neque Chrysalo senex neque fīliō crēdit. sed Chrysalus consilium capit audāx. in aedīs Pistoclērum, Mnēsilochī amīcum, mittit. Pistoclērum cēram, tabellās, stilum, līnum adferre iubet. Chrysalus, ubi redit amīcus, Mnēsilochum litterās ad patrem scrībere iubet. ita patrī scrībit fīlius probus: 'Chrysalus malus est, mi pater. hodië enim ad të adibit et in të ballistam intendet magnam. nam të oppidum habet, antiquum et auri plënum. si turrim dëlëbit tuam et propugnacula tua, per portam in oppidum te statim inuadet. tum aurum tuum in corbibus ex oppido me auferre iubebit et meae dare amicae. te cauere, pater mī, iubeo. sumptus enim magnus erit, sī tē iterum dēcipiet. ualē'.

English-Latin

Translate the Latin sentences into English. Then translate the English sentences into Latin, using the pattern of the Latin ones to help you arrange the word-order correctly.

- tē fīliam meam statim domum dūcere iubeō. Mnesilochus will want Chrysalus to deceive the poor old man again.
- pauperis hominis uirtūtem quam dīuitis audāciam semper mālō. He will always prefer the tricks of a bold slave to the boldness of a lying mistress.
- Nīcobūlus, uir nūllā astūtiā, aurum seruō audācī numquam auferre poterit. Chrysalus, a man of great astuteness, will easily be able to remove the old man's two hundred coins.
- amīcae sūmptus semper magnus est. The hand of a thief is always swift.
- dīuitēs pauperibus nummos dant nūllos. The old men will give the young men a lot of money.
- erit mihi magnus sūmptus, quod uxorem habeo dīuitem. The young men will have large expenses, because they have pretty mistresses.

Deliciae Latinae

Word-building

 $d\bar{e}$ + abl. = 'about', 'concerning', 'down from'.

dē as a prefix to verbs = 'away', 'down', e.g. dēscendō 'I go down' (see above p. 83), cf. spērō 'I hope', dēspērō 'I lose hope'. Sometimes it intensifies the word, e.g. capiō 'I catch', dēcipiō 'I catch out' (hence 'deceive').

If the simple verb has a short a or e as its first vowel, e.g. capio, sedeo ('sit'), that vowel will usually change to an i after a prefix, e.g.:

căpio decipio

făcio perficio

sedeo obsideo

ob as a prefix means 'in front of', 'against' e.g. sedeo = 'sit', obsideo = 'sit in front of', 'besiege' (cf. obsession); $ob + fer\bar{o} = offer\bar{o}$ 'put in someone's path', 'offer' (note $b \rightarrow f$ before f); $ob + e\bar{o} = obe\bar{o}$ 'come face to face with', 'meet'. Romans said one came 'face to face' with death (mortem obeo hence 'obituary'). Verbs compounded with ob often take the dative.

Give the meaning and Latin connection of: lunatic, style, official, adjutant (adiuuō), nocturnal, solar, manual, mendacious, credible, scribble, a posse, beneficial, reiterate, sumptuary (laws).

Everyday Latin

A possum is the trade-name of an electronic typewriter for quadriplegics.

If you go via somewhere, what does it mean?

What is one's alter ego?

alter

alter means 'one, or the other, of two people'; so altero 'I change', so 'alter'. It is from this stem that we get 'adultery', which is nothing to do with 'adult' (the word 'adult' derives from adultus, past participle of adolēscō 'I grow up'. An 'adolescent' is 'one growing up', and 'adult' is 'one having grown up'). 'Adultery' derives from ad + altero, i.e. moving from one state to another, so changing a lot, so corrupting.

possum

As we saw, this word is a combination of pot + sum. The pot-root means 'ability', 'power', so possum means 'I am able', 'I can', the infinitive of which is posse, 'to be able'. Hence 'possibility', 'possible', 'impossible' etc.

A sheriff's posse derives from mediaeval Latin posse comitatus 'the power of the county', i.e. a force with legal authority. The pot-root yields Latin potentia 'power', hence 'potential', 'potency' and the negative 'impotence'. With omni- 'all', we have 'omnipotence'.

sincere

It is a good story, but not true, that 'sincere' (Latin sincerus) derives from sine 'without' + cēra 'wax'. The false derivation springs from the Roman practice of mending broken statuary with wax and selling it off as if complete. In the heat of the day, however . . . Another 'folk' etymology derived the word from honey 'without wax', i.e. clean, pure, simple. Its true origin is uncertain.

Notes

1 So far you have only met verbs in their 'active' forms. But there is another class of verb, called 'deponent'. It is this class you are now meeting for the first time. Deponents are identified by the different personal endings they take.

2 The personal endings of active verbs are, as we know, -ō, -s, -t, -mus, -tis, -nt. The personal endings of deponent verbs are -r, -ris (-re), -tur, -mur, -minī, -ntur. These new personal endings are of the highest importance as they are more widely used than just with deponents (as you will see). Consequently, if you learn them now, you will be saving yourself a great deal of learning in the future.

3 Given the new personal endings, deponent verbs are constructed exactly as active verbs are, i.e. stem with its key vowel+personal endings. E.g.

1st conj.: mina-+ endings (NB minor cf. amō).

2nd conj.: pollice-+ endings.

3rd conj.: loqu-+-i-+ endings. (NB loquor cf. dīcō; loquuntur cf.

Section 2B

dicunt. The really difficult one here is the 2nd s.: loqueris cf. dīcis. Observe the pattern of short vowels.)

4th conj.: menti-+ endings.

3rd/4th conj.: progredi-+ endings, except for 2nd s., where the -iof the stem alters to -e- (as in 3rd conj.). Note that the -iremains short (contrast 4th conj. mentīris, mentītur etc.).

- 4 Imperatives present a problem, in that the s. and pl. imperatives can be identical in form with the indicatives. For example, mināminī may mean 'you threaten' or 'threaten!' (pl.), and mināre could mean 'you threaten' or 'threaten!' (s.). The context will tell you which is right.
- 5 Do not confuse s. deponent forms in -āre, -ere, -ēre, and -īre with active infinitives like amāre etc.
- 6 The most difficult infinitive is the 3rd and 3rd/4th conj. infinitive, which ends in plain -ī, e.g. loqu-ī, progred-ī. All the rest end in stem $(+\text{key vowel}) + -r\bar{\iota}$.

Exercises

Translate and convert s. to pl. and vice-versa: precatur, mentiris, pollicēmur, sequuntur, mināris, loquiminī, mentior, opīnāre, progredimini, loqueris, pollicere, minamur, (optional: recordor, ēgreditur, oblīuīscuntur, sequeris, precāre, opīnāmur, adgrederis, loquitur, mentiuntur, progrediuntur, minamur).

2 Give the Latin for: we threaten; he promises; they forget; you (pl.) remember; you (s.) speak; I am following; advance! (s.); beg! (s.); talk! (pl.); promise! (s.); (optional: we are thinking; they advance; he comes out; she threatens; remember! (pl.); we are lying; they speak; you (pl.) promise; talk! (s.); you (s.) follow).

3 Say whether each of the following is an infinitive or an imperative and translate: amare, minare, pollicere, sequere, uocare, habere, loqui, audī, inuenīre, progredī, dormī, mentīrī, precāre, opīnārī, inuenī, dücere, loquere, inīre, iubēre, progredere.

Give the meaning, infinitive and s. imperative of the following verbs: habeo, cūrō, minor, loquor, audiō, dūcō, mittō, precor, fugiō, crēdō, (optional: opinor, progredior, moneo, sequor, maneo, polliceor).

$n\bar{o}l\bar{\imath} + infinitive$

nolī (pl. nolīte), the imperative of nolo, means in Latin 'don't!', and is followed by the infinitive (lit. 'do not wish to!', 'refuse to!'). E.g. noli/ nolite clamare 'don't shout!', noli/nolite logui 'don't speak!'

Exercise

Translate into Latin: don't follow (s.); don't (pl.) threaten me; don't (s.) be stupid (m.); don't (pl.) send the letter; don't (s.) hide the pot; don't (pl.) lead the slaves; (optional: don't (s.) advance; don't (pl.) mention; don't (s.) do the business today; don't (pl.) carry the garlands).

5th decl. nouns: rēs rē-ī 5f. 'thing', 'matter', 'business', 'affair'

pl. nom. re-s rē-s re-s acc. re-m gen. rē-ī rē-rum dat. ré-ī ré-bus ré-bus abl. rē

NB. Most 5th decl. nouns are f. But dies 'day' is normally m. (it is f. when it denotes a special day).

Exercise

Decline in full: omnis res; pulcher dies; mea res; trīstis dies.

61 3rd decl. n. noun: caput capit-is 'head'

pl. S. nom. cáput cápit-a cápit-a acc. cáput gen. cápit-is cápit-um dat. cápit-ī capít-ibus abl. cápit-e capít-ibus

NB. Given the gen. s. capit-is, this noun follows the normal pattern of 3rd decl. n. nouns like e.g. nomen 26.

Special 1st/2nd decl. adjectives null-us a um 'no(ne)', 'not any'; alter alter-a um 'one' (of two), 'the one . . . the other'

nom. acc. gen. dat. abl.	núll-us núll-um ←	núll-a núll-am -núll-íus -	null-um → →	nắll-ī	- nắll-īs	nắll-a nắll-a nũll-ốrum
4.5	álter álter-um ←		álter-um álter-um →	álter-ī álter-ōs alter-ōrum ←		álter-a álter-a alter-órum

NB. Both these adjectives are entirely regular except that the gen. s. ends in -īus, e.g. nūllīus, alterīus and the dat. s. in -ī; cf. quis gen. s. cuius dat. s. cui, unus gen. s. unius dat. s. uni.

Reading

When a sentence contains more than one clause, there are, in the conjunctions and other small words within previous clauses, signposts marking the direction of the sense. You have met ita . . . leading up to ut (or vice versa) and in 2B (Text) you saw tam . . . quam = 'as . . . as' and tantī . . . quantī = 'worth as much . . . as'. Ambiguities in the conjunction are often resolved in advance by markers, e.g. tum, ubi . . . shows ubi to mean 'when' rather than 'where'. More generally, you will know from seeing sī, that the sentence is conditional ('if x, then Y') and quod/quia give the reason for something in another clause.

Translate only the 'signposts' (markers like tum, tam etc. and conjunctions like sī, quod etc.) and say what the basic structure of each of these sentences is. When you have done this, translate (in word-order first, then into correct English). Finally read aloud, phrasing correctly, thinking through the meaning as you read.

- (a) tum rem cognosces omnem, mī domine, sī scīre uoles, ubi fīlium tuum in aedibus uidēbis Bacchidum.
- ut tū mihi rem dīcis, sīc ego, quod tibi crēdō, opīnor.
- tantī est senex noster, ut opīnātur Chrysalus, quia seruus est summā audāciā, quantī fungus pūtidus.
- tē înspicere intro, quod tē omnia scīre uolo, iubēbo in aedīs, ubi fīlium, sī oculos habēs, cum amīcā mox uidēbis.
- at sī senī litterās tum dare poterō, ubi ego uolam, tam erit frīctus, ut opinor, quam est frictum cicer.

Reading exercise / Test exercise

Read this passage carefully, translating in word-order. Define the function of each word as you go, grouping them into the correct phrases and anticipating the direction of the sense. Then translate into correct English. Finally, read aloud, with the correct phrasing, thinking out the meaning as you read. Use the running vocabulary of 2B.

īnsānum negōtium Chrysalus, ut opīnātur, persequitur, quia senem dēcipere iterum uult. cōnsilium tamen satis audāx in animō est. Mnēsilochī enim litterās senī dabit. Chrysalus tum dominum saeuum esse uult, ubi litterās accipiet, quia tum mōrēs Mnēsilochī malōs nārrāre poterit. litterās in manūs senī tum dat seruus audāx, ubi ex aedibus ēgreditur. senex litterās legit, deinde seruōs uocat. tum ubi domō ēgrediuntur, seruōs Chrysalum uincīre iubet, Chrysalum tacēre. senem autem irrīdet Chrysalus ac rērum nescium omnium stultumque uocat. tantī habet dominum, ut dīcit, quantī fungum pūtidum. senex tam īrātus fit quam uult seruus. tum autem Chrysalus perīculum Mnēsilochī loquitur, senem in aedīs intrō īnspicere Bacchidum iubet. prōgreditur senex ad aedīs et intrō īnspicit. at conuīuium uidet et rem malam atque trīstem.

sub + abl./acc. = 'under', 'close up to'.

sub- as a prefix (sometimes appearing as su- or sus-) attaches the same meaning to the verb, e.g. $sub+capi\bar{o}=suscipi\bar{o}$ 'undertake'; sub+sequor=subsequor 'follow closely'. Cf. submarine, subcutaneous etc. See above p. 83.

Everyday Latin

In logic, what does a non sequitur not do?

secundus 'second' is connected with sequor. It is, after all, what follows the first. Since a following wind was favourable to sailors, secundus also means 'favourable'.

Letters often say 're your bill for drinks now outstanding at . . .' This means 'in the matter of', the abl. of res. Something ad rem is 'to the point', 'relevant to the matter in hand' (also a motto of the Wright family).

If you see (sic), it indicates that what has just been written is intentionally writen (sic) like that.

Word study

ambulō

ambulō means 'I walk', 'take a turn'. Hence 'amble', and 'preamble', the introductory stroll round a subject (prae 'in front of'). The French had an hôpital ambulant, i.e. 'touring hospital', 'field hospital', whence our 'ambulance'. 'Perambulate' means 'walk through or over' (per 'through'); hence the English derivation 'perambulator', which should mean 'one who walks over'. It is tempting to think that 'ramble' comes from $re + ambul\bar{o}$, but this is disputed.

dies

The Latin adjective dius means 'divine', 'of the sky' and 'luminous'. It connects with deus 'god' (cf. Greek 'Zeus'), whence diuus, diuinus, the goddess Diana, English 'divine'. It also connects with dies 'day' - so 'light' and 'god' appear to be closely connected semantically. (Cf. John 1.4: 'In Him was life and the life was the light of men'; I John 1.5: 'God is light and in Him there is no darkness at all'.) Iuppiter is cognate with Greek zeu pater 'O Zeus father'. Observe that Jupiter also appears in Latin as diespiter (connected with dies + pater 'father of day'), and that the gen. s. of Juppiter is Iouis, in primitive Latin Diouis. Both diespiter and Diouis bring us back to the di-root again. Iou-gives us 'jovial' (from the astrological influence of the planet Jupiter). There is also a connection between Zeus, deus and the Old English god of war Tīw, whence Tuesday!

diēs helps to give us 'dismal' (diēs malī 'unlucky days'), and 'diary' (diārium 'ration for the day'). From dies Latin got the adjective diurnus 'daily', giving English 'diurnal' and (through French) 'journal'. Note that in France and Italy, Thursday is named after Jupiter (Fr. jeudi, It. gióvedi).

Notes

- 1 Describing a noun, hic means 'this' (pl. 'these'); on its own, it will mean 'this man', 'this woman', 'this thing', depending on gender and context. Often 'he', 'she', 'it' will suffice.
- 2 Its forms seem to be irregular, but note the -ius of the gen. s. (cf. nūllus, alter 62 and quis 29), and the pl., except for haec, is just like multus on the stem h-.
- 3 NB. hinc 'from here'; hīc '(at) here'; hūc '(to) here'.

Notes

- 1 On its own, ille means 'that man', 'that woman', 'that thing', depending on gender and context; describing a noun, it means 'that', 'those'. Often it best translates as 'he', 'she', 'it'.
- 2 The forms at first glance seem irregular, but on closer inspection you will see that, apart from ille, illud, illīus, illī (cf. nūllīus, nūllī; cuius, cui; alterius, alteri) they are simply the stem ill- with 2nd decl. adjective endings like multus.
- 3 From ille came French le, la and Italian il, la.
- 4 NB. illinc 'from there'; illīc (at) there' illūc '(to) there'. Cf. 633. 5 ille . . . hic are often used in contrast to mean 'the former' (i.e. that one over there, a long way away) and 'the latter' (i.e. this one here which is
- 6 Ambiguities: note that illī can be dat. s. m. f. or n. or nom. pl. m. But illae can only be nom. pl. f., because gen. and dat. s. are illīus, illī.

Exercises

- Decline in all cases: hic seruus; ille mīles; haec serua; illud perīculum; hoc uerbum; illa mulier.
- 2 What case or cases are the following phrases in: huius patris; hāc fīliā; hae uxores; huic animo; hoc onus; hīs cenīs; (optional: hunc diem; hārum noctium; hos seruos; haec consilia; hoc capite; huius perīculī); illī stilī; illo uerbo; illud opus; illos dies; illīs sceleribus; illī manuī; (optional: illam turbam; illa soror; illīus ignis; illī familiae; illos honores; illīus rēī; illa domus; illā rē).
- 3 Give the Latin for: this soldier (acc.); to that old man; this girl's; those plans (nom./acc.); these dangers (nom./acc.); that woman's.
- 4 Give the case of the following phrases, where the noun could be ambiguous, but where the form of hic or ille solves the problem: hī thēsaurī; illīus thēsaurī; illās sororēs; hae sororēs; illa rēs; hās rēs; illae rēs; huius manūs; illae manūs; hae manūs; illās mulierēs; hae mulierēs; illī puerō; hōc puero; illae feminae; huic feminae; illīus feminae; hic dies; illos dies; hī diēs.
- 5 Join hic or ille to the word(s) with which it agrees, and translate:

huius: seruus, amīcī, mulierēs, lūnae, stilos illum: consilium, opus, puerum, dierum, fratrem, rem illā: uxōre, nox, manū, stilus, officia hoc: mīles, officium, nomen, cīuem, aurum

haec: aedēs, corona, opera, manus, negotia, rēs

- 1 Give the meaning, conjugation and infinitive of the following verbs: cēlō, explico, inuenio, audio, duco, fugio, mitto, fero, malo, sum, credo, scrībō, salūtō, legō, nesciō.
- 2 Translate the following verbs, and then analyse them as follows:

If an indicative, give person, number, tense (present or future) and voice (active or deponent), e.g. amas - 2nd person singular present active of amo 'love'

If imperative, say whether s. or pl., active or deponent

If infinitive, say whether active or deponent

In all cases, end your analysis by saying what the verb is and what it means (see example above) amābis, habēre, dūc, minārī, dīcet, uelle, scrībitis, poterō, cape, dormiunt, progredere, dēfendis, opprimēs, necā, loquī, nolumus, irrīdēre, stāte, rogās.

Reading

Translate in word-order, defining which is subject (if one is quoted), which is object etc. in these incomplete sentences, then supply a verb to complete them and 116 translate into correct English. Finally read out the sentences in Latin with correct phrasing, thinking through the meaning as you read.

- (a) ille mīles hanc mulierem huic iuuenī crēdere . . .
- (b) illum huius senis seruum . . .
- (c) hoc aurum illī mīlitī hic seruus . . .
- (d) cum hāc muliere illum iuuenem hic mīles mox . . .
- (e) huic ille feminae hos nummos omnis dare . . .

Reading exercise / Test exercise

Read this passage carefully, translating in word-order as usual. You will need to choose from the bracketed words the one which makes sense of your suppositions about the direction of the sense so far. Translate into correct English; then, finally, read the passage aloud in Latin, phrasing correctly, thinking through the meaning as you read. Use the running vocabulary of 2C.

Nīcobūlus fīlium et Bacchidem in aedibus (hanc, cōgitat, uidet). meretrīx Bacchis (ambās, arbitrātur, est). Chrÿsalō autem meretrīx esse (hanc, mīles, illa) nōn uidētur. nunc intrat Cleomachus mīles et illīus (uxōris, meretrīcis, fīliae) amātor. illum autem Chrÿsalus Bacchidis (uirum, fīlium, plānē) uocat. Chrÿsalī dominus nunc timet (amātor, citō, ualdē), quod Bacchidem mīlitis (fīliam, nihil, uxōrem) arbitrātur. Chrÿsalī manūs seruōs statim (cūrāre, exsoluere, crēdere) iubet, Chrÿsalum cum hōc (fēminā, perīculō, mīlite) pacīscī, quod uult. huic mīlitī seruus statim nummōs (illum, fēminās, ducentī, multōs) pollicētur. sed illum tacēre ac uerba mala (dīcere, audīre, precārī) iubet, quod senem (amāre, pollicērī, dēcipere) uult. deinde nummōs mīlitī (hunc, ille, magnō) prōmittit. Chrÿsalus autem mīlitī illī multa periūria dīcit (ad tempus, dē Mnēsilochō, in aedibus) et illum ad forum mittit.

English-Latin

- 1 Translate these sentences into Latin, taking care to choose a word-order which gives the correct emphasis (see Reference Grammar W).
 - (a) This man loves that man's daughter.
 - (b) This young man's father seems to be rich.
 - (c) Those women I consider as prostitutes.
 - (d) This is a great duty for good citizens.
 - (e) That soldier wants to defend this woman.

- (f) It's the character of these women I consider wicked.

 (Remember 'it's the' is just a way English has of emphasising something; Latin puts the emphatic words early in the sentence.)
- 2 Translate this passage (after rereading the text of 2C):

CHRYSALUS Who is this chap?

NICOBULUS He's my son Mnesilochus.

CHR. He appears to be with a pretty woman. What do you think?

NIC. She is pretty. But who is she? Tell me, I beg you.

CHR. Do you see that man?

NIC. Do you mean (use dīcō) that soldier?

CHR. Yes.

NIC. Go on.

CHR. I will. He is this woman's man.

NIC. What are you saying? But this woman's obviously a whore.

CHR. (Is) this (what) you think? You'll know everything soon.

NIC. What? Is she married (use nupt-us a um)? I'm done for. O poor me!
O wicked young man!

Deliciae Latinae

Word-building

Suffixes

Verbs often receive a change in their meaning from a suffix (or 'infix') which becomes part of their stem, e.g.

-sc- indicates the beginning of an action. So cognōscō means 'I begin to know', 'I get to know'; pacīscor 'I begin/attempt to make a treaty'. All -scō verbs are 3rd conjugation.

-it- denotes repetition. So clāmitō = 'I keep on shouting'. All verbs in -itō are 1st conjugation.

Word exercise

Give the meaning of these words and their connections with Latin: military; (French) le, la; (Italian) il, la; conative, arbitrate, meretricious, morals.

Everyday Latin

ad hoc 'for, directed at, this one occasion', i.e. unplanned.

post hoc, ergō propter hoc 'after this, therefore because of this'. A famous logical trap into which it is only too easy to fall. After you learned Latin you became a drunken layabout; therefore it was because you learned Latin that . . . etc. Particularly tempting for historians.

Word study

plānus

This means 'flat', 'level', so 'clear', 'obvious' in Latin. This becomes English 'plane', a level surface, and the tool which makes a surface level. Through French, we have English 'plain', a level surface, and plainsong (as opposed to measured music, i.e. Gregorian chant as opposed to polyphony). In Italian plānus emerges as piano, 'flat', hence in music, 'softly'. Combined with Italian forte 'loud' (cf. Latin fortis 'brave', 'strong'), it yields 'pianoforte', which can play both soft and loud. 'Explain' comes from explānō 'flatten', 'spread out', literally and before the mind.

Do not confuse with the '-plain' of e.g. 'complain', which derives (again through French) from Latin plango, 'mourn', 'lament' (cf. 'plangent', 'plaintiff').

Notes

- 1 The perfect tense (perfectus 'completed', 'finished') has three basic meanings:
 - (a) (by far the most common): completed action in past time, e.g. amāuī 'I loved'.
 - (b) action in the past seen from the point of view of the present, e.g. amāuī 'I have loved'.

(c) present state arising from past action, e.g. periī 'I am done for' (i.e. 'I have perished and therefore am (now) done for').

Cf. Cicero's announcement that the conspirators involved with Catiline had been executed – uīxērunt 'they have lived', i.e. 'they are dead'. Generally speaking, the choice will be between (a) and (b), according to context

2 Formation of the perfect tense:

- (a) The perfect active is formed for 1st and 4th conjugations by adding -ui to the stem, e.g. ama-uī, audī-uī. 2nd conjugation verbs only rarely add -ui to the stem (e.g. dēleō dēlēre dēlēuī); they drop the -e of the stem as a rule, e.g. habeō habēre habuī. Note the u still appears in the ending: this is the key to perfect active in conjugations 1, 2 and 4. Third conjugation are unpredictable (see Note 4).
- (b) Note, however, that in 1st and 4th conjugations, -ui-/-ue-/-u- is sometimes dropped giving e.g. amāstī for amāuistī, audiit for audīuit etc. See the bracketed forms in the chart.

3 BUT: all perfect actives have personal endings in:

-ī
-istī
-it
-imus
-istis
-ērunt (-ēre)

Note that, apart from 1st and 2nd s., the personal endings (-t, -mus, -tis, -nt) are the normal active ones. Note variations on -ērunt; it can be -ēre (do not confuse with infinitives, e.g. habēre and 2nd s. deponents, e.g. pollicēre).

- 4 The perfect active stems of 3rd and 3rd/4th conjugation verbs, and some irregular 1st and 2nd conj. verbs, are not as neatly predictable as those of the other conjugations, but certain patterns do emerge, e.g.:
 - (a) adding -si to the stem, like:

maneō 2 mānsī 'I stayed' irrīdeō 2 irrīsī 'I laughed at' iubeō 2 iussī 'I ordered' mittō mīsī 'I sent' Section 2D

Note the effect on e.g.

dūcō dūxī 'I led'

dīcō dīxī 'I said'

uinciō uīnxī 'I bound'

scrībō scrīpsī 'I wrote'

(b) doubling up ('reduplicating') the initial consonant and adding a vowel, like:

dō 1 dedī 'I gave' tangō tetigī 'I touched' poscō poposcī 'I demanded'

(c) lengthening the vowel in the stem, like:

inueniō inuēnī 'I found' fugiō fūgī 'I fled' legō lēgī 'I read'

(d) changing the vowel in the stem:

faciō fēcī 'I made', 'I did' agō ēgī 'I did', 'I drove' capiō cēpī 'I took'

(e) no change in the stem at all:

dēfendō dēfendī 'I defended' compounds of -cendō -cendō verbs in -uō -uī e.g. soluō soluī 'I released'

(f) stems ending in Imnr ('liquids', 'nasals') add -uī, e.g.:

Ablatives: phrases of time

We have met two uses of the ablative to date: with prepositions (esp. of place, e.g. 'in', 'at', 'from'), and descriptive ('a man of great arrogance')

The ablative case is also used to show the time at which or within which something took place (cf. locational use), e.g. illo tempore 'at that time'; prīmā hōrā 'at the first hour'; decem annīs '(with)in ten years'.

Reading exercise

Recognising the function of an ablative phrase is not always easy. So far you have met three types: (a) descriptive, e.g. uir summō ingeniō 'a very intelligent man', (b) prepositional, e.g. cum illa muliere 'with that woman', (c) time when or within which, e.g. hoc tempore 'at this time', una hora '(with)in one hour'. Translate the following phrases and say to which category they belong: uir summā audāciā; illo tempore; hāc nocte; dē tuo perīculo; tacitā nocte; ā senibus miserīs; seruus multā astūtiā; mēcum; hōrīs multīs; magnō post tempore; femina summa pulchritudine; e foro; illo noctis tempore; cum meā uxōre; annīs decem.

Reading exercise / Test exercise

Read this passage carefully, translating in word-order. You will need to stop to group the ablative phrases and decide their function. Often the words in the phrase will not be next to one another. Attempt as you read to classify ablative adjectives and hold them in your mind without attempting to translate fully until the noun solves them. Translate into correct English, then read aloud in Latin, phrasing correctly, thinking through the meaning as you read.

Atrīdae longō post tempore Īlium cēpērunt. decimō enim annō urbem Trōiam tandem expugnāuērunt. nam illo tempore rēgēs in urbem equum mīsērunt ligneum. Epēus, uir astūtiā magnā, equum illum aedificāuit. mīlitēs in equō fuērunt armātī, summā audāciā uirī. hī ex equo illa exierunt nocte et urbem mox deleuerunt, sic illo die Troia urbs ūnā periit hōrā.

NICOBULUS What ought I to do, Chrysalus? Tell me.

CHRYSALUS I don't want to say.

NIC. I beg you, speak. What shall I do? For I want to succeed (use rem bene gerere).

4 Can you guess the meaning of any of the nouns in 3?

Adjective formation

Here is a list of common suffixes which form adjectives:

-ilis
-bilis

'able to be', e.g. ductilis 'leadable', mōbilis 'mobile'
-idus 'condition', e.g. timidus 'being in a condition of fear', 'afraid'
-ōsus 'full of', e.g. perīculōsus 'full of danger', 'dangerous'
-eus 'made of', e.g. aureus 'made of gold', 'golden'

The following list of suffixes may best be covered by the meaning 'pertaining to': -ālis, -ānus, -āris, -ārius, -icus, -īlis, -īnus, -īuus, -ius, e.g. Rōm-ānus 'pertaining to Rome', Lat-īnus 'pertaining to Latium', seru-īlis 'pertaining to slaves', 'servile', patr-ius 'pertaining to one's father', 'paternal', 'ancestral' etc.

Exercise

Analyse the following adjectives etymologically, and reach a conclusion about their meaning: familiāris, facilis, audībilis, incrēdibilis, fertilis, scaenicus, fūrtīuus, senīlis, honorābilis, igneus, oculeus (used of monsters), aquārius, pecūniōsus, uirīlis, uxōrius, domesticus, nōminātīuus, dōtālis, animōsus, cīuīlis, iuuenīlis.

Everyday Latin

Remember three important perfects with reference to Julius Caesar's famous words that he wrote on a placard at a huge triumph in Rome in 46 celebrating one of his quickest victories (at Zela in Asia Minor in 47):

uēnī, uīdī, uīcī 'I came, I saw, I conquered'

On tombstones fl. = floruit '(s)he flourished' and ob. = obiit '(s)he died' (cf. 'obituary') – both perfect tense.

Word exercise

Give the Latin connection of the following words: predatory, annuity, perennial, anniversary¹, millennium², temporary, urbane, tacit, pugnacious, delete, debt, solve, ante-chamber.

1 uers- 'turn'.

Word study

sinecure (cūra)

This derives from sine + cūra, 'without the care', and cūra, through French, came to mean 'cure' in Middle English. In ecclesiastical language, cūra became the 'cure of souls', whence 'curate', one who cures souls (cf. French curé). So a 'sinecure' was a church office which paid a salary but did not involve work, the cure of souls. 'Secure' comes from sē-('without') + cūra, 'without anxiety or care'; and sēcūrus became seür in Old French, whence English 'sure'. Late Latin excūrō 'I clean off' (Classical Latin 'I take great care') becomes, by a circuitous route, 'scour'! 'Curious' comes from cūra too. Latin cūriōsus means 'full of cares', 'anxious about', and so also 'inquisitive': hence 'curiosity', and in abbreviated form 'curio'. 'Accurate' comes from ad + cūrō 'give care to'.

² mīlle '1,000'.

aequus and equus

Since classical ae- became e- in mediaeval Latin, the derivations of these two words are easily confused! aequus 'even', 'equal' gives all the 'equality' words (and through French 'egalitarian'). 'Equations', of course, are supposed to balance and the 'equator' equates, i.e. makes equal, the two halves of the earth. 'Equitable' means 'fair', and its negative gives 'iniquity'. adaequāre means 'I make truly level' (i.e. 'at a suitable level'), so 'adequate'. 'Equilibrium' is 'even balance' (lībra 'scales'); 'equanimity' is the state of a balanced animus or 'mind'; and an 'equinox' occurs when night equals day.

equus 'horse' (cf. eques 'cavalryman') gives us 'equine', 'equestrianism' etc.

arca, 'box', 'coffer', comes from the same root as arceō 'I keep at a distance'. arcānus means 'boxed in', 'closed in', whence 'arcane', meaning 'secret'. In compounds, arceō becomes -erceō. So coerceō 'contain', 'restrain' gives English 'coerce'; exerceō 'drive out', 'keep someone moving' yields 'exercise' (cf. exercitus 'a trained force').

Notes

3rd pl. menti-é-ntur

1 We noticed the close relationship between present deponent and present active forms at 58. There is an equally close relationship between future deponent and future active forms (for which see 50).

progredi-é-ntur

2 While in the 3rd and 4th conjs. the -am, -ēs, -et of the active becomes regularly -ar, -ēris (-ēre), -ētur, in the 1st and 2nd conjs., the active -bō, bīs, -bit becomes -bor, -beris (-bere), -bitur. Cf. 3rd conjugation presents (loquor, loqu-eris, loqu-itur). Note in both the change of vowel -i- to -ein 2nd s.

3 Observe the vowel-length of the 2nd s. future of loquor - loqueris. Contrast the 2nd s. present - loqueris.

Exercises

1 Conjugate the future of: opinor, conspicor, uideor, īrāscor, oblīuiscor, mentior, egredior, patior, (optional: minor, precor, recordor, sequor, ingredior, suspicor).

2 Translate and turn s. to pl. and vice versa: opīnābor, mentiēris, precābitur, uidēbiminī, loquēris, pollicēbimur (optional: ingrediar, sequētur, uidēberis, conspicābuntur).

3 Give the Latin for: you (s.) will pray; she will threaten; they will seem; you (pl.) will talk; I shall advance; we shall think; they will try; he will follow.

4 Turn the following presents into their future equivalents and translate:

minātur, precantur, opīnor, uidēminī, conspicatur, sequitur, loquuntur (optional: īrāsceris, mentīris, egredior, progrediminī, precamur, patimur).

5 Turn these futures into their present equivalents and translate: arbitrāberis, conābitur, patientur, loquēminī, sequēmur, adgrediēris, morābor, opīnābimur, progrediēminī, uidēbitur, mentiar.

6 Name the tenses of these verbs: dedit, conāberis, mentītur, uidēbitur, fēcērunt, amant, dēlent, dīcent, loquēris, tulistī (optional: fert, erit, īrāscar, fuistis, timet, dūcet, potest, mānsī).

69 Genitive of value

The genitive case is used to express the value put on a person or thing, e.g. homo nihilī 'a man of nothing' i.e. 'of no value', 'worth nothing'; tantī es quantī fungus 'you are of such (value) as a mushroom' (lit. 'you are of such value as of what value (is) a mushroom').

PHILOXENUS Don't blame me, Nicobulus. And if you want to rebuke your son, go inside. The women will look after you, if you enter.

BACCHIS 1: I'll give back two hundred pieces, old man, if you'll come in. And I'll embrace you.

forum

forum, the legal and business centre of a town, basically means 'outdoors' and is connected with fores 'doors' and the adverb foras 'out of doors'. forum yields the adjective forensis 'connected with the legal and business centre', hence English 'forensic', 'connected with the law'. forestis is a late Latin adjective often connected with silua 'a wood out of doors', whence 'forest'. From foraneus through Middle English foreine and Old French forain we eventually get 'foreign'.

Notes

- 1 This word works in the same way as hic, ille. On its own, it means 'that man', 'that woman', 'that thing'; 'he', 'she', 'it' depending on gender and context; describing a noun it means 'that'. The difference between is and ille is that is = 'the one mentioned', while ille = 'that one over there I'm pointing to' or 'the former one as opposed to this one'.
- 2 Apart from is, id, eius, eī (cf. huius, illīus, illī), the word declines exactly like mult-us a um on the stem e-. This shows up most regularly in the pl.

71 Accusative of time - 'throughout', 'for', 'during'

Time 'for' or 'throughout' is expressed either by per + acc., or the plain acc. without any preposition at all; e.g. per eam noctem or eam noctem 'through that night', 'for that night'. Distinguish between the accusative and the plain ablative (67), which expresses time when or within which e.g. eā nocte 'within that night', 'in that night'.

The accusative in time phrases may be graphically represented as a line; the ablative as a dot · or as a point within a circle ①.

Exercises

- 1 Decline in all cases s. and pl.: id bellum; ea urbs; is dux.
- 2 What case(s) and number are the following phrases in? eius rēgis; eī exercitūs; eī uxōrī; iīs imperiīs; eam uxōrem; eōrum nōminum; ea perīcula; ea nox; eum lectum; eōs mīlitēs.

- 3 Give the Latin (using is) for: (through) those days; that victory (acc. s.); of that war; for those kings; those generals (acc.); that command (nom./ acc.); to that mistress; those customs (nom.); his; to them; hers; to him; to her; on that night.
- 4 Say with which of the words in each line the given part of is agrees (where there is ambiguity, explain the alternatives):

eī: mīlitem, uirī, fēminae, exercituī, puerō, patrēs eae: uxōrī, amīcae, noctis, uiās, rēs ea: imperia, astūtia, uirtūs, sōl, urbs, capita, manus eius: operis, puerī, rēī, exercitūs, mōrēs, aedīs eīs: mīlitēs, signīs, meretrīcibus, ouīs, uirīs, mōribus

- 5 Translate: in eo oppido; ob eam uirtūtem; apud eos; eo tempore; per eam uīam; cum ea; ea nocte; in eam urbem; eas horās; ad eos mīlitēs; eam noctem; multos dies; eo anno; id tempus.
- 6 Give the Latin for (using is): with those women; at that hour; at his house; onto that stage; in those cities; because of those dangers; on those nights; on account of that war; over those hours.
- 7 Replace the English word in these sentences with the appropriate form of hic, ille or is, and translate:
 - (a) (These) feminae pulchrae sunt.
 - (b) uidēsne (those) mīlitēs?
 - (c) satis (of that) bellī est.
 - (d) (That man's) caput ingens est.
 - (e) turba (of those) mulierum ingreditur.

72 Comparative adjectives: longior longius 'longer'

Comparative adjectives carry the meanings 'more . . .', 'rather . . .', '—er', 'quite . . .', 'too . . .'; e.g. longior 'longer', 'quite long', 'rather long'.

Basic rule: look for the stem + -ior- (occasionally -ius).

	S.		pl.
	m./f.	n.	m.lf.	n.
nom.	lóng-ior	lóngius	long-iốr-ēs	long-iốr-a
acc.	long-iốr-em	lóngius	long-iőr-ēs	long-iōr-a
gen.	←long-iố		←long-i
dat.	←long-iố		←long-id
abl.	←long-iố		←long-id	ir-ibus→

² éis often becomes lis.

Notes

- 1 To form the comparative, take the gen. s. of the positive adjective, remove the ending (leaving you with the stem) and add the endings for the comparative as indicated above. E.g. ingēns ingent-is ingentior; audāx audāc-is audācior.
- 2 Comparatives have consonant stems. This accounts for abl. in -e, n. pl. in -a, gen. pl. in -um. Note -ius in nom. and acc. n. s.
- 3 The original ending of the comparative was -ios (which becomes the neuter -ius). Then the s of -ios becomes r between vowels: so longiōrem, not longiōsem (cf. Reference Grammar E5 Note 1 and H3(d) Note).
- 4 Note the Latin for 'than', used very frequently with comparatives quam. The thing being compared in the quam clause adopts the same case as the thing it is being compared with e.g. 'Phaedra is more lovely than Euclio' Phaedra (nom.) pulchrior est quam Eucliō (nom.); 'I hold you more foolish than him' habeō tē stultiōrem quam illum.

73 Superlative adjectives: longissim-us a um 'longest'

Superlative adjectives carry the meanings '—est', 'most . . .' 'very . . .', 'extremely . . .'; e.g. longissimus 'longest', 'very long', 'extremely long'.

Basic rule: look for -ISSIM- or -ERRIM-.

nom. acc. gen. dat. abl.	s. m. long-issim-us long-issim-um long-issim-ī long-issim-ō long-issim-ō	f. long-íssim-a long-íssim-ae long-íssim-ae long-íssim-ae long-íssim-ā	n. long-íssim-um long-íssim-ū long-íssim-ō long-íssim-ō
nom. acc. gen. dat. abl.	pl. m. long-íssim-ī long-íssim-ōs long-issim-ōrum ←	f. long-íssim-ae long-íssim-ās long-íssim-áru long-íssim-īs long-íssim-īs	n. long-íssim-a long-íssim-á im long-íssim-órum

Notes

1 These superlatives are again based on the gen. s. stem of the positive adjective, to which the endings -issimus -issima -issimum (older spelling

- -issum-us) are added, declining exactly like multus, e.g. ingens ingent-is ingentissimus a um.
- 2 Adjectives ending in -er like pulcher, celer, miser, form their comparatives regularly (based on the stem of the gen. s.) but have superlatives in -errimus a um, e.g. pulcher (pulchr-ī) comp. pulchrior, sup. pulcherrimus; celer (celer-is) comp. celerior, sup. celerior, sup. celerior, sup. miserior, sup. miserior, sup. miserior.
- 3 Two common irregular adjectives are facilis, similis (and their opposites difficilis, dissimilis). These have regular comparatives (facilior, similior), but irregular superlatives facillimus, simillimus. See Reference Grammar J3.

Exercise

Add the appropriate forms of both comparative and superlative degrees of the given adjective to the nouns:

longus: diem, nocte celer: mīlitēs, oculō ingēns: aedēs, familiam pulcher: manūs, mulierum stultus: consilia, homini, operum

74 Irregular comparatives and superlatives: bonus, malus, multus, magnus, paruus bon-us a um	melior (meliōr-is)	optim-us a um	'good', 'better', 'best' (cf. ameliorate, mal-us a um	peior (peiōr-is)	pessim-us a um	optimise) 'bad', 'worse', 'worst' (cf. pejorative, mult-us a um	plūs (plūr-is)	plūrim-us a um	pessimist) 'much', 'more', 'most'

magn-us a um	maior (maiōr-is)	maxim-us a um	(cf. plus(+)) 'big', 'bigger', 'biggest' (cf. major, maximise) paru-us a um minor (minōr-is) minim-us a um 'small'/'few', 'smaller'/'fewer'/ 'less', 'smallest'/

'fewest'/'least'
(cf. minor, minimise)

These decline quite regularly (see longior longissimus) except for plūs:

m.|f. n.

nom. plūs plūrēs plūra

← plūribus →

← plūribus →

← plūribus →

Notes

1 Note: abl. s. in -e, n. pl. in -a: and then gen. pl. in -ium. plūs is consonant-stem, but plūrēs is i-stem (cf. 12).

2 To express 'more . . .' in the s., plūs + gen. 'more of . . .' is used (cf. satis, nimis, quid?), e.g. plūs pecūniae 'more (of) money'. In the pl., plūrēs is an adjective and agrees regularly with its noun, e.g. plūrēs hominēs 'more men'.

Read this passage carefully, translating in word-order, defining the functions of words and the groups to which they belong, and stating at each point what you anticipate on the basis of the information you already have. Then translate into correct English. Finally, read out in Latin, phrasing correctly, thinking through the meaning as you read. Use the running vocabulary of 3A.

summus means 'the top', 'highest point' and gives us 'to sum', i.e. calculate the total of, since the Romans added columns of figures from the bottom up, till they reached the summa līnea 'the top line'. Hence a 'sum', especially of money. summārius is an accountant, one who does the sums, or sums up, whence English 'summary'. A 'summit' is the highest point of a hill. A 'consummation' is the complete (con-) summing up, so a completion or achievement.

Do not confuse with 'summon' – from submoneō 'warn secretly' – or words like 'consume', 'assume' from sūmō 'take up' 'take upon oneself' 'spend'.

fortis means 'strong' or 'brave'. The English 'force' derives ultimately from the n. pl. of fortis, i.e. fortia. English derivatives include 'fort', 'fortify' and 'fortitude'. They also include 'comfort' ('strengthen together' or 'strengthen considerably') and 'effort' (through Old French esfors, 'forcing oneself out' $(es-= Latin \ ex)$).

Notes

Section 3B

- 1 Formation of perfect stem
 - (a) The perfect stem of the deponent is regularly formed by adding -t-us a um to the stem of the verb. Thus:

1st conj.: minā-t-us a um

2nd conj.: pollici-t-us a um (note that -e changes to -i)

4th conj.: mentī-t-us a um

Standing on its own, it forms the perfect participle and means 'having —ed' (see 77), e.g. minātus 'having threatened' etc.

- (b) You have now met the three 'principal parts' of deponent verbs, i.e. the present indicative active (e.g. minor), the infinitive (e.g. minārī) and the perfect (e.g. minātus). Of regular deponent verbs, the principal parts are formed as follows:
 - 1: minor minārī minātus
 - 2: polliceor pollicēri pollicitus
 - 4: mentior mentīrī mentītus

These are the bases for forming all parts of the deponent, and must be learned from now on.

4th conjugation deponent verbs are unpredictable in their formation of the perfect stem. Perfect stems of these verbs are formed in -t-us a um and -s-us a um. Here are the three 'principal parts' of the irregular deponents you have met so far (including one 2nd decl. verb):

in -s-us a um

2 uideor uidērī uīsus 'I seem'

in -t-us a um

3 (ad-) loquor loqui locütus 'I speak (to)' sequor sequi secütus 'I follow' obliuiscor obliuisci oblitus 'I forget' irāscor īrāscī īrātus 'I get angry' adipīscor adipīscī adeptus 'I gain', 'I get' proficīscor proficīscī profectus 'I set out'

2 Formation of deponent perfect indicative

To form the perfect indicative deponent, the perfect stem ending in -us -a -um (which means on its own 'having —ed') is combined with the appropriate part of sum es est sumus estis sunt, e.g. locūtus sum (lit.) 'I am (in a state of) having spoken', 'I spoke', 'I have spoken', 'I did speak'. Since the perfect stem ending in -us -a -um acts as an adjective, it must agree with the subject, e.g.

'I (= a woman) spoke' locūta sum

'they (= the men) promised' pollicitī sunt

'the boy lied' puer mentītus est

'you (= the women) set out' profectae estis

The perfect stem in -us a um will be in the nominative, since it is agreeing with the subject of the sentence.

3 Meaning

The meaning, literally 'I am (in a state of) having —ed', can be treated as identical with 'I —ed', 'I have —ed' and (in certain cases) 'I am —'—a present state which results from a past action.

76 Semi-deponents: audeo and fio

A number of verbs, called 'semi-deponents', adopt active forms in some tenses, and deponent forms in others. Of the tenses you have met so far, present and future forms of such verbs are active in form; the perfects, however, are deponent in form. Thus:

audeo 'I dare' audere 'to dare' (no perfect active stem) ausus 'having dared'

Present	Future	Perfect
aúde-ō 'I dare'	audé-b-ō 'I shall dare' audé-bi-s	aús-us a um sum 'I dared'
aúdē-s aúde-t	audé-bi-t	aús-us a um es aús-us a um est

audé-tis	audé-bi-tis	aús-ī ae a éstis
aúde-nt	audé-bu-nt	aús-ī ae a sunt

fio 'I become', 'I am made', 'I happen' fierī 'to become, be made' (no perfect active stem) factus 'having become', 'having been made'

Present	Future	Perfect
	fi-a-m 'I shall become' etc.	fáct-us a um sum 'I became' etc.
fī-s	fī-ē-s	fáct-us a um es
fi-t	fi-e-t	fáct-us a um est
_1	fì-é-mus	fáct-ī ae a súmus
_1	fī-ć-tis	fáct-ī ae a éstis

Exercises

- 1 Form and conjugate the perfect of: meditor, conor, uideor, obliuiscor, proficiscor, mentior, progredior, patior, (optional: conspicor, adipiscor, polliceor, hortor, sequor, recordor, egredior, irascor).
- 2 Translate each perfect then change s. to pl. and vice versa: locūtus sum; uīsum est; recordāta est; mentītī sumus; ingressae sunt, pollicita es; secūta sunt; adeptus est; (optional: īrāta est; oblītus sum; passa es; profectus est; meditātī estis; arbitrātī sunt; suspicātae sunt).
- 3 Say what verbs these perfects come from and translate: uīsus est; adepta est; oblītus sum; ingressae sumus; locūtī estis; profectī sunt; factum est.
- 4 Give the Latin for: she has threatened; they (m.) set out; I (m.) have encouraged; you (s. f.) seemed; we (f.) forgot; he promised; it happened; you (pl. m.) have lied.

5 Give 3rd s. and pl. present, future and perfect of these verbs and translate: īrāscor, minor, polliceor, mentior, patior, (optional: proficīscor, ingredior, uideor, fiō, recordor.

Perfect participles deponent: 'having -ed'

A participle is an adjective which derives from a verb and shares the nature of both (from pars and capio 'take a share/part in'). In English, it tends to be formed in '-ing' or 'having -ed', e.g. 'I saw the man running', 'the men, having departed, reached home'. The perfect stem of deponent verbs ending in -us, -a, -um is the perfect participle and means 'having ed', e.g. minātus 'having threatened', locūtus 'having spoken', ēgressus 'having gone out'. These perfect participles decline like multus a um and, like any adjectives, agree with the person described as 'having -ed', e.g. 'the woman, having spoken, goes out' mulier locūta ēgreditur, 'the men, having spoken, go out' homines locūtī ēgrediuntur, 'I see the soldiers having-gone-out / the soldiers when they have gone out' mīlitēs ēgressos uideō.

Participles are on the whole used predicatively, i.e. they say what people do rather than describe or define people. Thus mulier locuta egreditur should be translated 'the woman - after speaking/having spoken/when she has spoken/speaks and - goes out'. It is not accurate to translate it 'the woman who has spoken goes out'. See 'predicative', p. xxi.

Exercises

- 1 Give the meaning of these words and say from what verb each comes: locūtus, profectus, adeptus, īrātus, conātus, precatus, suspicatus, pollicitus, hortātus, uīsus, ēgressus, factus, (optional: arbitrātus, opīnātus, mentītus, secūtus, passus, adgressus).
- 2 Translate these sentences:
 - mīlitem ingressum cēpit.
 - homines paulum (a little) meditati uenerunt.
 - ille multa mentītus abiit.
 - exercitus celeriter ex urbe progressus mox castra posuit.
 - haec locuta exiit.

Translation hint

Deponent participles can, of course, control their own little clauses (and sometimes not so little), in the same way that infinitives do. Observe how infinitives and some direct objects in the following sentences depend on the participle, not on the main verb:

> homines fugere conatos necauimus 'we killed the men having-tried to escape', '... the men after they had tried to escape' (fugere depends on conatos) > mulieres hoc locutas non amo 'I do not like the women having-said / since they said this'

> mīlitēs, multa minātī, ēgrediuntur 'the soldiers, having threatened much, depart'

Observe the way in which the participles in such complex sentences gravitate towards the end of their clause, in the same way that main verbs and infinitives tend to. Often this results in a pleasing 'bracketing' effect rather like an equation, especially when the participle has a direct object, e.g. 'The priest, seeing the horse galloping down the street, gave chase.' A typical Latin order for this would be: 'The priest (nom.), the horse (acc.) down the street galloping (acc.) seeing (nom.), gave chase.'

Exercise

Select subject, verb, adjective and participle in these sentences:

- (a) She writhed about, convulsed with scarlet pain. (Keats)
- Naked she lay, clasped in my longing arms. (Rochester)
- I saw three ships go sailing by on Christmas day. (Do you place 'on Christmas day' with the 'I saw' clause or the 'go sailing by' clause?)
- Know you not, / Being mechanical, you ought not walk / Upon a labouring day . . .? (Shakespeare)
- (e) See! from the Brake the whirring Pheasant springs, And mounts exulting on triumphant Wings: Short is his Joy; he feels the fiery Wound, Flutters in Blood, and panting beats the Ground. (Pope)

Section 3B

79 Regular and irregular adverbs

79

A common way of forming adverbs in English is to add '-ly' to an adjective (e.g. 'slow-ly', 'quick-ly', 'passionate-ly'). In Latin, adverbs (which never change) are also regularly formed from adjectives as follows.

Adverbs based on 1st/2nd declension adjectives: add -ē to the stem, e.g. stultus – stultē 'foolishly'; miser – miserē 'unhappily'; pulcher – pulchrē 'beautifully'. A very few end in -ter.

Adverbs based on 3rd declension adjectives: add -(i)ter to the stem, e.g. fortis-fortiter 'bravely'; audāx - audācter 'boldly'; celer - celeriter 'swiftly'. But note an important exception: facile 'easily'.

Here are some irregularly formed adverbs:

bonus – bene 'well'

paruus – paulum '(a) little', 'slightly'

multus – multum 'much'

magnus – magnopere 'greatly' (= magnō + opere)

NB. longē (regularly formed from longus 'long') 'far'.

Exercises

1 Identify and translate the adverbs in this list: horum, audacter, mulier, malum, multae, male, liberi, bene, omne, libere, magnopere, multum, scelere, pater, celeriter, pulchre, proelium, paulum.

2 Form adverbs from these adjectives and translate: stultus, bonus, fortis, longus, similis, saeuus, tacitus, magnus, celer, multus, miser.

3 The Roman literary critic Quintilian here lists the sorts of styles an orator will need to develop to suit all occasions. Translate:

80 sē; su-us a um

So far you have met ego 'I' (pl. nōs 'we'), tū (pl. uōs 'you') and their possessive forms meus 'mine', tuus 'your(s)', noster 'our(s)', uester 'your(s)'. But we have not yet fully grappled with the reflexive forms for 'him, her, it, them' and their possessive forms 'his, her(s), its, their(s)'. Latin makes an important distinction between reflexive usage of such words (which means that the 'him, her' etc. being referred to is the same person as the subject of the clause) and non-reflexive (when the 'him, her' etc. being referred to is not the same person as the subject of the clause). When Latin uses a form of sē, the 'him, her, it, them' being referred to is the same person as the subject of the verb of the particular clause. Likewise, when Latin uses a form of suus a um, the person referred to in the 'his', 'her(s)', 'their(s)' is the same as the subject of the verb, e.g.:

Phaedra sē amat 'Phaedra loves (sē must = Phaedra) herself' Nīcobūlus suōs nummōs habet 'Nicobulus has (suōs must refer to Nicobulus) his own (i.e. no-one else's) money'

Phaedra eam amat 'Phaedra loves (eam CANNOT be Phaedra) her (i.e. some else)'

Reading

1 As you translate in word-order, determine the limits of the participle phrase in each of these sentences and say what function it has in the sentence (i.e. agreeing with and describing subject, object, indirect object etc.) Then translate into correct English, finally returning to the Latin to read it out correctly phrased. E.g. hanc praedam adeptī domum regressī sunt. Participle phrase: hanc . . . adeptī: agreeing with subject. 'When they had obtained this booty, they returned home'. Read out with a comma pause after adepti.

- Amphitruō igitur mīlitēs eō tempore hortātus in proelium sē tulit.
- dux mīlitēs allocūtus est et praedam post uictoriam pollicitus signum dedit.
- uxor Amphitruonis uirum in uia conspicata domo egressa est.
- uxorī multa precatae et constantiam uirī recordatae Amphitruo tamen nīl respondit.
- seruus autem dominum multa mentītus facile dēcēpit.
- 2 Read these participle phrases, translating in word-order, and decide their function in the sentence (NB. there are no ablatives). Then pair each with the correct ending from the list below. Finally, having translated into correct English, read aloud in Latin, phrasing correctly, and thinking through the meaning as you read.
 - ciuibus otium et pacem adeptis . . .
 - lēgātōs haec uerba locūtōs . . .
 - manum seruōrum in castra hostium profectōrum . . .
 - eī mulierī clam in bellum uirum secūtae . . .

Reading exercise / Test exercise

Read this passage carefully, translating in word-order, determining as you go the function of the words met and the groups in which they should be phrased and stating what each new item makes you anticipate. Translate into correct English, then read aloud in Latin, phrasing correctly, thinking through the meaning as you read.

English-Latin

1 Translate into Latin:

(a) Our general, after encouraging the army, gave the signal.

(b) Amphitruo addressed the enemy through ambassadors.

(c) All men when they have gained wisdom prefer peace and leisure to war.

(d) The enemy set out from the camp at that hour.

(e) Although I have tried to speak clearly to them, the enemy have threatened me fiercely.

(f) They killed the man when he had spoken thus.

2 Read through the text of 3B again and then translate this passage:

sosia When Amphitruo had spoken through ambassadors to them, the Teleboans replied thus to him: 'You have attacked our land. Go away at once. If you do not leave, we will fight.' Thus they spoke. But Amphitruo, a man of very great courage, after advancing with his army from the camp, encouraged his men. Then he led them into battle. The battle was (a) massive (one). However, our leader gained a famous victory and has now returned home.

castrum

'caster', '-cester', '-chester' endings to the names of towns indicate 'camp' e.g. Lancaster, Worcester, Manchester and Chester. castrum has a diminutive castellum, whence 'castle' and in French château (a French circumflex accent often indicates a 'hidden' s; cf. Latin fenestra 'window', French fenêtre). Newcastle upon Tyne was so called because it had a Novum Castellum built by William Rufus in 1080.

81→

castrum may be akin to castro, 'I cut', i.e. castrum = 'a place cut off'. 'entrenchment'. If so, castrum and English 'castrate' have similar origins!

sequor

sequor 'I follow' has a present participle sequens 'following' and perfect participle secutus 'having followed'. From these we get 'sequel' and 'sequence' and through the French suivre a 'suit', hence 'suitor', one who pursues a marriage partner, and 'sue', to chase someone at law. 'Pursue' derives from prosequor (French poursuivre). consequor 'I follow all together', gives 'consecutive' and 'consequence'. exsequor 'I follow out' gives 'execute' in the sense of 'carry out' or 'judicially put to death'. obsequor 'I follow on account of / in accordance with the wishes of' gives 'obsequious', while persequor 'I follow thoroughly' gives 'persecute'. subsequor 'I follow under', hence to succeed (as in a list), gives 'subsequent'.

Grammar and exercises for 3C

81 Future participles, active and deponent: 'about to / on the point of -ing'

Future participles of both deponent and active verbs are always active in meaning. They mean 'about to —', 'on the point of —ing', 'intending to —', and are formed by adding -ūrus a um to the stem of the perfect participle, e.g. minātūrus 'about to threaten', amātūrus 'about to love' etc. As with deponent perfect participles, these forms are adjectives and must agree in person, number and gender with the person 'about to . . .', e.g. locūtūra (fem.) est 'she is about to speak'; ēgressūri sunt 'they are about to go out'; eōs prōgressūrōs uideō'I see them on the point of advancing'. Note the clue to form in the word 'future' — giving you -ūr-us.

82 The 4th principal part (perfect participle) of active verbs

You have already met three principal parts of active verbs, i.e. the dictionary form, the infinitive and the perfect (e.g. amō, amāre, amāuī; habeō, habēre, habuī etc.). The perfect participle is formed as follows:

Regular principal parts

	Present indicative	Present infinitive	Perfect indicative	Perfect participle passive
1st conj.	ámō	amāre	amấuī	amā-t-us a um
2nd conj.	hábeō	habēre	hábuī	hábi-t-us a um
4th conj.	aúdiō	audīre	audīuī	audī-t-us a um

Notes

1 As you can see, the perfect participle is regularly formed by adding -t-us a um to the stem: amā-t-us, audī-t-us etc. Note habi-t-us (-e- changes to -i-). Thus the future participles of the three regular conjugations will be amāt-ūr-us a um, habit-ūr-us a um, audīt-ūr-us a um.

2 For the curious, the meaning of this participle on its own is 'having been —ed', e.g. amātus 'having been loved'. Cf. 77 for deponent and ed'. The perfect participle meaning 'having been —ed' will not be met properly till 151.

83 Unpredictable principal parts

The principal parts of all 3rd and 3/4th conj. verbs are best treated as unpredictable, and need to be learned. Note, however, that stem + -tus (sometimes + -sus) is one pattern, e.g. dīc-o dic-tus. Here are the full principal parts of the active verbs of these conjugations which you have learned so far, listed by ending of perfect participle, plus those of irregular 1st, 2nd and 4th conjugation verbs.

² No past participle; in such cases we give the future participle, if it exists.

Note

As you attempt to learn these vital 4th principal parts, you will not fail to notice how extraordinarily fruitful they have been in the formation of English words. You will find that you can frequently form an English word by adding '-ion', '-ive', '-ure' and '-or' to the stem of the perfect participle (cf. p. 31): try the list above. For formation of the future participle see 81 and 82 above.

Exercises

1 Translate these future participles and say what verb each is from: intrātūrus, clāmātūrus, factūrus, habitūrus, monitūrus, mānsūrus, audītūrus, mentītūrus, ēgressūrus, ductūrus, captūrus, (optional: suspicātūrus, reditūrus, locūtūrus, datūrus, rogātūrus, precātūrus, dictūrus, dēfēnsūrus, dēlētūrus, solūtūrus, passūrus).

2 Say which in this list are future participles and which past: scrīptūrō, locūtae, āctūrīs, inuentūrī, secūtās, ēgressūra, acceptūrōrum, futūrā, morātārum, gestūrum, nūntiātūrōs, suspicātus, uictūram, hortātōs.

3 Give the Latin for: about to go; on the point of making; intending to defend; about to give back; on the point of laughing; about to place; about to see; intending to order; intending to deceive.

84 The ablative of instrument or means - 'by means of', 'with'

We have identified three areas of usage for the ablative:

(a) Locative, e.g. 'in', 'at', 'on', 'within' of place and time (cf. 10, 67).

(b) Separation (cf. auferō – ablātus 'I take away') e.g. ex, ab + abl. (cf. 23).

(c) The ablative of description, e.g. 'a woman of/with great courage' (cf. 49).

We now meet the 'instrumental' usage of the ablative for the first time. This shows the instrument with which or means by which an action is carried out, e.g.

pugnīs mē uerberat 'he beats me with his fists / by means of his fists' / using his fists as the instrument'.

pedibus hūc uenit 'he comes here by means of his feet / on his feet'.

Exercises

2 Translate:

85 nonne? ('doesn't . . .?') nonne? asks a question in such a way that the speaker wants the answer to it to be 'yes'. The best formula for translation is 'doesn't x happen?' (or 'x does happen, doesn't it?'); 'surely?' is also a safe translation. E.g.

nonne eam amo? 'don't I love her?', 'I do love her, don't I?', 'surely I love her?'

1 Translate into Latin:

- (a) What is that slave intending to do?
- (b) Surely he's going to relate the battle to Alcumena?
- (c) I intend to fool him with my tricks and my fists at the same time.
- (d) For I've come here intending to threaten him with death1.
- (e) I've decided2 to take his name from him by this trick.

sosia I'd better keep quiet. If he touches me with those fists, surely I'll be worth as much as a flatfish.

Word-building

(a) Suffixes

-fex fic-is as a suffix is connected with faciō 'I make', 'I do' and commonly expresses occupation. So $carnufex = car\bar{o}$ (carn-) 'meat' + fex, 'meat- 'craftsman'; aurifex = aurum + fex, 'goldsmith'.

Nero said of himself on his death-bed quālis artifex pereō 'What an (quālis) artist perishes in me!'

(b) Perfect participle

The perfect participle is an enormously fruitful source of vocabulary (cf. p. 171). Many English words are formed by the addition of '-ion', '-ure', '-ive', '-or' to that stem, e.g. 'production', 'diction', 'factor', 'missive', 'capture', 'perfection', 'action', etc., etc. Consequently, you can use these words to help you determine what the perfect participle is. For example, what is the perfect participle of scrībō? scrībitus? No English word 'scribition'. But there is a word 'inscription'. Chances are, therefore, that the perfect participle is scrīptus. Likewise, for Latin-into-English translation, a word like prōgressūrus reminds one of 'progression', i.e. going forward.

-ūr-a ae 1f. added to the stem of the 4th principal part generates abstract nouns denoting:

action: scrīptūra 'writing' (scrībō 'I write') result: nātūra 'birth', 'nature' (nāscor 'I am born') occupation: mercātūra 'trade' (mercor 'I sell, trade)

Word exercise

Give the meaning and Latin connection of these words: form, pedestrian, ameliorate, pejorative, interrogate, station, mansion, vision, retention, possession, position, verify, gesture, solution, concoction, elation, future, status, amateur.

Everyday Latin

placebo – the harmless pill or coloured water given to pacify hypochondriac patients

id. = idem 'the same' (usually, 'the same author') ibid. = ibidem 'the same place in the same author already cited' Those on their way to die in the gladiatorial arena saluted the emperor with the words auē ('hail'), Caesar, moritūrī tē salūtant auē atque ualē 'hail and farewell', 'hello goodbye' (common on tombstones)

One's magnum opus is one's 'great work' – usually referring to a book

The following phrases will help you revise the difference between in + acc, and in + abl:

² Use mihi placet + infinitive.

in loco parentis 'in the position of a parent' in camerā 'in private', 'in secret' (camera = vaulted room, the origin of our 'chamber'. The term refers to legal judgements made privately by a judge in his rooms) in propriā personā '(speaking) in one's own person' in absentiā 'in one's absence' in flagrante delicto '(caught) in flagrant (open) sin (crime)', i.e. taken in the act, caught red-handed. in memoriam 'to the memory' in mediās rēs '(plunged) into the middle of the action'

pēs ped-is means 'foot', and is akin to Greek pous pod-os 'foot' - cf. 'octopus' ('eight feet'); 'podium'; 'antipodes' ('people with their feet opposite'); 'tripod' ('three-feet'). The adjective pedālis gives 'pedal' and pedester gives 'pedestrian', 'of the feet', hence, 'lowly', 'earth-bound', 'using one's feet'. pedō is late Latin for 'foot-soldier', whence English 'pawn', via Old French pion.

expediō means 'I free my feet from a trap', whence 'expedient', meaning 'advantageous' and to 'expedite', meaning 'get things moving'. Conversely, 'impede' comes from impedio 'I put feet in shackles'; so impedimentum 'hindrance'. impedico 'I tangle someone's feet in a pedica ('foot-trap')' gives Middle French empechier and English 'impeach', meaning 'charge with an official crime'. Less obviously, repudium, meaning 'back-footing', yields 'repudiate'. Piedmont is the area at the toot of the mountains (mons mont-is). Most fascinating of all, 'pedigree', a register of descent or lineage, comes from pes + de + grus, Middle French pié de grue 'foot of a crane', the three-line mark like a bird's foot (1) which is used to show family succession.

Datives

So far the dative case has been used to indicate the person advantaged1 or disadvantaged by an action (mī aurum dedit 'he gave the gold to me', mihi aurum abstulit 'he took the gold from me'; this sense includes the possessor also, e.g. est mihi pecūnia 'I have money'), and to indicate the person spoken to (mihi dīxit 'he spoke to me'). But, as was said at the time, the range of the dative is far wider than that, and its root meaning seems to be that the person is in some way interested or involved in the action of the verb, and when faced by a dative one should ask 'In what way is the person in the dative affected by the verb?'

Q. What is an omnibus? A. A vehicle 'for everyone' - 'to everyone's advantage'.

1 Possessive dative: further notes

Remember the two ways of expressing the idea of possession in Latin:

- habeō or teneō + acc. 'I have'. e.g. seruum habeō 'I have a slave'.
- est/sunt + person possessing in the dative (lit. 'there is/are to x . . .') e.g est mihi seruus 'there is a slave to me' 'I have a slave'; sunt Amphitruoni multi serui 'there are to Amphitruo many slaves', 'Amphitruo has many slaves'.

Note the idiom nomen Mercurio est mihi 'the name to me is Mercury' i.e. 'my name is Mercury'. Observe that Mercurio agrees with mihi (see 17B).

2 The sympathetic dative

This is used in place of the genitive to stress the involvement of the person, e.g. oculī mihi splendent 'the eyes for me are shining', i.e. 'my eyes are shining'.

3 Dative of judging

This means 'in the eyes of', e.g. uir bonus mihi uidētur 'he seems a good man to me', i.e. 'in my eyes'. Cf. Quīntia formōsa est multīs (Catullus) 'Quintia is beautiful to many', i.e. 'in many people's eyes'.

4 Ethic dative

This usage indicates that the person in the dative is or should be especially concerned about the action, e.g. quid mihi Celsus agit? 'what is Celsus doing (I am especially interested in what it is)?' (Horace). The best translation might be 'what is Celsus doing, please?' at tibi repente uēnit ad mē Caninius 'but Caninius suddenly came to me (and this is especially interesting to you)', i.e. 'Listen! / Guess what? / Pay attention: Caninius suddenly came to me' (Cicero).

5 Verbs which take the dative

All the following verbs take the dative and have meanings related to usages of the dative outlined above:

crēdō 'I have belief in', 'I trust': eīs crēdit 'he believes them'. (Cf. the meaning 'I entrust': crēdō x (acc.) to y (dat.), e.g. deō aurum crēdit 'he entrusts the gold to the god') faueo 'I favour', 'I give support to': fēminae fauet 'he favours the woman' praesum 'I am in charge of': ille exercituī praeest 'he is in charge of the army' pāreō 'I obey', 'I am obedient to': Mercurius patrī pāret 'Mercury obeys his father' impero 'I give orders': mulier nobis imperat 'the woman gives us orders' (NB. iubeo takes the acc. + infin., e.g. seruam exīre iubet 'he orders the slave to go out'.)

obstō 'I hinder' 'I stand in the way of': hic mīlitibus obstat 'he hinders the soldiers' licet1 'it is permitted': uōbīs licet 'it is permitted to you', 'you are allowed' placet1 'it pleases': cīuibus placet 'it is pleasing to the citizens', 'the citizens agree/vote' (cf. placet | non placet as voting procedure at some universities)

minor 'I make a threat against': dominus seruō minātur 'the master threatens the slave' adsum 'I am present with', 'I am close to', 'assist': sociis adest 'he is present with his friends', 'he helps his friends' supplicō 'I implore' 'I bow to': dīs omnibus supplicat 'he implores all the gods'

¹ For these 'impersonal verbs' see further 154 and Reference Grammar F2.

6 Non-personal uses of the dative

The dative case is used in certain circumstances to denote the purpose for which something is done, e.g.:

pecuniam doti dat 'he gives money for/as a dowry' mihi auxilio it 'he comes for a help to me' i.e. 'to help me'

Similar to this is the so-called predicative dative, where datives of purpose are used with the verb 'to be', e.g.

mīlitēs salūtī sunt cīuibus 'the soldiers are for a salvation to the citizens', 'the soldiers save the citizens', 'the soldiers are a salvation to the citizens' auxiliō erimus oppidō 'we shall be for a help to the town', 'we shall help the town'

Note the following predicative dative expressions:

uoluptātī sum 'I am a source of pleasure to x (dat.)' odiō sum 'I am a source of hatred to x (dat.)', 'I am hated by x impedīmentō sum 'I am a hindrance to x (dat.)'

(dat.)'

Reading exercise / Test exercise

Datives (or ablatives) placed early in a sentence are often difficult to tackle, until you come to the verb (or something else which solves the intransigent case). You must 'hold' the dative in these circumstances until you have information which will solve it. Read this passage and, as you translate it in word-order, say which are the datives and where the construction becomes clear. E.g.:

Section 3D

89→

ille mihi pecuniam multam auferre uult

At mihi there is no clue as to whether the idea is possession, advantage disadvantage or indirect object. So hold it as 'in relation to me', 'affecting me'. When you reach auferre, you can see that it is likely to be disadvantage, since that verb construes with accusative and dative meaning taking something away from someone.

Note that mihi, tibi and sibi are often to be found second word in their clauses, however far away the verb is.

Sōsia tum dominō Amphitruōnī, ubi ad nāuem eius ueniet, ita dīcet: 'uxōrī uerba tua nūntiāre nōn potuī, domine, quod mihi seruus ingēns pugnōs minātus est. mihi ille ferōciter obstitit. in aedīs igitur mihi intrāre nōn licuit. is enim seruus tuō seruō maximō fuit impedīmentō. necesse fuit igitur mihi ad tē regredī et eius imperiīs statim pārēre, quod mihi forma mea ita placet, ut est. officium hoc mihi nōn fuit, ut tū pollicitus es, uoluptātī, sed onerī magnō.' seruō autem ita respondēbit Amphitruō 'quid illī seruō ingentī nōmen est?' tum Sōsia 'eī nōmen Sōsiae est. nam mihi meum nōmen, formam meam, meam uōcem, omnia is seruus abstulit. mihi nunc est nōmen nūllum, nisi nēmo.'

English-Latin

- 1 Translate into Latin:
 - (a) A very large slave stood in my way.
 - (b) The old man has a pretty daughter.
 - (c) I am allowed to give orders to my soldiers.
 - (d) Money is a source of great pleasure to Euclio.
 - (e) A bad citizen is hated by everyone.
 - (f) I want everyone to obey my orders.
 - (g) This duty will be burdensome to my wife.
 - (h) (It is) the general (who) is in charge of the army, not the soldiers.
 - (i) You (s.) must return to your land very quickly.
 - (j) Lovers like things thus.
- 2 Read the text of 3D again and then translate this passage:

JUPITER Goodbye, my wife. I must go back to my troops.
ALCUMENA What's up? Am I a bore to you already?

JUP. On the contrary, you are a great pleasure to me. But when the general is not at the head of his army, the soldiers do not pay attention to their duties.

ALC. Don't go away, my husband. I shall be able to love you more, if you obey me.

JUP. Don't get in my way. I shall return soon, just as you want. But now I have decided to go. Goodbye.

Prefix

You have already met prae- as a prefix = 'before', 'in front of', e.g. praeeō 'I go in front', 'I go ahead'; praesum 'I am in front of', 'I am in charge'; but prae- can also mean 'extremely', 'very', e.g. praealtus 'very high'.

Give the meaning and Latin connection of: gratitude, auxiliary, voluptuary, brevity, minus, favour, licence, obstinate, tenacious, emperor, impede, necessary.

Everyday Latin

'Let there be sung Non Nobis and Te Deum' (Shakespeare, Henry V, IV.8.122: Henry V after the battle of Agincourt). Non Nobis is Psalm 115 (Vulgate, part of Ps. 113), which begins non nobis, Domine, non nobis, sed nomini tuo da gloriam (gloria ae 1f. 'glory'). Te Deum is the beginning of the canticle te deum laudāmus (laudō 1 'I praise').

'what use is it?').

The root of auxilium 'help' is augeō 'I enlarge', 'I increase', with its perfect participle auctus. Hence 'auction', an increasing, and 'author', originally an auctor 'increaser', hence 'founder', and so 'authority' etc. An augment is an increase, and aug-silium 'an increase (in forces)' 'an auxiliary'—hence 'help'. More strangely still, augur probably means 'one who predicts increase, i.e. success', so 'augury', 'inaugurate' (= 'give a start to', 'consecrate'). augustus signifies either 'consecrated by the augurs' or 'undertaken under favourable auspices'. This was the name given to Octavius Caesar in 27, who, as Augustus, was the first Roman emperor and gave his name to the month August. Note the following placenames which originate from the name Augustus: Val d'Aosta (Augusta Praetoria), Autun (Augustodunum), Zaragoza (Saragossa) = Caesaraugusta.

Notes

- 1 Imperfect ind. act. is formed by taking the present stem (+ key vowel -ē- in 3rd, 4th and 3rd/4th conjugations) and adding -bam, -bās, -bat, -bāmus, -bātis, -bant.
- 2 Note the regular personal endings: -m, -s, -t, -mus, -tis, -nt.
- The imperfect conjugation, being based on the stem of the present tense, is the tense of vivid, eyewitness descriptions for past events ('I was in the process of —ing', cf. present 'I am in the process of —ing'). The action, which is uncompleted (imperfectus 'uncompleted', cf. perfectus 'completed'), is depicted as continuing, or being repeated, or beginning or being attempted. Thus the most common translations for the imperfect are:

'I was —ing', 'I used to —', } (continuing, repeated)

'I began to —' ('inceptive' imperfect, cf. incipiō inceptus 'begin')
'I tried to —' ('conative' imperfect, cf. cōnor cōnātus 'try')

Since English does not always distinguish between completed and uncompleted actions, it will often be possible to translate the imperfect as a simple past tense, e.g. uidēbātur 'it seemed'.

6 Semi-deponents (see 76) take the active form of the imperfect, i.e. audē-bam 'I was daring', fīē-bam 'I was being made'. In summary, semi-deponents have ACTIVE forms in the present, future and imperfect (audeō, audēbō, audēbam) and DEPONENT forms in the perfect (ausus sum).

- 3 Give the Latin for: I used to think; he was abandoning; they were throwing; we used to follow; you (s.) were reporting; she was going out; they were accustomed; you (pl.) were; we were stating strongly; (optional: he used to find; they were daring; you (s.) were speaking; they used to lie; I was encouraging; you (pl.) were setting out; we were removing; I was asserting).
- 4 Give 3rd s. and pl. of the following verbs in present, future, imperfect and perfect: sentiō, minor, uetō, tollō, eō, sum, audeō, adipīscor, uideor, teneō, adgredior, mentior, accūsō, colō, (optional: loquor, negō, soleō, taceō, reperiō, proficīscor, perueniō, dēferō, sequor, faciō).

põnam, tollēbātis, relīquit, habēbit, tacēbant, opīnāberis, arbitrābāris, expugnant, repellēbās, iūdicābātis, coniēcistis, (optional: dormiēbātis, iubēbitis, sequēbātur, hortābimur, uolēbās, sciētis, promittis, habuistis, inueniebāmus, inībimus, coquēbat, āmittis, crēdēbant, recordābitur).

91 iste a ud 'that (of yours)'

iste declines as follows:

m. f. n. m. f. n.

nom. ist-e ist-a ist-ud ist-$$\bar{1}$$ ist-ae ist-a

acc. ist-um ist-am ist-ud ist- $\bar{0}$ ist- $\bar{1}$ ist-as ist-a

gen. \leftarrow ist- $\bar{1}$ ist- $\bar{0}$ ist

Notes

- 1 iste declines exactly like ille 64. Cf. is 70. iste also has a neuter s. in -d, a gen. s. in -īus and dat. s. in -ī.
- 2 iste is frequently used contemptuously of an opponent in a lawsuit and is so used of Verres by Cicero throughout his Verrine speeches.

Exercises

1 Say with which of the nouns in each line the given form of iste agrees:

istīus: seruī, fēminae, templī, manūs, rēī, custodis, impetūs istā: lēge, uirginem, seruī, sacerdōte, negōtiō istī: seruī, uirtūtī, manuī, negōtiō, mīlitēs ista: fēmina, clāmor, rēs, simulācra, puellā

2 Make iste agree with these nouns: seruī (2 possibilities), negotio (2 possibilities), uirtūtī, custodibus, manūs (3 possibilities).

2 quidam is the nearest classical Latin ever got to an indefinite article, 'a', 'a certain'.

- 1 Translate and identify the case of: seruorum quorundam; custodī cuidam; signa quaedam; clāmorēs quosdam; dolo quodam; iūdicibus quibusdam.
- 2 Say with which of the nouns in each line the given form of quīdam agrees: cuiusdam: seruā, templī, sacerdōtis, custōdum, manūs, impetū quaedam: fēmina, rēs, negōtia, mīlitēs, lēgēs, loca quīdam: custōs, nūntius, puerī, mīlitēs, magistrātūs, iūdicēs

93 num 'surely . . . not'

You have already met nonne, which means 'doesn't?' 'surely?' ('it is the case, isn't it?') (85), e.g. nonne serui templum intrauerunt? 'the slaves have entered the temple, haven't they?'

num puts the opposite emphasis, i.e. 'surely something is not the case?', 'it isn't the case, is it?', e.g.

num peiōra audīuistis? 'surely you have not heard worse things?',
'you haven't heard worse things, have you?'
num seruī effūgērunt? 'surely the slaves haven't run away?', 'the slaves haven't run away, have they?'

nonne ('surely x is the case?') is used to ask a question in such a way that the speaker is trying to get the listener to answer 'yes'.

num ('surely x isn't the case?') is used to ask a question in such a way that the speaker is trying to get the listener to say 'no'.

94 Forming the infinitive in Latin

You have already met present infinitives (cf. 41, 58), but here is a revision table:

Here are the other infinitive (active and deponent) tables:

95 Perfect infinitive active 'to have -ed'

1 2 3
'to have loved' 'to have had' 'to have said' amāu-isse (or amāsse) habu-isse dīx-isse

4 3/4
'to have heard' 'to have captured' audīu-isse (or audiisse or audīsse) cēp-isse

Notes

1 Perfect infins. act. are formed by taking the stem of the 3rd p. p. and adding -isse.

2 Note how -ui- can be dropped, giving e.g. amāsse (amāuisse) 'to have loved', dēlēsse (dēlēuisse) 'to have destroyed', nōsse (nōuisse) 'to have got to know', 'to know' (from nōscō 3 nōuī).

Perfect infinitive deponent 'to have -ed'

'to have promised' 'to have threatened' minat-us a um ésse pollicit-us a um ésse

'to have lied' 'to have advanced'

locutus a um ésse mentit-us a um ésse progréss-us a um ésse

Notes

'to have said'

1 The perfect infin. dep is formed by combining the perfect participle with the infin. of the verb 'to be', esse.

2 The perfect participle acts as an adjective and must agree with the person doing the action, e.g.

> 'he seems to have lied' uidētur mentītus esse 'the girls seem to have spoken' puellae uidentur locutae esse Future infinitives active and deponent 'to be about to-'

Active 'to be about to love' amātūr-us a um ésse Deponent 'to be about to threaten' 'to be about to have' habitűr-us a um ésse

'to be about to say' dictūr-us a um ésse

'to be about to promise' minātūr-us a um ésse pollicitur-us a um ésse 'to be about to speak' locūtūr-us a um ésse

Active 'to be about to hear' audītūr-us a um ésse

'to be about to capture' captūr-us a um ésse

Deponent 'to be about to lie' mentītūr-us a um ésse progressūr-us a um ésse

'to be about to advance'

Notes

1 The future infinitives active and deponent are formed in exactly the same way, i.e. combining the future participle with esse (cf. perfect deponent infinitives 96).

2 The future participle acts as an adjective and will agree with the person 'about to-', e.g.

'he seems to be about to speak' uidētur dictūrus esse 'she seemed to be about to listen' uidēbātur audītūra esse 3 The future infinitive of 'to be' is either (regular) futurus esse or the fixed form fore.

4 Verbs which have no future participle have no future infinitive. Among these are: uolō, mālō, nōlō, possum. Note that uīsūrus esse means 'to be about to see' (never 'seem'), factūrus esse means 'to be about to make/do' (never 'become').

Exercises

1 Form the present, perfect and future infinitives of: sum, accūso, expugno, confirmo, iubeo, reduco, tollo, conicio, egredior, mentior, uenio, eo, (optional: sentiō, audeō, ferō, nōlō (no future infinitive), adipīscor, conor, facio, patior, do, colo).

2 State the tense of these infinitives and say which verbs they come from: passūrus esse, loquī, amāuisse, sentīre, habitūrus esse, sustulisse, minātus esse, uelle, itūrus esse, expugnāre, secūtus esse, poscere, posuisse, adeptus esse, iūdicāsse, repertūrus esse, dēferre.

3 Give the Latin for: to seem; to have forbidden; to be about to think; to report; to have found; to be about to remove; to follow; to have remembered; to be about to lie; to promise; to have spoken; to be about to forget; (optional: to have driven back; to be about to worship; to throw; to be about to confirm).

4 Pick out the infinitives and say what tense each is, stating also what part of the verb the others are: solitus es, dētulistis, confirmauere, affirmare, sequere, coluisse, putā, hortātus esse, reperīre, mentīre, accūsātūrus esse, ausus est, repellere, loquere, expugnauisse, auditurus esse, dēferēbat, iudicātūrus esse.

98 Indirect (or reported) statements: the accusative and infinitive

Observe the following utterances:

dīcit Verrem uenīre 'he says Verres to be coming' i.e. 'that Verres is coming'.

nuntiant seruos peruenisse 'they announce the slaves to have arrived' i.e. 'that the slaves arrived'.

non puto Verrem abiturum esse 'I do not consider Verres to be about to go' i.e. 'that Verres will go'.

In all these cases, where English uses a 'that' clause, Latin (i) dispenses with the equivalent of 'that', (ii) puts the subject of the clause in the accusative and (iii) puts the verb in the infinitive.

This is Latin's way of reporting a statement (the direct statement of (a) above being 'Verres is coming', of (b) 'the slaves have arrived' etc.).

So be on the lookout for verbs of saying, thinking, knowing, reporting, announcing followed by the accusative and infinitive. Translate such sentences literally first, and then adjust to the English 'that' form.

Notes

- 1 English has a parallel construction, e.g. 'he knows me to be wise', or 'he knows that I am wise'.
- 2 Latin uses the reflexive (sē, suus) to refer in the 'that' clause to the subject of the main verb, e.g.

Caesar dīxit sē peruēnisse 'Caesar said that he (= Caesar) had arrived'

Caesar dīxit eum peruēnisse 'Caesar said that he (= someone else) had arrived'

3 Observe the correct English form when the main verb is past, e.g.

Caesar dīxit Rōmam sē uentūrum esse 'Caesar said himself to be about to come to Rome', i.e. 'Caesar said that he would come to Rome'

Caesar dīxit Rōmam sē uēnisse 'Caesar said himself to have come to Rome', i.e. 'Caesar said that he had come to Rome'

Caesar dīxit Romam sē uenīre 'Caesar said himself to be coming to Rome' i.e. 'Caesar said that he was coming to Rome'

4 Note that the normal position for $s\bar{e}$ is second word in its sentence or clause (see examples in n. 3 above). If it comes first word in its clause, or first word after a natural break in the sense, it is usually emphatic, e.g. Caesar mihi heri dīxit sē Rōmam uentūrum esse 'Caesar said to me yesterday | that as for himself he would come to Rome'. This rule applies to all pronouns.

5 The accusative and infinitive construction is so common in Latin that Latin will sometimes use it with an introductory noun (implying speech) e.g. nūntium accēpī seruōs templum intrāuisse 'I received a message (saying) that the slaves had entered the temple'. Very often, several indirect statements (sometimes a whole speech) follow one another with no repetition of the introductory word(s). So remember always to start your final translation of a Latin accusative and infinitive with the English word THAT, e.g.

dīxit seruos templum intrāuisse; custodes effugisse; seruos simulacrum commouere 'he said that the slaves had entered the temple; that the guards had fled; that the slaves were shifting the statue'

99 negō 'I say (that) . . . not', 'I deny'

Latin generally does not use $d\bar{i}c\bar{o}$ + negative to express the idea 'I say that . . . not', but prefers $neg\bar{o}$, e.g.

negat seruos templum intrauisse 'he says that the slaves did not enter the temple' (lit. 'he denies the slaves to have entered the temple')

Reading exercises

In each of these accusative and infinitive phrases, state who is doing the action, the tense of the action (i.e. when it would have occurred in direct speech) and, if applicable, the object or complement of the infinitive: then translate, remembering to begin with 'that'. See 984 for normal position of see etc. Note that in some cases (e.g. (d)) there is ambiguity. E.g.:

eum filiam amare (a) eum: 'that he' or 'that him' (i.e. someone other than the subject of the introductory verb)

- (b) filiam: 'the daughter' (subject or object of amare)
- (c) amare: (present) 'loves'

i.e. 'that he loves the daughter' or 'that the daughter loves him'

- (a) seruos templum expugnatūros esse.
- (b) Verrem seruōs ad templum mīsisse.
- (c) Assorinos Chrysam colere.
- (d) Verrem mē accūsātūrum esse.
- (e) simulācra sē amāre.
- (f) Scīpionem hominem summā hūmānitāte fuisse.
- (g) omnia sē conspicatas esse.
- (h) istum nocte ex urbe ēgressūrum esse.
- (i) clāmōrem magnum factum esse.
- (j) eum domum īre.
- 2 In the following passage, as you read, underline the acc. + inf. phrase with a single line and the introductory verb with a double line (be careful, as the introductory verb may appear before, in the middle, or at the end of the phrase). As you meet each acc. + inf. phrase, repeat the process outlined for Exercise 1 above. Next, translate the passage and finally read it aloud in Latin, taking care to phrase correctly.

Cicerō templum esse apud Agrigentīnōs dīxit. id affirmāuit nōn longē ā forō esse. in hoc templum intrāuisse dīxit Verris seruōs. eōs Verrem mīsisse Cicerō opīnātus est. Verrēs autem sē hoc fēcisse negābat. fāma percrēbrēscēbat Verris seruōs in templum ingressōs esse et custōdēs templum dēfendere cōnātōs esse. magnum clāmōrem custōdēs fēcisse putāuit Cicerō; Agrigentīnōs igitur ex urbe prōgressōs esse et ad templum uēnisse. fūgisse tum seruōs Verris affirmāuit. Cicerō negābat umquam sē scelera peiōra audītūrum esse.

3 Before translating, say whether each sentence contains an acc. + inf. phrase (reported statement) or merely a prolative infinitive (i.e. after verbs like uolo etc.).

- (a) negārunt fierī id posse.
- (b) id uos facere noluit.
- (c) tē Chrysae simulācrum tollere iubeo.
- (d) seruos se necare conatos esse affirmabat.
- (e) Verrem simulācrum sustulisse fāma erat.
- (f) mē Verrem accūsāre, iūdicēs, uolēbant omnēs Agrigentīnī.

4 Using the introductory verbs given, change the bracketed sentences from direct to indirect statements (acc. + inf.), then translate the passage:

Cicerō dīcit (templum apud Agrigentīnōs est nōn longē ā forō). affirmat (ibi est simulācrum Herculis pulcherrimum). negat (pulchrius simulācrum quam illud numquam cōnspicātus sum¹). fāma est (ad hoc templum Verrēs repente nocte seruōs quōsdam armātōs mīsit). dīcit (hī concurrērunt et templum expugnāuērunt). affirmat (custōdēs templī clāmāuēre et seruīs obsistere templumque dēfendere cōnātī sunt). dīcit (mox et peiōra et scelestiōra audiētis²).

2 Read the text of 4A(iv) again, then translate this passage:

The Syracusans have a law concerning the priesthood of Jupiter. Cicero says that this law enjoins the Syracusans to elect three men; that the Syracusans must then cast lots; that one of the three men becomes priest. He states that Verres wanted to give the priesthood to a friend, called Theomnastus, that the Syracusans refused, but¹ that Verres by a trick achieved his object.

Word-building

per-, rather like prae-, often intensifies the meaning of the word to which it is added, e.g. antīquus 'old', perantīquus 'very old'.

Note the way the following prefixes may change in response to the consonant to which they are attached (this is called assimilation):

ad + capi\bar{o} = accipi\bar{o}^1 'I receive' ad + firm\bar{o} = affirm\bar{o}^2 'I assert' ad + loquor = alloquor 'I address' ad + propinqu\bar{o} = appropinqu\bar{o} 'I draw near' ad + tul\bar{i} = attul\bar{i} 'I have brought (to)' ad + rapi\bar{o} = arripi\bar{o} 'I seize' inter + leg\bar{o} = intelleg\bar{o} 'I understand' sub + capi\bar{o} = suscipi\bar{o} 'I undertake' sub + c\bar{e}d\bar{o} = succ\bar{e}d\bar{o} 'I go under'

sub + ger\bar{o} = sugger\bar{o} 'I supply' sub + rapi\bar{o} = surripi\bar{o} 'I steal' sub + tul\bar{i} = sustul\bar{i} 'I filched'

¹ Use se to introduce this; change numquam to umquam.

Observe how a short a (capiō) becomes i (accipiō) when a prefix is added. Cf. rapiō arripiō etc.

² It is common for the prefixes ad- and con- to be printed without assimilation. e.g. adloquor, conloco.

Suffixes: revision

-c(u)lum, -crum added to a verb stem give neuter nouns, e.g. simulō 'I copy', 'I pretend' + -crum = simulācrum 'image', 'statue'; pō-tus 'drink' + culum = pōculum 'drink', 'cup'; uehō 'carry' + -culum = uehiculum 'carriage'. Such words are usually instruments for carrying out the action.

-iō, -iōnis 3f. added to the stem of the perfect participle gives an abstract noun, e.g. legō lēct-us 'I read'→lēctiō 'reading'; audiō audītus 'I hear'→audītiō 'hearing' etc. Cf. sessiō, mōtiō, accūsātiō etc. Such words show an action, or its result.

Grammar and exercises for 4B

100A The ablative case: summary of forms and usages to date

Here is a summary of the forms of the ablative:

Notes

- If you pay attention to the length of the vowels in the ending, you will cut out some of the possible confusions, e.g. -is = nom. s. (e.g. cīu-is) or gen. s. (e.g. urb-is) of 3rd decl., while the dat./abl. pl. of the 1st/2nd decl. is -īs (e.g. seru-īs). Confusion may result, however, from the acc. pl. form of 3rd decl. -i- stems, which is -īs (e.g. cīu-īs).
- 2 Watch out for the long -ā of 1st decl. abl. s. (e.g. seru-ā) and do not confuse it with the short -a of the 1st decl. nom. s. f. (e.g. seru-a) and the 2nd/3rd decl. n. plurals (e.g. consilia, scelera, ingentia).

3 The -ō of the 2nd decl. can be dat. or abl. (e.g. seru-ō).

4 The -e of the 3rd decl. (e.g. urb-e) should not be confused with the -e of the nom. acc. s. n. of adjectives (e.g. trīst-e).

Section 4B

5 The -ī of the 3rd decl. adjectives (e.g. trīst-ī) and one noun-type (mare, which you will meet in 125) should not be confused with 2nd decl. -ī in the gen. s. (seru-ī) and nom. pl. (seru-ī).

None of these problems will arise if you make sure you know to which declension nouns and adjectives which you learn belong.

The ablative: survey of uses

Four usages of the ablative have been met so far: with prepositions meaning in, at and from (10.23) (e.g. in templo, $\bar{e} f \bar{a} n \bar{o}$); in descriptions (49) (e.g. homo summā uirtūte); in time phrases (67) (e.g. illō tempore, decem annīs); and the 'ablative of means (or instrument)' (84) (e.g. pugnīs mē uerberat).

It is now time to bring these usages together and add some more. Basically, the ablative has three functions:

the 'true' ablative (ablātus from auferō - 'I take away'), the point from which the action, literally or figuratively, moves, e.g. ē templo, ā fāno.

the 'locative' ablative, i.e. the point in time or space where or when something takes place, e.g. in templo, illo tempore, decem annis.

the 'instrumental-accompanying' ablative, i.e. the means/instrument by which the action is carried out, or the people, qualities or circumstances which accompany the action (in English, often 'by' or 'with'), e.g. uir summā uirtūte (qualities which accompany the action) and pugnīs mē uerberat (means/instrument by which the action takes place).

The ablative often seems a difficult case because it appears to have so many uses, but if you remember these three basic functions you will see how (what appear to be) separate uses slip into place.

100B Further uses of the ablative

1 Under 'true' ablative: the ablative of comparison (the standard from which comparisons can be made), e.g.

> 'this town is more famous than all others' hoc oppidum clārius est omnibus aliīs ('all the others' are the starting-point from which comparisons are made)

Observe that there is no equivalent of 'than' in this construction. Cf. the construction using quam which you have met at 724, where the two things compared are put in the same case, e.g. hoc oppidum clārius est quam omnia alia.

2 Under 'instrumental-accompanying' ablative: the ablative of attendant circumstances, 'together with', e.g. peruënit cum magnā calamitāte cīuitātis 'he came with great disaster for the state', 'he came and the circumstances in which he came led to great disaster'. cum + abl. is frequent, but sometimes cum is omitted and the plain ablative used.

3 Under 'instrumental-accompanying' ablative: the ablative of manner, which shows how something is done. This can again be constructed with cum or not, e.g.

summā celeritāte peruēnit summā cum celeritāte peruēnit he arrived with great speed'

- 4 Under 'instrumental-accompanying' ablative, the ablative after ūtor 3 dep. ūsus 'I use', and fruor 3 dep. frūctus 'I enjoy', e.g. hīs uerbīs ūsī 'using these words'.
- 5 Under 'instrumental-accompanying' ablative: the ablative expressing measure of difference. E.g.

Verrēs multo turpior est quam comites sui 'Verres is much (i.e. by a great amount) viler than his companions' sõl multīs partibus maior est quam terra 'The sun is many times (lit. 'by many parts') larger than the earth' (Cicero)

101 Genitive of description

The genitive case is often used for description (cf. the ablative at 49), e.g.

eum filiam habēre eximiae pulchritūdinis 'that he had a daughter of outstanding beauty'

Cf. English idiom. Note that an adjective always accompanies the noun in this usage.

Exercises

- 1 Gen./dat. s. are normal for pronouns, cf. huius, illīus, istīus, eius, cuius (also nūllīus, ūllīus, ūnīus, tōtīus, sōlīus) illī, istī, eī, cui (also nūllī, ūllī, ūnī, tōtī, sōlī). For nom. s. m. cf. ille and iste; other forms are like mult-us a um.
- 2 ipse is an emphatic and intensive adjective often used to resolve ambiguities as to subject or object, e.g.

retinēte uōs ipsōs 'restrain you/yourselves', 'restrain yourselves' ipse hoc faciō 'It is actually I myself who am doing this'

Compare the phrase ipsō factō 'by the actual/very act'. ipse can be translated 'self', 'very', 'actual', e.g. id ipsum mihi placet 'that's the very thing I like'. It can stand on its own as a noun, e.g. ipsī 'the men themselves'.

Exercises

Reading

Pick out the ablative phrases in Exercise 2 p. 216 above. Write your translation next to each. Then say what each phrase adds to the sentence (you may use the formal categories, but it is more important that you try to define their function in your own way first). E.g.

more Graeco biberunt: 'they drank in the Greek way' more Graeco: this tells us the way they drank; ablative of manner.

Do not be surprised if occasionally you find it difficult to be precise or if a phrase may fit more than one category.

English-Latin

- 1 Translate into Latin:
 - (a) Verres was more wicked than Rubrius.
 - (b) The people of Lampsacum used to enjoy peace and leisure.

- (c) Philodamus was a man of great seriousness, Verres a man of great lust. 1
- (d) The cooks were getting the party ready amid conversation and merriment.
- (e) Verres and his friends were drinking in the Greek way.
- (f) The people of Lampsacum were beating the door with their fists and at the same time shouting at the top of their voices².

1 Translate each phrase in two different ways.

² Use abl. s. of summa uox.

Section 4B

2 Reread the text of 4B(iii), then translate this passage into Latin: Philodamus was a man of great seriousness, but¹ nevertheless always much more hospitable than others. He invited Rubrius and his friends to a party. They all came very quickly. They were drinking amid conversations and merriment. But suddenly Rubrius ordered Philodamus to call his daughter. Philodamus said that he would not call her. Then there was a scene.

Real Latin howlers

Not everyone could handle Latin as Cicero did. It is comforting to know that ordinary Romans and later ordinary clerics made all sorts of mistakes in speech and in writing. Here are a few examples.

In Petronius' Satyricon (1st century A.D.) an ex-slave uses the forms loquis (active for loqueris deponent) and uīnus (m. for uīnum n.).

Suetonius (first century A.D.) reports that the emperor Augustus dismissed a scribe for spelling ipsī as ixī.

Graffiti written on the walls of Pompeii buried by the eruption of Vesuvius (24 August 79 A.D.) are full of spelling errors, e.g.

Felix ad ursos pugnābet (= pugnābit) 'Felix will fight against bears' futuī formosa formā puella (= formosam . . . puellam) 'I laid a beautiful girl'

Paris isse (= ipse) 'Paris himself'

The Appendix Probi (third or fourth century A.D.) lists correct pronunciations and spellings alongside common incorrect versions, e.g.

frīgida non fricda aqua non acqua (cf. Italian: acqua) auris (= 'ear') non oricla (cf. Italian: orecchio)

Later things got even worse. This inscription on a gravestone in Pannonia (3rd century A.D.?) shows not just spelling errors, but the accusative being used as the subject!

hīc quēscunt duās mātrēs (= hīc quiēscunt duae mātrēs) 'here lie two mothers'

Boniface (c. 700 A.D.) heard a priest carrying out a baptism:

in nomine patria et filia et spīritus sanctī (= in nomine patris et filiī et spīritus sanctī)

One MS. of Petronius' Satyricon, written in the mediaeval period, writes abbās sēcrēuit 'the abbot hid' instead of ab asse crēuit 'he grew from nothing' (lit. 'from a penny').

A fuller account of the development of Latin from the first century A.D. to the twelfth appears in Reading Medieval Latin.¹

The Roman general Crassus left for Parthia in 55 never to return. He died at Carrhae in 53. After the event, Cicero said he should have listened to the fig-seller on the quayside as he boarded ship. He was crying cauneās ('figs'). But what he was really saying, said Cicero, was caue ne eas 'beware lest you go'! This joke has been used as evidence for the pronunciation of Latin.

104 Pluperfect indicative active 'I had -ed'

1st s. 2nd s. 3rd s. 1st pl. 2nd pl. 3rd pl.	1 'I had loved' amāu-era-m (or amāram etc.) amāu-erā-s amāu-erā-t amāu-erā-mus amāu-erā-tis amāu-era-nt	2 'I had had' habú-era-m habú-erā-s habú-era-t habu-erā-mus habu-erā-tis habú-era-nt	3 'I had said' dix-era-m dix-erā-s dix-erā-t dix-erā-mus dix-erā-tis dix-era-nt

Notes

1 The pluperfect (plūs quam perfectum 'more than finished') means 'had —ed', and pushes the merely 'finished' (perfectum) perfect even further back into the past. In other words, the action of the pluperfect occurs before that of the perfect.

2 It is formed by taking the stem of the 3rd p. p. and adding:

-eram

-eras

-erat

-erāmus

-erātis

-erant

Note that the normal active personal endings are used (-m, -s, -t, -mus, -tis, -nt).

3 As we have observed elsewhere (65), the ue and u can be dropped, giving e.g. amā-ram amā-rās etc. and audi-eram audi-erās etc.

4 Whereas in Latin ubi 'when' and postquam 'after' are generally followed by the perfect tense, English usually translates with the pluperfect, e.g.

ubi Verrēs haec fēcit, domum rediit 'when Verres had done this, he went home'.

105 Pluperfect indicative deponent 'I had -ed'

1st s. 2nd s. 3rd s. 1st pl. 2nd pl. 3rd pl. NB. The deponent pluperfect is formed by taking the perfect participle in -us -a -um as appropriate, and adding the imperfect of sum, eram erās etc. The perfect participle acts as an adjective and will agree with the subject of the verb (see on perfect deponents 75).

Exercises

1 Form and conjugate the pluperfect indicative of these verbs (give the meaning of 1st s. pluperfect): conor, excogito, uideor, moneo, utor, facio, absum, colligo, commoueo, (optional: constituo, reuoco, nolo, fero, fruor, cupio, recipio, proficiscor, coepi).

2 Translate each verb, then change s. to pl. and vice versa: ōrāuerātis, cōnspicātus erās, commōuerat, hortātae erant, peperceram, recordāta erat, receperamus, amplexus eram, cecideras, obliti eramus, neglexerant, progressi eratis, (optional: afuerant, conatus eram, circumieras, suspicata erat, reuocaueratis, passi erant, excogitauerat, ausa eras, constitueramus, precatae eratis, cognoueram, uisi eramus).

3 Give the Latin for: I had decided; you (s. m.) had suffered; they had called back; they had remembered; he had become acquainted with; she had obtained; we had devised; you (pl. m.) had embraced; we had collected; you (s.) had disturbed (optional: he had cut; you (s. m.) had spoken; we had besought; they (f.) had set out; you (pl.) had run together; she had gone out; they had understood; we had forgotten).

4 Give 3rd s. and pl. of the following verbs in present, future, imperfect, perfect and pluperfect indicative: reuocō, teneō, arbitror, uideor, neglegō, sentiō, ūtor, patior, fīō, nōlō, sum, colligō, cōnstituō, (optional: circumeō, commoueō, cognōscō, adgredior, faciō, precor, mentior, fruor, cupiō, absum, polliceor).

5 Locate and translate the pluperfects in this list, stating the tense of each of the other verbs: excōgitābam, reuocāuerat, passus est, collēgerās, circumībit, commouet, perlēgerant, cognōscet, cōnātus erās, āfuērunt, fuerātis, recēpit, ēgressī erant, ingressa est, pōnit, ūtētur, cecīderāmus, (optional: obsecrāuērunt, ōrāuerās, suspicātus sum, amplectar, hortātus erat, dēdūcēbātis, cupīueram, precābimur, pollicita es, oblītus eram, fruēmur, secūtī erant, audēbis, audiēbam, ausus erās).

106 The relative pronoun quī quae quod 'who', 'which'

Notes

1 The forms of quī relative are identical with those of the interrogative adjective quī 'who?', 'what?' (29).

Punctuation will normally tell you whether you are dealing with a form of the interrogative.

Section 4C 107

2 The function of a relative is adjectival: it is to identify or describe a noun. It does this by means of a complete subordinate clause, i.e. a clause with a finite verb of its own, e.g.

'I see the cat which is sitting on the mat': 'which . . . mat' is the relative clause, describing 'cat'.

'the barge (which) she sat in, like a burnished throne, burned in the water': relative clause '(which) she sat in' describing barge. Note how English can omit the relative. Latin never does.

'... the oars were silver, (c) Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made The water which they beat to follow faster' 'which . . . stroke': relative clause describing 'oars'; 'which . . . beat': relative clause describing 'water'. (Anthony and Cleopatra II.ii, describing Cleopatra's barge)

3 'Antecedent' (antecēdō 'I go before') is the technical term for the word which the relative refers back to, e.g. 'I dropped the books which I was carrying' ('books' = antecedent); 'the cups which belonged to Diodorus went to Verres' ('cups' = antecedent).

4 The relative takes its gender (m. f. or n.) and its number (s. or pl.) from the antecedent. When you come across a relative in Latin, you must check that it is the same gender and number as the word you think is its antecedent. The case of the antecedent is irrelevant.

5 The relative takes its case not from the antecedent, but from its function inside the relative clause. Consider the following sentences:

'Verres hated Diodorus, who wanted to keep his own property' 'who' is m. and s., because the antecedent is Diodorus. But while Diodorus is object of 'hated' (in Latin Diodorum), 'who' is subject of 'wanted' (since Diodorus, the person meant by 'who', 'wanted to keep his own property'). The relative form will therefore be m., s. and nom., i.e. qui.

Verrēs oderat Diodorum, qui sua seruare uolēbat.

'Diodorus, whom Verres hated, was afraid' 'whom' will be m. and s., since it refers back to Diodorus, but will be accusative in case, since it is the object of 'Verres hated' ('Verres hated Diodorus', the person represented by 'whom'). Diodorus, quem Verres oderat, timebat.

Now determine the case of the relative for the examples in n. 3 above.

The connecting relative

A relative at the start of the sentence, referring back to something or somebody in the previous sentence, is best translated by English 'this', 'he', 'she', 'it'; e.g.

> hominēs audīuī. quōs ubi audīuī, . . . 'I heard the men. Which (men) when I heard, . . . 'i.e. 'when I heard these men / them'.

Note in particular the order of words. The relative comes first, to emphasise that it is picking something up from the previous sentence, even though it may belong to an ubi 'when' or postquam 'after' clause. Cf.

> ad amīcum litterās mīsit. quās ubi ille perlēgit, . . . 'he sent a letter to a friend. When that man had read it . . .' (Latin word-order 'which when that man had read . . .').

Exercises

- Translate these sentences and locate the antecedent of qui in each:
 - Diodorus parua pocula, quae Mentor fecerat, habebat.
 - litterae, quās scrīpserat, mox in Siciliam peruēnērunt.
 - uiros, qui se Romae esse affirmauerant, reuocabat.
 - rēs scelesta est quam excogitauistī.
 - Diodorus, quem Verres pocula quaedam pulcherrima habere sciēbat, abierat.
 - Diodorus genere nobili natus erat, quod clarum numquam factum erat.
- 2 In these sentences, the antecedent is underlined, but the correct part of qui is omitted and replaced by the English. Insert the correct part of qui and translate the sentences:
 - uir erat (whom) omnēs fēminae amābant.
 - femina erat (to whom) omnis uir placebat.
 - uirgō, (whom) Verres amāre uoluerat, nobilis erat.
 - multī hominēs, (who) Verris comitēs factī erant, fīliī nobilium erant.

- (e) pōcula parua, (which) Verris comites conspicati erant, Mentor fecerat.
- (f) multī hominēs, (whose) cupiditātem cīuēs bonī maximam esse arbitrātī erant, ad Verrem ībant.
- (g) Verris comites simulacrum, (which) ille cupire ausus erat, e templo sustulerunt.
- (h) comites, (whom) Verres Lilybaeum secum deduxerat, Diodori pocula conspicati erant.
- 3 Say which noun is the antecedent of the given relative:

quae: poculīs, annum, praetorēs, templum quem: fēminam, mulieris, uiros, seruus cuius: litterās, hominum, genus, prouinciās quī: fīlio, ratione, cupiditātī, lēgēs quibus: senātū, fāna, uirtūtis, amīcum

- 4 Translate these ubi clauses (see 1044), which all begin with a connecting relative (107). E.g. quem ubi uīdit . . . 'and when he had seen him . . .'
 - (a) quod ubi audīuit . . .
 - (b) quae ubi nārrāuit . . .
 - (c) quas ubi reuocauerunt . . .
 - (d) quos ubi conspicati sunt . . .
 - (e) cui ubi minātus est . . .

108 More uses of the ablative

1 Under 'true' ablative: 'ablative of origin, or source' ('from'):

nātus genere nōbilī 'born from a good family'

2 Under 'instrumental-accompanying' ablative: 'ablative of cause', showing why an action was carried out ('out of', 'because of', 'from'):

timore hoc fecit 'he did this from fear' (i.e. because of his fear).

Verres hominem argenti cupiditate accūsāuit 'Verres accused the man out of desire for silver'.

109 The ablative absolute

If you come across a noun in the ablative in agreement with another noun or adjective (especially a participle) in the ablative, regard it as an ablative of 'attendant circumstances' and translate 'with' or 'in the circumstances of', e.g.

Verre praetore 'with Verres (as) praetor', 'in the circumstances of Verres (as) praetor' tē praetōre 'with you (as) praetor', 'in the circumstances of you (as) praetor' mē amīcō 'with me (as) friend', 'in the circumstances of me (as) friend'

You can then retranslate to make a better English phrase or clause which points up the circumstances more clearly, e.g.

Metellō et Afrāniō cōnsulibus 'with Metellus and Afranius as consuls'→'in the consulship of Metellus and Afranius', 'when Metellus and Afranius were consuls'.

(This expression is used to date events: the year indicated here is 60, where Horace dated the origin of the civil wars.)

110 The locative

Section 4C

Names of towns and one-town islands (e.g. Melita = 'the town of Malta') do not use a preposition to express 'in(to)', 'towards', 'at' and 'from'. In this way they follow the example of domus, which you have already met, for which domum = to home, $dom\bar{\imath} =$ at home, $dom\bar{\imath} =$ from home.

Such words use the accusative to express 'to', e.g. Romam 'to Rome'; Carthaginem 'to Carthage'.

They use the ablative to express 'from', e.g. Romā 'from Rome'; Carthāgine 'from Carthage'.

They use the locative to express 'at'. Here are the locative endings:

$$\begin{cases}
1st \text{ decl. s. } -ae \\ 2nd \text{ decl. s. } -\overline{i} \end{cases} = gen. s. \begin{cases} pl. -\overline{i}s \\
pl. -\overline{i}s
\end{cases} = abl. pl.$$

$$3rd \text{ decl. s. } -\overline{i} = dat.s. \qquad pl. -ibus \end{cases} = abl. pl.$$

Some examples:

'at Rome' Romae 'at/from Athens' (pl.) Athenis 'at Carthage' Carthagini

Note

- 1 With certain sorts of word (denoting place or district) the ablative without a preposition is used to express 'at' or 'in', e.g. eō locō 'in that place'. Note the common phrase terrā marīque 'on land and sea'.
- 2 'To/from the vicinity of' a town is expressed by ad/ab, e.g. ad Rōmam 'to the vicinity of Rome'; ā Rōmā 'from the vicinity of Rome'.
- 3 There are a very few locatives of common nouns (cf. domī). Note rūrī (from rūs 3n.) 'in the country'; humī (humus 2f.) 'on the ground'; bellī (bellum 2n.) 'in war'; mīlitiae (mīlitia 1f.) 'in war', 'on military service'; animī (animus 2m.) 'in the mind'.

Exercises

 - (a) uirgō fāmae optimae.
 - (b) Cicerone et Antonio consulibus (the year 63).
 - (c) mē duce.

English-Latin

- 1 Translate into Latin:
 - (a) Diodorus, who possessed many beautiful cups, had gone away from Lilybaeum to Rome.
 - (b) In Verres' praetorship, in the whole province men were able to devise wicked crimes.
 - (c) Verres, who was born of a noble family, always acted from lust, rather than from courage.

(d) The friends, whom Verres had brought with him to the province, were scoundrels.

2 Reread the text of 4C(ii), then translate this passage into Latin:
When Verres heard this¹, from madness he decided to accuse Diodorus in his absence². In the whole province the matter was well known. The story was that Verres through greed for silver had accused an innocent man in his absence². Diodorus, who was at this time in Rome, told his patrons everything which he had heard. When Verres' father learned this¹, he sent a letter to him. In this¹ letter³ he said that everyone throughout the city knew that Verres was a scoundrel. When Verres had read this¹, he held back his lust, from fear, rather than from shame.

Suffixes

-ēnsis frequently makes an adjective out of a place-name, e.g. Melita (Malta)→Melitēnsis; Londinium→Londiniēnsis; Cantabrigia (Cambridge) → Cantabrigiēnsis etc.

-ānus can also serve this function, e.g. $R\bar{o}ma \rightarrow R\bar{o}m\bar{a}nus$ 'Roman', but has a wider range too, e.g. $m\bar{o}ns$ mont-is 'mountain' \rightarrow montānus 'from the mountains'.

Revision

-i-a ae 1f. forms an abstract noun, e.g. īnsānus 'mad'→īnsānia 'madness'; miser 'wretched'→miseria 'wretchedness'.

-or (or -ōs) -ōr-is 3m. forms abstract nouns of condition, e.g. furor 'madness', amor 'love', timor 'fear', honor (or honōs) 'respect', etc.

Grammar and exercises for 4D

The passive

The active 'voice' (as it is called) usually indicates that the subject is doing something e.g. 'Tom hits the ball'. The passive voice is used to say exactly the same thing, only another way round, this time with the subject having something done to it (cf. passus 'having undergone, suffered' from patior) e.g. 'The ball is hit by Tom'. The subject 'ball' here is not doing anything - it is having something done to it by Tom (who is called (when he functions like this in a sentence) 'the agent', lit. 'the doer', 'person doing' (from $ag\bar{o}$)).

Here are the forms of the passive, with meanings, of all four conjugations, in present, future, imperfect, perfect and pluperfect indicative, the present, perfect and future infinitive, and the present imperative. It should not be too long before you recognise that the forms of the passive and the forms of the deponent are ABSOLUTELY IDENTICAL. Consequently, THERE IS VIRTUALLY NOTHING NEW TO LEARN HERE.

Section 4D

NB. Latin sometimes uses the 'vivid' present tense, where in English we would naturally use a past tense. Consequently, do not hesitate to translate a Latin present tense into the past in English if it suits the passage better. E.g. nāuis pīrātārum Syrācūsās . . . appellitur in 4D(i) means 'a pirate-ship was brought to shore at Syracuse'.

'that there is a movement to love' amatum iri that there is a movement to have' habitum iri that there is a movement to say' that there is a movement to say' that there is a movement to hear' auditum iri

3/4
'that there is a movement to capture'
cáptum írī

Notes

- 1 īrī is the impersonal passive infinitive of eō 'I go', i.e. 'to be gone'. In the context of an acc. + inf. clause, this means 'that there is a movement'.
- 2 The forms amātum, habitum etc. are called 'supine'. Basically, the supine expresses purpose, e.g. amātum 'to love', audītum 'to hear' etc. Cf. cubitum it 'he goes to lie down', sessum it 'he goes to sit', Vārus mē uīsum dūxerat 'Varus had brought me to see' (Catullus).
- 3 Consequently, the literal meaning of the so-called 'future infinitive passive' is 'that there is a movement to . . .', e.g.

putant sē audītum īrī 'they think that there is a movement to hear them' i.e. 'that they will be heard' fēmina negat sē amātum īrī 'the woman denies that there is a movement towards loving her', i.e. 'that she will be loved'

4 The supine has a fixed form (ending -um). Its stem is the same as that of the 4th p.p. See A7.

Imperfect

ad-i-ba-r etc. 'I was being approached'

Perfect

ád-it-us sum etc. 'I was / have been approached'

Notes

1 The forms of the passive are identical with those of deponents. But while deponent verbs only have an active meaning (e.g. sequor 'I follow' (you cannot say 'I am being followed' using sequor)), active verbs will have an active meaning when they use active forms, and a passive meaning when they use passive forms, e.g. amō 'I love', amor 'I am loved'.

2 'By' a person in Latin is expressed by $\bar{a}/ab + abl.$; 'by'/'with' a thing is expressed by the plain ablative (ablative of instrument – see 100A(c). E.g.

'The boat was captured by Tadius' nāuis ā Tadiō capta est 'They were being hit by with an axe (i.e. executed)' feriēbantur secūrī

If a person is seen as a tool, or is unwillingly involved, \bar{a}/ab can be dropped, e.g.

uxore paene constrictus 'almost strangled by his wife' ab uxore would mean she meant it.

3 uideor 'I seem' is actually the passive of uideo and not a real deponent verb. It can also, therefore, mean 'I am seen'. uīsūrus is fut. participle of uideo, and means 'about to see' (never 'about to seem').

4 fīō fierī factus sum is the passive of faciō, meaning 'I am made' (as well as 'I become', 'I happen').

Exercises

1 Form the passive parts of these verbs as specified in the bracket. Conjugate imperatives and indicatives. Translate imperatives, infinitives and 1st s. of indicatives: līberō (pres.), adiuuō (impf.), iubeō (fut.), uideō (pres.), ferō (plupf.), caedō (perf.), reuocō (pres. inf.), cōnfirmō (perf. inf.), recipiō (pres.), dīcō (fut.), (optional: commoueō (imperative), colligō (pres.), uideō (perf. inf.), recipiō (pres. inf.), sentiō (pres.), dēdūcō (imperative), accūsō (plupf.), relinquō (impf.), auferō (perf.), pōnō (fut.)).

2 These verbs include both deponents and passives. Say which each is and translate: secūta est, accūsātur, ablāta sunt, relictus est, portātur, loquitur, mentītus est, conspicābātur, arbitrābitur, conābitur, nārrābitur, nūntiātum est, uīsum est, ausum est, (optional: fertur, adipīscitur, dīcitur, fruētur, colligētur, orābātur, opīnābātur, passus erat, iussus erat, amplexus est, caesus est, relinquī, sequī, dīcere, ūtere).

 - (b) Money was being given to Verres by the pirates.

(c) Young men are being sent to Rome.

(d) It had been announced that the ship had been captured and was being brought 1 to Syracuse.

2 Reread the text of 4D(ii), then translate this passage into Latin:
The Syracusans had an account of the pirates who had been executed.
This¹ account had been made² from the number of oars which had been taken. A large number of pirates was missing, because many had been set free by Verres. However, in the pirates' place Roman citizens were substituted. Verres claimed that they had been soldiers of Sertorius. Although they were known³ by many Syracusans, they were killed with the axe.

³ Use pluperfect of cognosco.

The achievements of Augustus

From now on till the end of the Verres texts, each grammar section will contain a passage from the res gestae (lit. 'things done', i.e. 'achievements') of the first Roman emperor Augustus, written by himself to commemorate himself. He ordered them to be inscribed on bronze tablets and set up in front of his mausoleum.

The period of Roman history in which the Verres story is set was one of increasing turmoil. The Roman republic was passing more and more into the domination of army-backed factions, led by men like Sulla, Pompey, and later Julius Caesar, whose power brought them the leading positions in the state. In 49, civil war broke out between Caesar and Pompey, and Caesar emerged as victor. But on the Ides of March 44, Julius Caesar was murdered by a group of pro-republican activists (led by Brutus) who felt that Rome was becoming a one-man state. In the ensuing civil war, two factions emerged: that of Gaius Octavius, known as Octavian, the adopted son of Julius Caesar, and that of Marcus Antonius (Mark Antony), who looked to the East and the wealth of the Egyptian queen Cleopatra to support his bid for power. At the battle of Actium in 31, Octavian emerged triumphant, but he faced problems as serious as those faced by Julius Caesar, i.e. how to reconcile the Roman aristocracy, with their implacable hatred of any idea of 'monarchy', to the fact that the old-style 'Republic' was dead, and that the rule of one man was Rome's only hope of survival. Granted the additional name 'Augustus' by a grateful Roman people and senate in 27, he succeeded by making himself the embodiment of Roman standards, ideals and above all, stability, and by presenting the new order, which was in fact the foundation of an imperial dynasty, to make it look like the old republic restored, though he was in fact in control of it. As we shall see, he restored ancient rituals and customs and temples, and engaged writers (like Virgil and Horace) to play their part in propagating his image and ideals, but the most authentic 'statement' about what he stood for is his own - the res gestae dīuī Augustī ('the achievements of the divine Augustus'), which he wrote himself.

These extracts are adapted only by the excision of the more difficult passages, so you are reading here Augustus' actual words.

NB. The glossaries for these passages contain both vocabulary and hints on how to read each sentence as it comes. The instruction 'hold' suggests that the meaning of the word cannot be finally decided at that point in the sentence; you are asked to keep information about the word in mind until it is 'solved' by later developments.

Grammar and exercises for 4E

Present participles '-ing', 'while -ing'

Present participles of both active and deponent verbs are formed in the same way - with -ns added to the stem (+ key vowel-e- in 3rd, 4th and 3rd/4th conjugations). They are declined like ingens (ingent-), e.g.

m./f. m.lf. n. ámā-ns ámā-ns amánt-es amánt-ia amánt-em ámā-ns amánt-īs (-ēs) amánt-ia acc. ←amánt-ium (-um)→ ←amánt-is→ gen. dat. ←amánt-ī→ ←amánt-ibus→ abl. ←amánt-e (-ī)→ ←amánt-ibus→

So in conspectus we get:

Active

3/4 'loving' 'having' 'hearing' 'capturing' 'saying' ámāns hábēns dicens aúdiēns cápiens amant- habent- dīcent- audient- capient-

Deponent

3/4 'advancing' 'threatening' 'promising' 'speaking' 'lying' progrédiens mínāns méntiens póllicens lóquens mentiéntprogrediéntminántpollicéntloquent-

Notes

- 1 Observe that the very word 'present' is itself a participle form (praesens praesentis) from praesum 'I preside'; so the word 'present' is in itself a clue to the form and meaning of present participles. (Cf. 'future', which gave the clue to the -ūr-us ending of future participles, 81).
- 2 Present participles mean '-ing', and indicate that the action of the participle is going on at the same time as the verb of the clause.
- 3 As with future participles and deponent past participles, present participles act like adjectives in agreeing with the person 'doing' in gender, number and case. But they are most often used predicatively. See 77.
- 4 The ablative s. usually ends in -e, and the gen. pl. in -ium. The ablative s. ends in -ī when the verb is being used adjectivally. (Cf. English 'a charming man came here', 'I saw a man charming snakes': the first participle is being used adjectivally, the second with verbal force predicatively. See 77).
- 5 Note the irregular iens, eunt-is 'going' (from eo).
- 6 Note the common use of a noun in the ablative with a present participle (in s. always ending in -e), to mean 'while x is/was —ing', e.g. Cleomenē pōtante 'while Cleomenes was drinking'. Cf. the ablative absolute with nouns/adjectives, 109.

Exercises

Morphology

- 1 Form the present participle of each of these verbs. Give also gen. s. and translate: reuocō, incendō, accipiō, sentiō, iubeō, adipīscor, ēgredior, fruor, recordor, exeō, (optional: loquor, intellegō, commoror, cōnflagrō, egeō, nītor, nāuigō, mentior, oblīuīscor, cōnor).
- 2 Say with which noun(s) in each line the given present participle agrees:

înspicienti: seruae, muliere, militis, uiro accedentem: imperatorum, principem, multitudine, incendium nitente: Verri, mulieris, serua, imperatores commorantum: populum, mulierum, manum conflagrantibus: moenibus, cibus, nauis, ceteris circumiens: Iouis, Cicero, mulier, imperatores

3 Translate these sentences:

- (a) Verrēs muliere nītēns in lītore stābat.
- (b) illīs rogantibus praedo respondit sē nāuīs fugientīs uīdisse.
- (c) nautīs cibō egentibus, Cleomenes nihil fecit.
- (d) Verre mulierem amante, nuntiatum est nauem captam esse.
- (e) nauem incendio conflagrantem uidere potes.
- (f) reliquõs paulo tardius sequentis conspicati sunt.
- (g) Syrācūsīs commorantēs praedonēs moenia urbis uīdērunt.
- (h) Verrēs negāuit nāuīs sē ad portum accēdentīs uīdisse.
- (i) nūllus agentī1 dies longus est. (Seneca)
- (i) nīl difficile amantī. (Cicero)

4 Translate into Latin (using ablative absolute with present participle). E.g. as the leader delayed principe commorante.

in Verres' absence; while the sailors were following; with the people watching; as the ships were burning; with Cleomenes delaying; although the crowd was encouraging the leader.

Notes

1 Remember pluperfect subjunctive active as formed from the perfect infinitive active plus the normal personal endings (-m, -s, -t, -mus, -tis, -nt).

¹ ago 3 I am busy.

Section 4E

2 Observe how the -ui- can drop out (cf. 65, 1043), e.g. amā-ssem, dēlē-ssem (dēlēuissem) etc.

NB. The pluperfect subjunctive deponent is formed from the perfect participle in -us -a -um (agreeing with the subject) and the auxiliary verb essem esses esset etc. (imperfect subjunctive of sum).

123 Pluperfect subjunctive passive ('had been -ed')

1st s.	amát-us éssem	hábit-us éssem	díct-us éssem

NB. For formation of the pluperfect subjunctive passive, see note on plupf. deponent above, 122.

124 cum + subjunctive 'when', 'since', 'although' cum followed by the pluperfect subjunctive means 'when' or 'since x had —ed' (it can sometimes mean 'although').

Here are two examples of cum + pluperfect subjunctive:

cum abiissent, laetus eram 'when/since they had gone, I was delighted' cum haec locūtī essent, abiērunt 'when/since they had said this, they left'

Notes

1 Distinguish cum = 'with' (followed closely by an ablative) from cum = 'since', 'when', 'although'.

2 Remember mēcum 'with me', tēcum 'with you' nobīscum 'with us' etc., and quocum, quibuscum 'with whom'.

3 cum 'although' is often signposted by e.g. tamen or nihilominus in the main clause, e.g. cum sapiens esset, stulte tamen se gessit 'though he was wise, all the same he acted foolishly'.

4 It is common for conjunctions like cum, sī 'if', ubi 'when' etc. to drift towards the verb, i.e. away from the start of the sentence, e.g. ad templum cum peruēnisset, 'when he had reached the temple'. Be prepared for this when you translate.

Exercises

1 Form and conjugate the pluperfect subjunctive of these verbs (form passive only where asked): egeō, cōnflagrō, commoror, sequor, accipiō (passive), incendō (passive), nītor, occīdō, sentiō, līberō (passive), accēdō, (optional: dēsum, circumeō, nōlō, ferō (passive), recordor, audeō, cōnspicor, iaceō, cōnstituō (passive), excōgitō, nāuigō).

2 Translate these sentences (taking care over the meaning of cum = 'when, since, although'):

(a) cum Cleomenes fügisset, ceteri secuti sunt.

(b) cum praedonės celerrimė progressi essent, naues Romanorum postrėmae in periculo principės erant.

- (c) cum imperator ad lītus celeriter accessisset, cēterī tamen tardius nauigābant.
- (d) Cleomenes ad lītus cum naue cum peruenisset, se domī celauit.
- (e) cēterī quoque, cum marī nūllō modō praedōnēs effugere potuissent, nāuīs relīquērunt.
- (f) praedonum dux nauis, cum captae essent, incendi iussit.
- 3 Translate into Latin (using cum + pluperfect subjunctive):
 - (a) When the commander had sailed to the shore . . .
 - (b) Since the ships had been burned . . .
 - (c) Although the pirates had delayed at Syracuse . . .
 - (d) When the walls had been examined . . .
 - (e) Although the crowd had caught sight of the fire . . .
 - (f) Since the sailors had lacked food . . .
- 4 Say which of these verbs are subjunctive, which indicative: eguit, conflagrasset, tulerat, recordatus esses, constituisse, excogitaueras, accepissent, captus esse, occisi essent, conspicati sunt, (optional: iacuisti, commorati sunt, secuta esset, fuisse, fügissent, celauerant, nauigassent, noluistis, potuisses, incensus esse).

3rd decl. neuter -i- stem nouns in -al, -ar, -re and -le, e.g. mare mar-is 3n. 'sea'

All these nouns decline in the same way, like mare:

	S.	pl.
nom.	máre	már-ia
acc.	máre	már-ia
gen.	már-is	már-ium (mar-um is found)
dat.	már-ī	már-ibus
abl.	már-ī (máre is found)	már-ibus

Cf. animal 'animal', calcar 'spur' and cubīle 'couch'.

NB. Abl. s. in $-\bar{i}$, nom. acc. pl. in -ia, gen. pl. in -ium – exactly like other neuter i-stems (see 44). Cf. 12 and contrast 26.

126 Relative pronoun in the genitive cuius and quorum quorum quorum nearly always mean 'whose', 'of which' or 'of whom', e.g.

nāuis cuius imperātor erat Phylarchus 'the ship the captain of which was Phylarchus' homines quorum argentum Verres cupiuit 'the men whose silver Verres desired'

Section 4E

Here is a slightly cut (but otherwise unadapted) passage from the original text of 4E(ii). Read the passage, analysing explicitly your procedure as you go. End, after translation, with a reading aloud of the Latin.

ita prīma Haluntīnōrum nāuis capitur, cui praeerat Haluntīnus homo nōbilis, Phylarchus, quem ab illīs praedōnibus Locrēnsēs¹ posteā pūblicē redēmērunt²... deinde Apollōniēnsis nāuis capitur, et eius praefectus Anthrōpinus occīditur. haec dum aguntur, intereā Cleomenēs iam ad Helōrī lītus peruēnerat; iam sēsē in terram ē nāuī ēiēcerat, 5 quadrirēmemque³ fluctuantem in salō (= marī) relīquerat. reliquī praefectī nāuium, cum in terram imperātor exiisset, Cleomenem persecūtī⁴ sunt. (From Cicero, In Verrem II 5, 34.90–35.91)

1 Locrensis Locrens-is 3m. person from Locri.

⁴ per- intensifies the simple verb sequor.

English-Latin

- 1 Translate these sentences into Latin:
 - (a) The crowd caught sight of the ships as they were burning.
 - (b) When Cleomenes had disembarked, the rest of the ships' captains followed him.

(c) Cleomenes, whose wife was on the shore with Verres, left harbour with the ships following.

- (d) Since they had not been able to escape the pirates by sea, the captains followed their leader and disembarked.
- 2 Read the text of 4E(iii) again, then translate this passage:

When the ships had been set on fire, the pirates decided to go to Syracuse. They had heard that the harbour of the Syracusans was very beautiful and knew that they would never see it except in Verres'

² redimõ 3 redēmī I ransom, buy back (thus English 'redeem').

³ quadrirēmis quadrirēm-is 3f. ship - with 4 banks of oars.

praetorship. When they had decided this,1 they sailed to Syracuse. A pirate ship, in Verres' praetorship, while our ships were burning, came up to the actual harbour of the Syracusans. Ye gods! What a vile deed!

Suffixes: revision

-bil-is e is the suffix often used to form adjectives with passive force, e.g. amābilis 'lovable', crēdibilis 'credible', 'which can be believed'. Cf. English '-ble'.

Exercise

Give the meaning of: stabilis, mobilis, laudābilis, dūrābilis, nāuigābilis.

Present participles

Many English words are based on the present participle stem in -ent and -ant, and these frequently tell you what conj. the verb is. If -ant, the verbs are 1st conj., if -ent, 2nd/3rd conj., if -ient, 4th or 3rd/4th conj.

Discuss the origins of: gradient, intelligent, permanent, Vincent, inhabitant, tangent.

Some words, however, come through French, whose present participle always ends in -ant. So: descendant, defendant, tenant, attendant.

But we sometimes use the French form as a noun e.g. 'a dependant', the

Notes

Observe the regular personal endings -m -s -t -mus -tis -nt.

2 The key vowel in conjs. 2-3/4 is A while in 1st conj. it is E (to distinguish it from the indicative). One could summarise the present subjunctive with the following chart:

E EA A IA

3 There is no way of distinguishing between dīcam meaning 'I shall say' (future) and dīcam as the subjunctive except by context. The same goes for audiam and capiam.

4 Particular attention should be paid to the learning of which conjugation each verb belongs to, since the subjunctive endings of 1st conj. are almost identical to the present indicative endings of 2nd conj. (cf. amem ames amet with habeo habes habet etc.), whilst the subjunctive endings of the 3rd conj. are almost the same as those of the indicative endings of the 1st conj. (cf. dīcam dīcās dīcat with amō amās amat etc.).

Notes

- 1 Remember the imperfect subjunctive as formed from the present infinitive plus the personal endings. Thus amāre-m amārē-s etc. Even irregulars follow this rule, e.g. sum→esse→essem; eō→īre→īrem; ferō→ferre→ferrem; cf. uellem, nōllem, māllem, possem. Cf. pluperfect subjunctive active, 121¹.

Morphology

1 Form and conjugate the present and imperfect subjunctive of these verbs (where '(passive)' is written, give active and passive; for other active verbs give only active tenses): concidō, hortor, morior, sum, timeō, auferō (passive), reuocō (passive), nāuigō, (optional: abiciō (passive), cōnor, egeō, uolō, dēsum, perlegō (passive), excōgitō, ūtor).

2 Say which of these verbs is subjunctive, which indicative or infinitive (state tense of all verbs): clāmet, amat, dormīret, auferret, conspicatus esse, conātī essent, dat, dīcētur, excogitat, cūret, nescīrem, cupīuisse, loquitur, abstulisset, moneāris, accidat, aget, persuādet, perficiās, (optional: commorātur, moriātur, placēret, redībat, rogāssent, conciderēmus, accūsētis, parcēmus, profūgisse, nītātur, proficīscitur, oppugnantur, uocant, uincant, uincientur, uocāuissētis).

3 Form 3rd s. of present, imperfect and pluperfect indicative and subjunctive of these verbs (where '(passive)' is written, give active and passive; for other active verbs give only active tenses): agō (passive), perficiō, commoror, līberō (passive), iaceō, sequor, nōlō, accidit, (optional: īnspiciō (passive), circumeō, mālō, ōrō, persuādeō, recordor, patior, caedō (passive)).

134 Indirect (reported) commands $ut/n\bar{e} + \text{subjunctive}$

Observe the following sentences:

(a) Caesar imperat mīlitibus ut progrediantur 'Caesar gives orders to the soldiers that they should advance' or 'to advance'.

- (b) eos hortatus sum ne hoc facerent 'I urged them that they should not do this' or 'not to do this'.
- (c) mihi persuādēbit ut sēcum ambulem 'he will persuade me that I should walk with him' or 'to walk with him'.

To express these reported commands (the original command of (a) was 'Soldiers, advance!', of (b) 'Do not do this' etc.), Latin commonly adopts the form 'that x should' (ut + subjunctive) or 'that-not x should' ($n\bar{e}$ + subjunctive).

English does use this construction with verbs like e.g. ordain (e.g. 'he ordained that I should go'), though English more commonly uses the straight 'to / not to' form: e.g. (a) above is most easily translated 'Caesar gives orders to the soldiers to advance'.

Translate literally to start with, then convert to normal English.

Which verbs take ut/ne?

hortor $+ ut/n\bar{e}$ 'I urge x (acc.) that he should / should not' $\bar{o}r\bar{o} + ut/n\bar{e}$ 'I beg x (acc.) that he should / should not' imper $\bar{o} + ut/n\bar{e}$ 'I give orders to x (dat.) that he should / should not'

persuādeō + $ut/n\bar{e}$ 'I persuade x (dat.) that he should / should not' $pet\bar{o} + ut/n\bar{e}$ 'I beg \bar{a}/ab x (abl.) that he should / should not' $postul\bar{o} + ut/n\bar{e}$ 'I demand \bar{a}/ab x (abl.) that he should / should not' $rog\bar{o} + ut/n\bar{e}$ 'I ask x (acc.) that he should / should not'

moneō 'I advise', obsecrō 'I beseech', precor 'I pray' also take ut/nē.

Exceptions

iubeō 'I order' and uetō 'I forbid', 'tell x not to' both, like English, usually take a plain present infinitive. Compare:

iubeō tē abīre imperō tibi ut abeās }'I order you to go' uetō uōs manēre imperō uōbis nē maneātis }'I tell you not to stay'

Notes

- 1 The subjunctive will be present when the main verb is 'primary', imperfect when it is 'secondary/historic' (see A-G Intro. (a)).
- 2 Any reference, inside the ut/nē clause, to subject of main verb will be reflexive, e.g.

- Caesar imperat nobis ut sibi pareamus 'Caesar gives orders to us to obey him (= Caesar)'
- 3 Note that 'that no-one' = $n\bar{e}$ quis, 'that nothing' = $n\bar{e}$ quid, e.g. imperat $n\bar{e}$ quis exeat 'he orders that no-one should go out'

For the forms of quis (indefinite) see I4. Cf. 'that never' = $n\bar{e}$ umquam; 'that none', 'not any' = $n\bar{e}$ ūllus; 'that nowhere' = $n\bar{e}$ usquam.

Exercises

- 1 Translate these sentences (remember ut + indicative means 'as' or 'when' and that ut may be used without a verb to mean 'as'):
 - (a) Verrēs Seruīliō persuāsit ut Lilybaeum adīret.
 - (b) Seruīlius, ut Lilybaeum peruēnit, ā līctōribus caesus est.
 - (c) Verres lictoribus imperauerat ut uirum caederent.
 - (d) Seruīlius, ut cīuis Romānus, Verrem orat ne se caedat neue necet.
 - (e) ut Verrēs cīuīs Rōmānōs caedit, ita ipsum affirmō ā cīuibus Rōmānīs caesum īrī.
 - (f) Verrēs seruōs quōsdam hortātur nē Seruīliō parcant nēue ōrantī auxilium dent.
- 2 Translate the underlined words into Latin (using ut/nē + subjunctive); take care to get the correct sequence (see 1341):
 - (a) Verres orders Servilius to come to Lilybaeum.
 - (b) I beg you (pl.) not to go away.
 - (c) Verres ordered the lictors to beat Servilius.
 - (d) In the end Verres persuaded Servilius not to keep quiet.
 - (e) How can I persuade you to believe me?
 - (f) I ordain¹ that no one shall escape and that you (pl.) shall not go away.

1 dēcernō 3.

135 accidit, perficio ut + subjunctive

accidit ut $(n\bar{o}n)$ 'it happens that (not)', and perficio ut $(n\bar{o}n)$ (and $n\bar{e}$) 'I bring it about that (not)' are followed by the subjunctive, e.g.

Section 4F

'result' clause – see 144)

perficiam ut effugiam 'I shall bring it about that I escape' (= so-called 'purpose' clause – see 145).

In primary sequence the subjunctive is present; in secondary, perfect (still to be met) or imperfect.

Exercises

- 1 Translate these sentences (take care to check the tense of subjunctive in clauses introduced by accidit, since accidit may be present or perfect):
 - (a) accidit ut Seruīlius dē Verris nēquitiā paulō līberius loquātur.
 - (b) Verrēs perfēcit ut Seruīlius Lilybaeum adīret.
 - (c) accidit ut Seruīlius, cum Lilybaeum peruēnisset, ā līctōribus caederētur.
 - (d) Gauius, cum in uinclīs Syrācūsīs esset, dīxit sē perfectūrum ut profugeret Messānamque peruenīret.
 - (e) Verres perficiet ut ciues Romani necentur.
- 2 Prefix each of these statements with perficiam ut (following rules for primary sequence) and accidit ut (following rules for secondary sequence). You will thus need to change the verbs to present subjunctive (for perficiam ut) and imperfect (for accidit ut). Translate the new sentences:
 - (a) Verrēs Lilybaeum adit.
 - (b) uir ā līctoribus caeditur.
 - (c) seruī eum ad terram abiciunt.
 - (d) uerberibus moritur.
 - (e) socii Romam profugiunt.

136 Present participle

When a participle is used on its own, and in agreement with no other word, there are two ways in which it may be being used:

(a) As a noun 'a/the person —ing', e.g.

iacet corpus dormientis ut mortuī 'The body of a person sleeping lies like (that) of a dead person' (Cicero)

Cf. morituri të salutant 'men about to die salute you'

(b) Agreeing with a noun or pronoun which has been left out, referring to a person already mentioned, e.g.

haec dicentis latus hastā trānsfixit 'He pierced with a spear the side of (the man) as he was saying this' (Curtius). Note that 'the man' must be known to us already (he has just spoken haec).

137 Relative pronoun (dat. and abl.)

1 cui and quibus (dat.) normally mean 'to whom, for whom', e.g.

puer cui pecuniam dedi 'the boy to whom I gave the money'

But since the verb in the relative clause may control a dative, or require a dative of disadvantage etc, it will usually be necessary to 'hold' the relative pronoun until it is 'solved' by the construction, e.g.

nāuis cui praeerat Phylarchus 'the ship of which Phylarchus was in charge' (because praesum 'I am in charge of' takes a dat.) uir cui Verrēs pōcula abstulerat 'the man from whom Verres had taken the cups' (because auferō has its meaning completed by a dative of disadvantage)

2 quō/quā and quibus (abl.) bear a very wide range of meanings, but 'by', 'with', 'in/at' and 'from' should all be kept in mind. It will often be necessary to 'hold' the abl. relative pronoun until 'solved' by the construction (as with the dative). E.g.

incendium quo urbs incensa est 'the fire by which the city was burned' genus quo natus erat 'the family from which he was born' celeritas qua nauem cepit 'the speed with which he took the ship'

Bear in mind again that some verbs put objects in the ablative, e.g.

consilium quo usus sum 'the plan which I used' ('which' is object of utor; utor takes the abl.)

3 quō very often means '(to) where'; quā can mean 'where'.

English-Latin

Read the text of 4F(ii) again and translate this passage into Latin:

Verres had thrown into chains a man whose name was Gavius¹. This² Gavius had managed to escape and arrive at Messana³. He declared that he would accuse Verres at Rome. Verres, however, when he had heard this, ordered his slaves to capture the man. They⁴ dragged him back as he was embarking⁵ and took him to the magistrate. When Verres had arrived at Messana³, he gave orders that Gavius be stripped in the middle of the forum and beaten. The lictors did not spare the man⁵ although he was begging and kept asserting⁵ that he was a Roman citizen. In this way it happened that a Roman citizen was murdered by Verres.

1 Use dative with sum. Remember that the idiom is to put the name into dative also.

² 'This': use connecting relative.

4 'They': change of subject; use part of ille.

Grammar and exercises for 4G

The subjunctive: special usages

Subjunctive means 'subordinated' (subiungō subiunctus 'I join under'), and came to be used in clauses just because they were subordinate (e.g. cum + subjunctive 124, which always took the indicative in early Latin, and does occasionally in classical). But it does have a specific meaning of its own: to simplify, it indicates that the speaker wants an action to take place (because he thinks it should or because it is his desire that it should) or that the speaker thinks it possible that under certain conditions it could take place. (Sometimes, but rarely, it indicates that the speaker expects the action to take place, but this function is normally carried out by the future indicative.)

Observe how the subjunctives met so far fit into these categories: indirect commands ('he ordered him to go': $ut/n\bar{e}$ + subjunctive) use the subjunctive to express the speaker's will that something should happen; 'it happens that' (accidit ut (non) + subjunctive) uses the subjunctive to indicate that conditions make it possible for x to happen; 'I bring it about that' (perficio ut/ne + subjunctive) often expresses the speaker's intentions that something should happen.

Conditionals with subjunctive verbs ('if x were . . . y would')

Given the above functions of the subjunctive, it is not surprising that Latin uses the subjunctive in conditional sentences where the conditions stated are unreal or unfulfilled, i.e. they contain the words 'would' or 'should' in English. E.g.

> 'If I were rich, I would not (now) be working' (referring to present time)

> 'If I were to become rich, I would give all my money to the poor' (referring to future time)

Consider the Latin translations:

sī dīues essem, non laborārem

sī dīues fīam, omnem pecūniam pauperibus dem

Observe that the imperfect subjunctive is used in both clauses where reference is to the present time, and the present subjunctive in both clauses where the reference is to the future time. Study the following examples and check this rule:

> sī pater adesset, quid dīceret? 'if father were (now) here, what would he (now) be saying?'

> sī Verrī ignoscātis, nēmo uobīs ignoscat 'if you were to pardon Verres (some time in the future), no-one would pardon you' > sī fugiant, sequāmur 'if they were to flee, we would follow' sī mentīrēris, tē caederem 'if you were (now) lying, I would (now) be beating you'

So the basic rules are:

 $s\bar{i}$ + subjunctive (followed by a main clause with subjunctive verb) indicates conditions with 'would' or 'should'

sī+imperfect subjunctive (main clause verb in imperfect subjunctive): 'if x were (now) the case, y would (now) be the case'

sī+present subjunctive (main clause verb in present subjunctive) 'if x were to be (in the future) the case, y would be the case'

We say 'basic' rules, because Latin is flexible and can mix subjunctive and indicative in these clauses.

Notes

- 1 sī quis = 'if anyone', e.g. sī quis exeat, puniātur 'if anyone were to go out, he would be punished' (cf. on nē quis 1343 and 1452; forms 14).
- 2 nisi 'if not', 'unless' follows the same rules, e.g. nisi pulcher esses, te non amarem 'if you were not (now) so handsome, I would not (now) be in love with you'. nisi quis = 'unless anyone', see n.1 above.
- 3 In some instances, the imperfect subjunctives refer to the past, e.g. sī Raecius cognōsceret hominem, aliquid . . . remitterēs 'if Raecius had recognised the fellow, you would have remitted something'.
- 4 Quite often, a statement includes only the main clause of a condition omitting the sī clause, e.g. uidērēs 'you would have seen', uelim 'I would like'.

- 1 Translate these sentences:
 - (a) sī Verris pater adesset, fīlium suum cīuitātī nostrae hostem esse iūdicāret (2 possibilities).
 - (b) sī Verrī ignoscāmus, stultī sīmus.
 - (c) sī Verrēs mea pōcula postulet, ego sine morā ad eum litterās mittam.

prouidenti-a ae 1f. foresight, providence uīn-um ī 2n. wine Venus Vener-is 3f. Venus; sūmō 3 I take love-making

- 2 Give the Latin for the following (remember reference to future 'were to' = present subjunctive, and 'would' also = present; 'were —ing', 'were (now)' = imperfect subjunctive; 'would have' also = imperfect subjunctive):
 - (a) If I were (now) a Roman citizen . . .
 - (b) If he were to demand protection . . .

- (c) If there were not (now) a delay . . .
- (d) If our friends were to be moved . . .
- (e) If we were asking for protection . . .
- (f) If I were to keep shouting . . .
- (g) I would like to say . . .
- (h) I would have liked to ask . . .
- (i) I would have demanded . . .
- (i) I would be moved . . .

140 Subjunctive in relative clauses

The subjunctive can be used in relative clauses as well, sometimes with virtually no change in meaning at all, but note the following specific usages:

- 1 Consecutive (so-called 'generic'): establishing conditions for possible action, especially common after (a) est quī / sunt quī 'there exists/exist the sort of person/people who', (b) is quī 'the sort of person who', e.g.
 - (a) sunt quī sciant 'there are (those of the sort) who know'
 - (b) ea non est quae hoc faciat 'she is not the one who does this' = 'not the sort of person who . . .'
- 2 Causal, i.e. the relative clause shows the reason why something is happening, e.g.

sānus tū nōn es quī mē fūrem uocēs (Plautus) 'you are not sane who call me a thief' = 'because you call me a thief'

This usage is sometimes strongly 'signposted' by the addition of the fixed form quippe 'in as much as', e.g.

sõlis candor inlūstrior est quam ūllīus ignis, quippe quī inmēnsõ mundõ tam longē lātēque conlūceat (Cicero) 'The brightness of the sun is more brilliant than that of any fire, inasmuch as it shines so far and wide in an immeasurable universe'

141 cum, quamuīs + subjunctive

1 We have already met cum + pluperfect subjunctive meaning 'when', 'since', 'although' 'x had —ed' (124). cum is also used with the imperfect subjunctive, to mean 'when', 'since', 'although' 'x was — ing', and with the present subjunctive, to mean 'since', 'although' 'x is —ing'. (NB. NOT 'when'.)

2 quamuīs means 'although' (really 'however') and takes the subjunctive, e.g. quamuīs fortis esset ab hostibus fūgit 'although he was courageous, he fled from the enemy' (really 'however brave he might have been, he still fled from the enemy'. Contrast quamquam 'although', which takes the indicative.)

142 Subjunctive in reported speech

In reported speech subordinate clauses have their verb in the subjunctive. Since this is simply a way of showing that the clause belongs in the indirect quotation, the meaning is the same as the indicative, e.g.

Direct: 'because I am handsome, everyone loves me' quod pulcher sum, omnēs mē amant

Indirect (past): 'he said that, because (as he said) he was handsome, everyone loved him' dīxit omnīs sē, quod pulcher esset, amāre

Indirect (present): 'he says that, because he is handsome, all love him' dīcit omnīs sē, quod pulcher sit, amāre

Cf. Gauium . . . dīcis . . . clāmitāsse sē cīuem Rōmānum esse quod moram mortī quaereret 'you say that Gavius shouted continually that he was a Roman citizen because he was seeking a delay to his death'

Note

Generally speaking, it will be obvious from context what tense in the original statement is represented by the subjunctive. Here is a summary of the main rules determining the tense of the subjunctive:

	Subjunctive used in 'reported' speech
	Primary sequence	Secondary sequence
If the 'unreported' verb was originally present indicative	Present	Imperfect
If the 'unreported' verb was originally future indicative	-ūrus (i.e. fut. part.) + sim (sometimes present)	-ūrus essem (sometimes imperfect)
If the 'unreported' verb was originally past indicative	Perfect	Pluperfect

143 Infinitives without esse in reported speech

In accusative and infinitive constructions, esse is often dropped, e.g.

dīxit sē moritūrum (esse) 'he said that he would die' dīxērunt urbem captam (esse) 'they said that the city had been captured' wegat sē secūtūram (esse) 'she says that she will not follow' (how do negat sē secūtūram (esse) 'she says that she will not follow' (how do you know it is 'she'?)

Here are two examples from Text, 4G(i):

sī audīret ā tē cīuīs Rōmānōs secūrī percussōs 'if he heard that Roman citizens had been executed by you' arbitrātī . . . hanc rem sibi praesidiō futūram 'thinking that this would be a protection for them'

Here is part of the original of section 4F(ii). Gavius has just been arrested at Messana. Remember that Latin literature was composed to be read aloud. The final product of your study of each passage should be a well-phrased recitatio ('reading aloud').

Section 4G

Reread the text of 4G(ii) and then translate this passage into Latin:

Although¹ Gavius had named Raecius as his guarantor, you did not send a letter to him. I would like² you to tell me, Verres, this. Why did you delay? Why did you not send him a letter at once? Did not Gavius say³, 'If you were to⁴ send a letter to Raecius, he would⁴ say that I am a Roman citizen. If he were⁵ present, here, he would⁵ declare that I, whom you are accusing⁶, am innocent.' But you, Verres, with the utmost disregard for Gavius, got a cross ready. If I were telling⁵ this story⁵ to wild beasts, even they would⁵ be moved.

Grammar and exercises for 5A

144 Result (or 'consecutive') clauses: 'so . . . that'

Result clauses are expressed in Latin by an introductory word such as tam, adeō, sīc, ita (all 'so'), tot 'so many', tantus 'so big' picked up by ut 'that'

(negative ut non/numquam/nemo/nullus etc.) The verb in the ut clause is in the subjunctive (present or perfect (to be met) in primary sequence, perfect or imperfect in secondary sequence).

Diagrammatically:

Section 5A

'so' word

tam 'so'
adeō 'to such an extent' sīc
ita 'in such a way' tantus 'so great'
tot 'so many'
tālis 'of such a kind'

that (not)

ut (non) + verb in subjunctive

E.g.

tam ferox est ut omnes eum timeant 'he is so fierce that everyone fears him' tam pauper erat ut fēminīs grātus non esset 'he was so poor that he was not attractive to women' sīc... Deus dīlēxit mundum, ut... daret 'God so loved the world that he gave...' (John 3.16)

Cf. this example from Text 5A(i):

huic hominī tanta uānitās inerat ut non posset reticēre quae audierat 'There was so much vanity in this man that he could not keep quiet what he had heard'

Notes

1 These are often called 'consecutive' clauses – from consequor consecutus 'I follow closely' – because the result follows closely on, is the consequence or result of, the action.

2 Compare this construction with accidit ut (135). Both establish the conditions that make the result possible, and so fall within the range of specific usages of the subjunctive (138). Compare est/sunt quī and is quī 140.1 and perficio ut 135.

3 Similar constructions are:

longe abest ut + subjunctive 'he is far from —ing', e.g. longe abest ut timeat 'he is far from being afraid' fierī potest ut + subjunctive 'it can come about that', e.g. fierī potest ut rem perficiat 'it can happen that he will achieve his ends'

Exercises

1 Translate into English:

(a) Catilinae tantus furor inerat ut in dies plura agitaret.

- (b) tantum periculum est ut Fuluia omnia consuli narrare uelit.
- (c) Sempronia litteris Latinis tam docta erat ut uersus faceret.
- (d) coniūrātiō tanta facta est ut hominī nōbilī consulātus non mandarētur.
- (e) Catilīna furōre adeō incenditur, ut consulibus insidiās collocet, socios saepe hortētur, ipse cum tēlo sit, numquam dormiat.

2 Translate into Latin the underlined words:

- (a) So great (s. f.) was the senate's anxiety, that the consulship was entrusted to a new man.
- (b) Sempronia is so clever that she writes poetry.
- (c) Catiline was inflamed to such an extent by his eagerness for revolution, that he placed armed men in strategic spots throughout Italy.
- (d) Curius was so vile, that he was removed from the Senate.
- (e) The conspirators are undertaking such an important crime, that no-one can sleep.

145 Purpose (or 'final') clauses: 'in order that/to', 'to'

Purpose (or 'final': $f\bar{i}nis$ 'end') clauses in Latin are expressed by ut ('in order that, in order to, to') or its negative $n\bar{e}$ ('lest', 'in order that...not', 'in order not to', 'not to'), followed by the subjunctive: present subjunctive in primary sequence, imperfect subjunctive in secondary sequence. E.g.

hoc facit ut grātus sit 'he is doing this (in order) to be popular', '(in order) that he may be popular' hoc fēcit nē inuidiōsus esset 'he did this (in order) not to be unpopular', 'lest he be unpopular', '(in order) that he might not be unpopular'

(Observe how English favours 'may' in primary sequence, and 'might' in secondary.)

Cf. this example from Text 5A(ii):

igitur sē Catilīnae adiūnxērunt ut sē aere aliēnō līberārent 'They joined Catiline in order to free themselves from debt'

The construction falls within the scope of specific usages of the subjunctive. It shows the speaker's intention that something should happen. Cf. perficio ut (135).

Notes

1 Any references to the subject of the main verb inside the ut/nē clause will be reflexive, e.g.

'Cicero said this in order that Catiline should fear him (= Cicero)' Cicero haec dīxit ut Catilīna sē timēret

2 The Latin for 'in order that no-one' is nē quis (lit. 'lest anyone'); 'in order that nothing' is nē quid (lit. 'lest anything') etc. E.g.:

'Euclio hides the gold in order that no-one may see it' Euclio aurum cēlat nē quis id uideat

See 1343 for në quis in Indirect Command, and I4 for forms.

3 qui quae quod + subjunctive can express purpose, especially after a main verb of motion, e.g.

nūntiōs mīsit quī nūntiārent . . . 'he sent messengers who would announce' '. . . to announce' consilium patefecit quo effugerent 'he revealed the plan by which they might escape', 'for them to escape by'

locum petit unde $(=ex qu\bar{o})$ hostem inuādat 'he is looking for a position from which to attack the enemy'

Cf. this example from Text 5A(iii):

praemīsī . . . aliōs . . . quī initium bellī faciant 'I have sent ahead others to begin the war'

Exercises

- 1 Translate into English:
 - (a) mulieres aliquot se Catilinae adiunxere ut se aere alieno liberarent.
 - (b) Catilīna Mānlium ad exercitum mīsit, quī bellum parāret.
 - (c) Cornēlius et Varguntēius ad Ciceronem eunt ut eum interficiant.

- (d) custodes Ciceronis domus Cornelium et Vargunteium ianua prohibuerunt, ne consul necaretur.
- (e) Fuluia omnia quae audierat consuli narrauit, ut ille magnum periculum effugeret.
- (f) scrībēbat Aelius orātiones1 quas aliī dīcerent. (Cicero)
- (g) nihil tam absurdē² dīcī potest quod non dīcātur ab aliquo philosophorum³ (Cicero).

- 2 Translate the underlined words into Latin (take care to get the right sequence of tenses see 145):
 - (a) Curius went to Fulvia to ask for money.
 - (b) Catiline sent two comrades to1 kill Cicero.
 - (c) Curius told Fulvia everything, so that she would believe him².
 - (d) Fulvia relates the story to the consul, so that he will not be killed.
 - (e) In order not to be attacked by the conspirators, Cicero orders the guards to lock the door.

146 The historic infinitive

In places where the narrative is drawn in rapid, broad strokes, especially where one action follows swiftly upon another, Latin can use the infinitive where we would expect an indicative (usually perfect or imperfect). The infinitive tells us what the verbal action is; subject is nominative, tense has to be gathered from the broad context. E.g.

intereā Catilīna Romae multa simul agere; īnsidiās collocāre, parāre incendia, loca obsidēre, ipse cum tēlo esse.

'Meanwhile, Catiline put many schemes into operation simultaneously in Rome: he set up ambushes, prepared fires, laid siege to places, went around himself under arms'.

Note the atmosphere of busy activity, in which historic infinitives most commonly occur.

Exercise

Translate these sentences and say whether the infinitive is prolative (i.e. completes the meaning of a verb, e.g. uolō, possum etc.), reporting speech (accusative and infinitive), or historic:

- (a) nobiles Catilinae consulatum mandare noluerunt.
- (b) Fuluia multīs Catilīnam coniūrātionem parāre dīxerat.
- (c) Catilīna in dies plūra agitāre, arma collocāre, pecūniam ad Mānlium mittere.
- (d) coniūrātionem se facere negat Catilina.
- (e) Sempronia uersus facere, sermone uti modesto.
- (f) Cicero Cornelium et Vargunteium in aedīs suās intrare uetuit.

147 Ablative of respect: 'in point of'

A common use of the ablative, especially in poetry, is to specify the respect in which something is the case. E.g.

numquam uictus est uirtūte 'he was never conquered in point of / in respect of courage' litteris Latinis docta 'learned in point of / in respect of Latin literature' genere fortūnāta 'lucky in point of / in respect of her birth'

Exercise

Translate these sentences; pick out ablatives, distinguishing ablatives of respect from other usages:

- (a) Semprônia, genere nobili nata, litteris Latinis docta erat.
- (b) uir quīdam, Curius nomine, eo tempore Fuluiam amābat.
- (c) non tota re, sed temporibus errastī.1 (Cicero)
- (d) eā nocte Cornēlius et Varguntēius Ciceronis iānuā prohibitī sunt.
- (e) Catilīna, quamuīs genere atque formā fortūnātus esset, uir tamen minimā sapientiā fuit.

² absurde stupidly. See 140.1 for the construction in this sentence.

³ philosoph-us ī 2m. philosopher.

^{2 &#}x27;him': use part of sē.

¹ errő 1 I am wrong.

Reading: ut

You have now met ut as a conjunction in several different senses.

ut + indicative

- (a) 'how!'
- (b) 'as', 'when'.

ut + subjunctive

- (a) Indirect command (after e.g. impero, persuadeo etc.) 'to . . .'
- (b) Result (after e.g. tam, tantus, adeo etc.) 'so . . . that'.
- (c) Purpose 'in order that/to'.
- (d) After perficio 'I bring it about that', accidit 'it happens that'.

To solve ut, watch out for: (i) indicative or subjunctive? (ii) if subjunctive, a verb of commanding will suggest (a), a 'flag' such as tam, tantus will suggest (b), and a negative ut non will suggest (b) or (d), while the negative ne will suggest (a) or (c). E.g.

Cicero custodibus imperat ut . . . 'Cicero to the guards gives orders that . . .'

solves itself very quickly. But Cicero ut custodibus . . . leaves doubts about ut and custodibus, so hold these words till solved.

NB. ut is also found in the meaning 'as', qualifying a noun. e.g. canem et felem ut deos colunt 'They worship the dog and the cat as gods'.

Exercise

Read these sentences, making explicit your steps in understanding, especially when you reach ut (or equivalent). State the moment when you can solve ut:

- (a) eos ut armātī essent hortābātur.
- (b) Sempronia tam docta est ut uersus facillime faciat.
- (c) ut ego iubēbō, ita tū faciēs.
- (d) hōrum contumēliās¹ sapiēns² ut iocos accipit. (Seneca)
- (e) Cicero effecit ut non interficeretur.

1 contumēli-a ae 1f. 'insult'.

- (f) në consulem Catilinae socii necarent, rem totam Fuluia amicis suis narrauit.
- (g) ut fortūnāta Sempronia est!

Reading: quī

qui too has different meanings, as follows.

quī + indicative

This is the descriptive relative 'who', 'which', 'what', 'that'.

quī + subjunctive

- (a) Purpose (with verbs of motion).
- (b) Consecutive (est qui, is qui) 'the sort of person who'.
- (c) Causal, 'since'.
- (d) Indirect speech, where it may = ordinary relative, unless context demands otherwise.
- (e) Concessive 'although' e.g. uir quī fortis esset tamen effūgit 'the man, who was brave, nevertheless fled' i.e. 'the man, although he was brave, fled'.

Exercise

Read these sentences, using the information just outlined. State the moment when quī is solved:

- (a) Catilīna Romam socios mittit, quī urbem incendant.
- (b) Sempronia, quae uiros semper petebat, matrona Romana erat.
- (c) Clūsīnī¹ lēgātōs Rōmam, quī auxilium ā senātū peterent, mīsēre. (Livy)

Re-read the text of 5A(iii), then translate this passage:

Although Catiline¹ had got ready the conspiracy, he nevertheless stood for the consulship again. Meanwhile, he kept attempting to persuade his allies to attack Cicero. Cicero, however, had made plans in order to escape the danger. Through Fulvia and Curius he had managed to hear of Catiline's plans.

Again the nobles were so afraid that they did not entrust the consulship to Catiline. He then decided to wage war. He stationed his supporters in various parts of Italy. Meanwhile at Rome he set a trap² for the consul, went around² with a weapon, and³ encouraged² his supporters to be brave.

Roman poetry

Introduction

Consider the following lines from Pope's Epistle to a Lady (1735):

Pleasures the Sex, as Children Birds, pursue, Still out of Reach, but never out of View

Put bluntly, it means 'The (female) sex pursues pleasures as children pursue birds; the pleasures remain out of reach, but never out of view.'
The utterance is different from prose in a number of important ways:

- (a) It is in metre.
- (b) The word-order is different from prose.
- (c) It is very compressed ('pursue' serves for both limbs of the first line).
- (d) It is cleverly balanced (e.g. the balance of 'Pleasures [object] the Sex [subject] as Children [subject] Birds [object]').
- (e) The image is striking: women pursuing pleasure as children pursue birds.

Until one gets used to it, reading this sort of poetry, even in English, is quite hard work. Balance, compression, striking word-order and powerful imagery are all features of Latin poetry too, and since Latin is an inflected language, the dislocation of expected symmetry by means of calculated asymmetry ($= uari\bar{a}ti\bar{o}$) can be that much more violent. But no less important to a Roman poet is balance. Consider the following haunting lines from Virgil:

tum pingues agnī, et tum mollissima uīna, tum somnī dulces, densaeque in montibus umbrae

'then fat the lambs, and then most sweet the wine, then sleep (is) sweet, and deep on the mountains (are) the shadows'

Observe the compression (no verbs), and the balance with variety. Of the four cōla (limbs), three start with tum, but not the fourth; the first line runs adjective—noun, adjective—noun; the second runs noun—adjective, adjective (prepositional phrase) noun. The metre adds to the effect by being slow and heavy, and allowing, unusually, two adjacent vowels (agnī et) their full value. (Note that in 1. 2 dēnsaeque in the -e of -que is, as normally, lost before the following i-.)

¹ Catiline is subject of both clauses, so place him before the conjunction.

² Use historic infinitives.

³ Omit – use asyndeton (no connections: see p. 314(c)).

The word-order of the above example is not, however, difficult. Generally, Roman poets do not go in for extremes of word-order (or hyperbaton, 'leap-frog', as the technical term is). Here is an example of an extreme word-order from that most arch and sophisticated of poets, Ovid:

sī quis qui quid agam forte requirat erit

'If there will perhaps be anyone who asks what I am doing.' (Natural order would be sī quis forte erit quī requīrat quid agam.) One can compare the strained balance of the Ovid with e.g. Sidney's Vertue, beautie and speeche did strike, wound, charme My heart, eyes, ears, with wonder, love, delight.

In both English and Latin there is a limit to how much one can take of this sort of thing.

(See further L.P. Wilkinson, Golden Latin Artistry C.U.P. 1963, Chapter 8. Bristol Classical Press reprint 1985.)

Rhetorical features of Latin prose and poetry

Here are the technical terms, with examples, for some of the most important figures of Latin writing:

(a) Ellipse (sometimes called by its Greek term apo koinou): a figure in which a word or words needed to complete the sense are understood from another part of the sentence, e.g.

Player King (Hamlet III.ii):

Since love our hearts and Hymen did our hands Unite i.e. 'since love (united) our hearts'.

(b) Antithesis: a figure in which ideas are sharply contrasted by the use of words of opposite or very different meaning, e.g.:

Pope (Epistle to Dr Arbuthnot) on the danger of flatterers: Of all mad Creatures, if the Learn'd are right, It is the Slaver kills, and not the Bite

'Slaver' and 'Bite' are in antithesis.

(c) Asyndeton: a figure in which conjunctions are missed out, to give an effect of speed and economy, e.g.:

Rochester (The Imperfect Enjoyment):
With arms, legs, lips close clinging to embrace

(d) Chiasmus: a figure in which corresponding parts of a sentence are placed criss-cross (a b b a) e.g.

Shakespeare, Sonnet 154:

Love's fire heats water, water cools not love

Pope (On Women)

A Fop their Passion, but their Prize, a Sot.

(e) The golden line: term applied to a line in Latin poetry which consists of two adjectives and two nouns with a verb in between, in the pattern a b (verb) A B, e.g.

impiaque aeternam timuērunt saecula noctem

a b (verb) A B

'and the unholy ages feared the everlasting night'

A 'silver' line takes the order a b (verb) B A.

- (f) Tricolon: a group consisting of three equivalent units, e.g. 'I came, I saw, I conquered', 'with arms, legs, lips'. Frequently, these units increase in length ('ascending tricolon') e.g. 'Friends, Romans, countrymen'. (Cf. tetracolon four units.)
- (g) Anaphora: a figure in which a word (or words) is repeated in successive clauses or phrases (usually at the start of the clause or phrase), e.g.

Shakespeare, Richard II II.ii:

With mine own tears I wash away my balm, With mine own hands I give away my crown With mine own tongue deny my sacred state

(h) Assonance: similarity of vowel sounds of words near each other, e.g.

Thomas Gray:

Along the heath and near his favourite tree

(i) Alliteration: any repetition of the same sounds or syllables (especially the beginnings of words) of two or more words close to each other, e.g.

'Low lies the level lake'

(j) Hyperbaton: a figure in which the natural word-order is upset, e.g.

Milton (translating Horace's rīdentem dīcere uērum quid uetat?): 'Laughing to teach the truth, what hinders?'

i.e. 'What hinders one-who-is-laughing from teaching the truth?' The Latin word-order, however, is normal.

Poetic word-order

Adjectives and nouns

One of the most frequent word-orders in poetry is adjective, then something else, then the noun with which the adjective agrees, e.g.

Lāuīnaque uēnit lītora 'and he came to the Lavinian shores' altae moenia Rōmae 'the walls of high Rome' Trōiānō ā sanguine 'from Trojan blood' Rōmānam condere gentem 'to found the Roman race' quem dās fīnem? 'what end do you give?' noua pectore uersat cōnsilia 'she turned over new plans in her heart'

Here is a double example:

saeuae memorem Iūnōnis ob īram 'on account of the unforgetting anger of savage Juno'

The best tactic to adopt is to register the adjective and move on: concentrate your attention on nouns and verbs first and foremost, and try to solve them as you come to them. This will lay clear the bare bones of the sentence. You can then reread, concentrating on the adjectives and seeing where they fit. Thus a first reading should concentrate on the underlined words:

ingentia cernēs moenia surgentemque nouae Karthāginis arcem.

'(something about 'large') you will see the walls and (something about 'rising' and 'new') the citadel of Carthage'.

Then reread, concentrating on ingentia, surgentem and nouae, seeing where they agree:

'you will see the huge walls and arising the citadel of new Carthage'

NB. When adjectives precede and are separated from their nouns in prose, the effect is to emphasise strongly one element or the other (usually the first).

tacit-us a um quiet amīc-us a um friendly silenti-a ōrum 2n. pl.

lūn-a ae 1f. moon

Verbs

It is extremely common for verbs to come early in the sentence, sometimes well before the quoted subject. So you must hang on to the person of the verb and wait for a subject to appear, e.g.:

obstipuit prīmō aspectū Sīdōnia Dīdō 'he/she/it fell silent at the first look' – ah, that is 'Carthaginian Dido fell silent . . .'
conticuēre omnēs 'they fell silent' – ah, 'everyone fell silent'

NB. Verb-subject is also a common order in prose.

Section 5A

Word groups

We have 'phrased' together words that can usefully be taken in groups together, e.g.

tālibus orantem dictīs ārāsque tenentem audiit Omnipotēns

'the one begging (acc.) with such words and holding (acc.) the altars the All-powerful (i.e. Jupiter) heard'

Delayed introductory word

Conjunctions like cum, dum, ubi, sī, sed, et are often held back in the sentence, (as in prose: see 1244) e.g.

namque sub ingentī lūstrat dum singula templō 'for while he surveys individual items under the great temple' magnum rēginae sed enim miserātus amōrem 'but pitying the queen's great love'

Latin metre

Latin metre is more complex than English because in Latin metre every syllable counts (cf. English, where metre depends largely on stress).

For the purpose of metre, every syllable in Latin counted as either heavy(-) or light(0). Heavy syllables may be compared to longer notes in music, light to shorter.

Heavy and light syllables

Here are some basic rules:

- (a) A syllable is heavy if its vowel is pronounced long e.g. pono, īrāto
- (b) A syllable is heavy if the vowel is followed by two consonants or a double consonant (x, z) e.g. $ingent\bar{e}s$.

Word division makes no difference, e.g. et is 'light', but et fugit would make et heavy, because the t is followed by an f, making two consonants.

- (c) A syllable is heavy if it contains a diphthong, e.g. aedes. (cf.1 above).
- (d) A syllable is light if it contains a short vowel followed by only one consonant (or none), e.g. et omnibus. Contrast et venia.

Elision

If a word ends in a vowel or in -m, and the next word begins with a vowel (or h), the final vowel or -m syllable is 'elided' ('crushed out of existence') and does not count for the purposes of the metre, e.g.:

eg[o] et tū uirtūt[em] et c[um] habeās

Notes

- The 'heaviness' or 'lightness' of a vowel has no effect on its natural pronunciation. Thus the et of et fugit may count as heavy for the purposes of scansion, but it would not be pronounced ēt as a consequence. To help you to see the difference between vowel length and syllable quantity we have continued to mark long vowels (immediately above the letter), as well as setting out the metrical pattern (above the line), e.g. corri pulēre indicates that the first vowel (-o-) is pronounced short, but belongs in a heavy syllable (because followed by two consonants -rr-); the fourth vowel, however (-ē-), is pronounced long (the syllable will therefore be heavy).
- 2 Verse was read with the normal word stress (see p. xv). Do not allow the rhythmic stress of the metre to distort the natural stress of the words.

The hexameter: Virgil's metre

The hexameter has six feet, consisting of a mixture of dactyls $(- \circ \circ)$ and spondees $(- \circ)$, on the following pattern:

Here are the first three lines of the first Virgil passage scanned for you:

corripulere ui [am] intérela, qua semita monstrat iamqu[e] ascendebant collem, qui plurimus urbi imminet aduers asqu[e] aspectat desuper arces.

Notes 1 Foot 5 is usually a dactyl, very occasionally a spondee.

2 The line usually has a word-division (caesūra, lit. 'cutting') in the middle of the third foot or the fourth. E.g. the caesura in the above examples is after intereā (4th foot), ascendēbant, aduersāsqu(e) (3rd foot).

Exercise

Scan the next ten lines (p. 321), adding the correct word stress (see rule, p. xv). Mark foot divisions with |, caesuras with $\{$. Then read aloud, thinking through the meaning as you read.

Virgil reading exercises: introduction

Pūblius Vergilius Marō (Virgil) was born in 70 near Mantua. He early on established powerful connections, notably with the governor of Cisalpine Gaul, C. Asinius Pōlliō, himself a scholar and poet. It was Pōlliō who introduced him to Octavian. In the early 30s Virgil became a member of the circle of Maecēnās, the great literary patron and powerful political ally of Octavian.

Virgil was the author of three major works. The first two were the Bucolics (or Eclogues), and Georgics, whose apparently rural themes have political overtones, e.g. at the end of Georgics I, there is an appeal to the native gods of Italy to allow Octavian to come to the aid of the civil-warstricken land. His final work, begun around 30 and still undergoing final revision at his death in 19, was the Aeneid, an epic in twelve books, relating how Aeneas, mythical founder of the Roman race, escaped from the burning city of Troy and finally established a foothold in Italy, after defeating the Rutulian King Turnus in single combat. The ancients saw the purpose of Virgil in this work as twofold: to rival Homer (on whose Iliad and Odyssey the poem draws heavily) and to glorify Augustus. The latter he achieved in three ways. First he accepted and stressed the family connection between Aeneas and the gens Iūlia (family of Julius Caesar and Augustus), so that the early history of the Roman race is also the family history of Augustus. Secondly, he introduced mentions of Augustus into the poem in prophecies (by Jupiter in Book I and Anchises in Book VI) and on the shield of Aeneas (Book VIII). Thirdly, he reflected the old Roman values which Augustus propagated and supported even by

148 Purpose clauses: $qu\bar{o} + \text{comparative} + \text{subjunctive}$ 'in order that . . . more'

When a purpose clause contains a comparative (adverb or adjective), it is introduced NOT by ut but by $qu\bar{o}$, e.g.

hoc fēcit quō celerius peruenīret 'he did this (in order) to arrive more quickly'

Cf.

quō facilior aditus ad cōnsulem fieret 'in order that there might be an easier approach to the consul'

The verb in the quō clauses follows the normal rule, and will be either present or imperfect subjunctive. This construction is not difficult to spot, since it has three markers in a sentence: (i) quō (ii) a comparative (iii) verb in the subjunctive. Remember, when these clues are given, to translate quō by 'in order that/to'.

149 fore ut + subjunctive 'that it will/would come about that. . .'

Latin often 'talks its way round' (the technical term for this is 'periphrasis') the so-called future infinitive passive (see 118) by using fore ut + subjunctive, e.g.

dīxit sē captum īrī 'he said that he would be seized' (lit. 'he said that there was a movement towards seizing him') could also be expressed thus:

dīxit fore ut (fixed form) caperētur lit. 'he said that it would come about that he would be seized'

Thus both dīcit eos remissum īrī and dīcit fore ut remittantur mean 'he says that they will be sent back'.

So in reported speech, watch out for fore ut $(n\bar{o}n)$ + subjunctive, and translate literally 'that it will/would (not) come about that', then retranslate for smoother final effect.

Exercise

Translate these sentences:

- (a) Catilīna sociīs suīs nūntiāuit fore ut incendium et caedēs in urbe fierent.
- (b) Vmbrēnus Gabīnium uocāuit, quō facilius Allobrogibus uerbīs suīs persuādēret.
- (c) Allobrogēs, quippe quī praemia bellī magna fore arbitrārentur, rem diū consīderābant.
- (d) sed lēgātī tandem sēnsērunt fore ut opibus cīuitātis Rōmānae facillimē uincerentur.
- (e) igitur Allobrogum lēgātī Cicerōnī omnia nārrāuērunt, quō maius auxilium cīuitātī suae ferrent.

150 Ablative absolute

You have already seen (109, 1206) how Latin likes to put a noun with another noun, adjective or present participle in the ablative as a separate phrase in a sentence, e.g. Verre praetore 'with Verres as praetor', Cleomenē ēbriō 'with Cleomenes drunk', Cleomenē pōtante 'with Cleomenes drinking'.

The most common usage, however, is to put the noun with a past participle, e.g.

nāuibus captīs '(with) the ships having been captured' hominibus interfectīs '(with) the men having been killed'

151 Past (perfect) participle passive

The past (or perfect) participle of deponent verbs is active in meaning, e.g. morātus 'having delayed', locūtus 'having spoken' etc. (Cf. locūtus sum 'I have spoken'.)

The past (or perfect) participle of all other verbs is passive in meaning, e.g. amātus 'having been loved', audītus 'having been heard', factus 'having been made', captus 'having been captured' etc. (Cf. captus sum 'I have been captured'.) Like deponents, they act as 1/2 adjectives (amāt-us a um) in agreeing with the person or thing 'having been —ed' and in describing action prior to the main verb. But they are most frequently used predicatively (see 77). E.g.

mulieris amātae 'of the woman having-been-loved', 'of the woman when she had been loved' lēgātī audītī 'the ambassadors having-been-heard', 'the ambassadors after they had been heard' nāuis capta 'the ship having-been captured', 'the ship after it had been captured'

Watch out for this usage in the ablative absolute construction, e.g.

nāue captā '(with) the ship having been captured' uirō necātō '(with) the man having been killed' signō uīsō '(with) the signal having been seen'

This style of ablative absolute construction is very common indeed in Latin. Since it is not very common in English, it is best not to settle for a wholly literal translation. Try the following suggestions:

signō uīsō, coniūrātōrēs fūgērunt (lit.) 'with the signal having been seen, the conspirators fled'

This can be translated as:

'Because/when/after they saw the signal, the conspirators fled'

'The conspirators saw the signal and fled'

'The signal was seen and the conspirators fled'

'After/when/because the signal was seen, the conspirators fled'

Notes

- 1 Sometimes 'although' will be the best translation for an abl. abs., e.g. mīlitibus captīs, Catilīna tamen pugnābat 'though the soldiers were taken, Catiline fought on'. As with cum = 'although' and quī = 'although', some word for 'nevertheless' (tamen, nihilōminus etc.) will often be found. Cf. exiguā parte aestātis reliquā Caesar tamen in Britanniam proficīscī contendit 'though only a small part of the summer remained, Caesar hastened to set out for Britain' (Caesar).
- 2 The construction is called 'absolute' (absoluō absolūtus 'having been released': note the passive past participle!) because the phrase does not appear to be integral to its clause, since it qualifies neither subject nor object it seems to stand all alone, 'released' from its surroundings.
- 3 Cf. uice uersā '(with) the position turned/changed'; pollice uersō '(with) the thumb turned' (up to indicate death, the evidence suggests).

Exercises

- 1 Form the perfect participle passive of these verbs and translate them: dīmittō, requīrō, opprimō, aperiō, simulō, cōnsīderō, frangō, obsideō, exīstimō, sollicitō, (optional: quaerō, petō, tollō, agitō, mandō, parō, nārrō, efficiō, moueō, interficiō).
- 2 Say which of these perfect participles are deponent and which passive (translating each example): adiunctus, questus, profectus, impedītus, adeptus, locūtus, nīxus, conuocātus, prohibitus, collocātus, adlocūtus, mortuus, abiectus, āctus, perfectus, (optional: repulsus, secūtus, positus, cultus, solitus, relictus, ausus, uetitus, mentītus, occīsus, exspectātus, uīsus, īrātus, passus, acceptus).
- 3 Translate these ablative absolute phrases (at first use the pattern 'with x having been —ed'):

- (a) coniūrātione parātā.
- (b) hīs rēbus nārrātīs.
- (c) conuocatīs mīlitibus.
- (d) exercitū collocato.
- (e) datō signō.
- (f) simulātō studiō.
- (g) hostibus oppressīs.
- (h) praemiis consideratis.
- (i) interfectis parentibus.
- i) paucīs dīmissīs.
- 4 Translate these sentences. Say whether the ablative absolute is better regarded as temporal ('when had been —ed'), causal ('because had been —ed'), or concessive ('although had been —ed'):
 - (a) Catilina ex urbe egresso Lentulus nouos socios petebat.
 - (b) lēgātīs Allobrogum Romae manentibus Vmbrēnus ā socio quodam uocātus est.
 - (c) Vmbrēnus, Gabīniō uocātō quō maior auctōritās sermōnī inesset, consilium aperuit.
 - (d) consilio aperto, nominatis sociis, Vmbrenus tamen Allobrogibus persuadere non poterat ut coniuratores fierent.
 - (e) Cicerō consilio cognito coniuratores quam maxime manifestos habere uolebat.
 - (f) bene facta male locūta1 male facta arbitror. (Ennius)
 - (g) nihil est simul inuentum et perfectum. (Cicero)

English-Latin

- 1 Translate these clauses into Latin, using ablative absolute with past participle:
 - (a) When all hope had been taken away . . .
 - (b) Although the soldiers had been sent away . . .
 - (c) Because allies had been sought out . . .
 - (d) Once things had been pondered . . .
 - (e) Although a reward had been given . . .
 - (f) If the city had been besieged . . .
- 2 Reread the text of 5B(i)-(ii), then translate this passage:

Umbrenus led the ambassadors of the Allobroges out of the forum into a certain person's house. Next he called Gabinius, a man of great weight, so as to persuade them more quickly. When Gabinius had been¹ called, Umbrenus persuaded the ambassadors to promise their aid. But they had not yet decided to join the conspiracy, inasmuch as they thought that they would be defeated² by the resources of the Roman state. Finally, they revealed the whole matter to Sanga. When Cicero had found out the plan¹ via Sanga, he instructed the Allobroges to feign enthusiasm, so that he might more easily capture the conspirators.

1 Use ablative absolute.

2 Use fore ut + subjunctive ('that it would turn out that . . .').

Virgil's Aeneid

Aeneas, welcomed warmly into Carthage by the queen Dido (who is slowly falling in love with him) is encouraged to tell the story of the destruction of his homeland Troy. Here Aeneas describes how the wooden horse was brought into the city – and laments the blindness of the Trojans.

Even at this last moment Cassandra opened her lips to prophesy the future, but the gods had ordained that those lips were never believed by Trojans. This was the last day for a doomed people, and we spent it adorning the shrines of the gods throughout the city with festal garlands.

Jussive subjunctives

Jussive subjunctives (iubeo iussus 'ordered') are so called because the subjunctive in these cases acts as an imperative (cf. on specific usages of the subjunctive 138). A subjunctive in this sense stands on its own as the main verb of a sentence (it is thus an 'independent' use), e.g.

> (1st pl.) audiāmus 'let us listen'; interficiāmus 'let us kill'; eāmus 'let's go'

> (2nd s./pl.) accipiās 'please welcome', 'welcome!', 'see that you welcome' (often used in poetry)

> (3rd s./pl.) fiat 'let there become' 'may there be' (cf. fiat lux 'let there be light' (Genesis))

Cf. phrases very often used in English: habeās corpus 'you may have the body'; caueat ēmptor 'let the buyer beware'; stet 'let it stand'.

Notes

1 When a jussive subjunctive occurs in a question, it is known as 'deliberative' (from dēlīberō 1 'I weigh carefully', 'consider'), e.g.

> quid scrībam? 'What am I to write?' (Plautus) utrum Karthago dīruātur . . . ? 'Should Carthage be destroyed

. . . ?' (Cicero)

quid ego faciam? maneam aut abeam? 'What should (shall) I do? Should (shall) I stay, or leave?' (Plautus)

In these circumstances, the negative is $n\bar{o}n$. The imperfect subjunctive indicates past time here, e.g.

'non ego illi argentum redderem?' 'non redderes.' 'Shouldn't I have paid the money to him?' 'You shouldn't have paid it.' (Plautus)

2 The negative for jussives is nē, e.g. nē ueniant 'let them not come'.

153 Subjunctives expressing wishes and possibility

There are two other independent uses of the subjunctive.

1 Expressing wishes

This usage is often marked by utinam (negative utinam $n\bar{e}$). The tenses are used as for conditions (see S2(c)).

Present is used to express a wish for the FUTURE, e.g.

ualeant ciues mei! 'May my fellow-citizens fare well!' (Cicero)

Imperfect is used to express a wish for the PRESENT (see also Note), e.g.

illud utinam në uërë scriberem 'Would that I were not writing this in all truth' (Cicero)

Pluperfect is used to express a regret about what happened (or did not happen) in the PAST, e.g.

utinam susceptus non essem 'I wish I'd never been reared!' (Cicero)

NB. Imperfect subjunctive, as with conditionals and jussives, sometimes refers to the past. See 1393, 1521

2 Expressing possibility – the 'potential' subjunctive (cf. 138)
The range of expressions covers much of what is expressed in English by 'may/might', 'can/could', 'should' and 'would'. In 1st s. we have:

uelim 'I would like' nõlim 'I would not like' mālim 'I would prefer'

These are commonly followed by another subjunctive, e.g. uelim adsīs 'I should like you to be here'

Other 1st s. expressions are ausim 'I would dare' (from audeō; normal subjunctive audeam) possim 'I would be able'

(Note the imperfect uellem 'I would have wished' etc.) 2nd s. is used in 'generalising' statements, e.g.

(present) haud inueniās 'you (= one) may scarcely find' (imperfect) crēderēs 'you (= one) would have believed'

3rd s. expressions include, e.g.

(present) dīcat aliquis 'someone may say' (Livy) (see 171) (imperfect) quis arbitrārētur 'who would have thought . . .?' (Cicero)

154 Impersonal verbs: active

These impersonal verbs appear only in the 3rd person singular active, but in any tense (present, future, imperfect, perfect etc.) in indicative or subjunctive. They also possess an infinitive form, so that they can appear in accusative and infinitive constructions.

You have already met (88.5) licet licere licuit (or licitum est) 'it is permitted to x (dat.) to y (inf.)', e.g.

illīs licuit exīre 'it was permitted to them to leave', 'they were allowed to leave' and placet placere placuit (or placitum est) 'it is pleasing to x (dat.) to Y (inf.)', e.g.

mihi placēbit sequī 'it will be pleasing for me to follow', 'I shall vote to follow' negat sibi placuisse hoc dīcere 'he denies that it was pleasing (lit. 'it to have been pleasing') to him to say this', 'he denies that he voted to say this' and (4B(iii)) oportet oportere oportuit 'it is right/proper for x (acc.) to Y (inf.)' 'x should/ought', e.g.

mē oportuit abīre 'it was right for me to leave', 'I ought to have left'

Now learn the following, some of which take a slightly different construction:

decet decere decuit 'it is fitting for x (acc.) to y (inf.)' dedecet dedecere dedecuit 'it is unseemly for x (acc.) to y (inf.)' paenitet paenitere paenituit 'it repents x (acc.) of y (gen.)' or 'it repents x (acc.) to y (inf.)' (i.e. 'x regrets / is dissatisfied with miseret miserere miseruit 'it moves x (acc.) to pity at/for y (gen.)' pudet pudere puduit 'it moves x (acc.) to shame for y (gen.)' (i.e. 'x is ashamed at/for y') libet libere libuit (or libitum est) 'it is pleasing/agreeable for x (dat.) to y (inf.)' 'x chooses to'

Section 5C

Examples of these are:

uos decebit nihil dicere 'it will be fitting for you to say nothing' tē dēdecet audīre 'it is unseemly for you to hear'

eos paenituit illīus uerbī 'it repented them of that word', 'they regretted that word' tē paenitēbit hoc facere 'it will repent you to do this', 'you will repent/regret doing this'

homines miseruit poenae 'it moved the men to pity at the punishment', 'the men were moved to pity / felt sorry at the punishment'

mē eius miseret 'it moves me to pity for him', 'I feel sorry for him' miseret të aliörum, tui të nec miseret nec pudet 'you feel sorry for others, but for yourself you have neither pity nor shame' (Plautus) libet mihi të accusare 'it is pleasing to me to accuse you', 'I want to accuse you', 'I choose to accuse you'

NB. Differentiate licet 'it is permitted' (cf. licence) from libet 'it is agreeable' (cf. libidinous; ad lib. = ad libitum 'to the point that pleases').

2 Translate into Latin:

You (pl.) ought to hand yourselves over to the consul.

It is fitting for a man to die in battle.

155 Impersonal verbs: passive

Verbs which control any other case than the plain accusative (such as e.g. parco (+ dat.) 'I spare') only occur in the passive in the 3rd person singular, e.g.

> mihi parcēbātur lit. 'it was being spared to me', i.e. 'I was being spared', 'clemency was being extended to me' > eis nocētur lit. 'it is being harmed to them', i.e. 'they are being harmed', 'harm is being done to them'

> eī non crēdētur lit. 'it will not be trusted to him', i.e. 'he will not be trusted', 'there will be no trust extended to him'

Hint: when a verb controlling the dative appears in the passive, LOOK FOR THE DATIVE TO BE THE SUBJECT.

Notes

1 Note the common impersonal passive idiom with verbs of 'going' and 'coming' to denote general movement, e.g.

> itur lit. 'it is being gone', i.e. 'people are going' itum est lit. 'it was gone', i.e. 'people went' uentum est lit. 'it has been come', i.e. 'there has been an arrival'

2 There is a passive impersonal infinitive, for use in accusative and infinitive constructions, e.g.

> dīxit mīlitibus imperārī lit. 'he said it to be being ordered to the soldiers', i.e. 'he said that orders were being given to the soldiers', 'he said that the soldiers were being given their orders' > nescit seminae fautum esse lit. 'he does not know it to have been favoured to the woman', i.e. 'he does not know that the woman was favoured / given support'

See 149 for futures, where fore ut is always used.

3 The agent (person by whom the action of the passive verb is done) is expressed, as usual, by $\tilde{a}/ab + abl$. e.g.

ā mīlitibus mihi crēditum est 'I was believed by the soldiers'

Notes

1 The fut. perf. means 'I shall have —ed'. It is often best translated into English either as the plain present or as the plain perfect ('I have —ed'), because English does not express the strict temporal relationship between two future events, one of which is prior to the other, as Latin usually does, e.g.

ubi consules uocauero, sententiam dicam 'When I (shall) have called the consuls, I shall speak my mind' nisi pūnītī erunt, rēī pūblicae nocēbō 'unless they are (= shall have been) punished, I shall be hurting the republic'

2 The future perfect active is formed by taking the stem of the 3rd p.p. and adding: -erō -eris -erit -erimus -eritis -erint. Note that the normal active personal endings (-ō, -s, -t, -mus, -tis, -nt) are used.

3 Note the alternative forms of 1st and 4th conjugation amārō and audierō, where -u- has been dropped. This also occurs with some other verbs, e.g. dēlērō = dēlēuerō.

English-Latin

Reread the text of 5C(iii), then translate this passage into Latin: Cicero was seized by great anxiety1. He therefore spoke to himself as follows: 'You should realise2 that you have saved the state from danger. Do not hesitate to demand the death-penalty from the conspirators. If they are spared3,4 by you, the state will be harmed3. If Roman citizens are killed4 on the say-so of a consul, this death-penalty will be a burden on you. Nevertheless, you ought to be bold. I think that you won't regret this boldness. For you will have saved the state.'

¹ Turn the sentence into the active, with 'anxiety' as subject, 'Cicero' as object.

² Use jussive subjunctive.

3 Remember that noceo/parco take dative, so you must use impersonal passives here ('they' and 'the state' will be dative; 'by you' ā+abl.).

⁴ Use future perfect tense.

⁵ Use fore ut + subjunctive.

Virgil's Aeneid

Aeneas, still telling the story of the fall of Troy, recounts how Achilles' son Pyrrhus (also called Neoptolemus) caught up with Troy's aged king Priam and slaughtered him at the very altar where he and his family had been taking refuge. His headless corpse now lies on the beach.

sic fătus senior telumque imbelle sine ictū coniecit, rauco quod protinus aere repulsum et summo clipei nequiquam umbone pependit. cui Pyrrhus: 'referes ergo haec et nuntius îbis Pēlīdae genitōrī. illī mea trīstia facta degeneremque Neoptolemum narrare memento. nunc morere.'

With these words the old man hurled his spear, but it did no damage. There was no strength in it. It rattled on the bronze of Pyrrhus' shield without penetrating, and hung there useless, sticking in the central boss on the surface of the shield. Pyrrhus then made his reply. 'In that case you will take this message from me and go with it to my dead father Achilles. Describe my cruelty to him and remember to tell him that Neoptolemus [= Pyrrhus] is a disgrace to his father. Now, die.'

The Vulgate: creatio caeli et terrae in principio creauit Deus caelum et terram, terra autem erat inanis et uacua, et tenebrae erant super faciem abyssī, et Spīritus Deī ferēbātur super aquas. dixitque Deus, 'fiat lux', et facta est lux. et uidit Deus lucem quod esset bona: et dīuīsit lūcem ā tenebrīs. appellāuitque lūcem Diem, et tenebras Noctem: factumque est uespere et mane, dies unus.

dīxit quoque Deus, 'fiat firmāmentum in medio aquarum: et dīuidat aquas ab aquis.' et fecit Deus firmamentum, diuisitque aquas, quae erant sub firmamento, ab his, quae erant super firmamentum. et factum est ita. uocauitque Deus firmamentum Caelum: et factum est uespere et mane, dies secundus.

dīxit uērō Deus, 'congregentur aquae, quae sub caelō sunt, in locum ūnum, et appāreat ārida.' et factum est ita. et uocāuit Deus āridam Terram, congregătionesque aquarum appellauit Maria. et uidit Deus quod esset bonum. et ait, 'germinet terra herbam uirentem et facientem sēmen, et lignum pōmiferum faciens frūctum iuxtā genus suum, cuius 15 sēmen in sēmetipsō sit super terram.' et factum est ita. et prōtulit terra herbam uirentem, et facientem sēmen iuxtā genus suum, lignumque faciens fructum, et habens unumquodque sementem secundum speciem suam. et uidit Deus quod esset bonum. et factum est uespere et mane, dies tertius.

dīxit autem Deus, 'fiant lūmināria in firmāmentō caelī, et dīuidant diem ac noctem, et sint in signa et tempora, et dies et annos; ut luceant in firmamento caeli, et illuminent terram.' et factum est ita. fécitque Deus duo lūmināria magna: lūmināre maius ut praeesset diēī: et lūmināre minus ut praeesset noctī: et stellās. et posuit eās in firmāmentō caelī, ut 25 lucerent super terram et praeessent diei ac nocti, et diuiderent lucem ac tenebras. et uidit Deus quod esset bonum. et factum est uespere et mane, dies quartus.

dixit etiam Deus, 'producant aquae reptile animae uiuentis et uolatile super terram sub firmāmentō caelī.' creāuitque Deus cētē grandia, et 30 omnem animam uiuentem atque motabilem, quam produxerant aquae in speciës suas, et omne uolatile secundum genus suum. et uidit Deus quod esset bonum. benedīxitque eīs, dīcēns, 'crēscite, et multiplicāminī, et replête aquas maris: auesque multiplicentur super terram.' et factum est uespere et mane, dies quintus.

dīxit quoque Deus, 'producat terra animam uiuentem in genere suo, iumenta, et reptilia, et bestias terrae secundum species suas.' factumque est ita. et fecit Deus bestias terrae iuxta species suas, et iumenta, et omne reptile terrae in genere suo. et uidit Deus quod esset bonum. et ait, 'faciāmus hominem ad imāginem et similitūdinem nostram, et praesit 40 piscibus maris, et uolātilibus caelī, et bēstiīs, ūniuersaeque terrae, omnīque rēptilī, quod mouētur in terrā.' et creāuit Deus hominem ad imāginem suam: ad imāginem Deī creāuit illum, masculum et fēminam creauit eos. benedixitque illis Deus, et ait, 'crescite et multiplicamini, et replēte terram, et subicite eam, et domināminī piscibus maris, et 45 uolātilibus caelī, et ūniuersīs animantibus, quae mouentur super terram.' dīxitque Deus, 'ecce dedī uobīs omnem herbam afferentem semen super terram, et uniuersa ligna quae habent in semetipsis sementem generis sui, ut sint uobis in escam: et cunctis animantibus terrae, omnique uolucri caelī, et ūniuersīs quae mouentur in terrā, et in quibus est anima uīuens, ut 50 habeant ad uescendum.' et factum est ita. uiditque Deus cuncta quae fecerat, et erant ualde bona. et factum est uespere et mane, dies sextus.

igitur perfecti sunt caeli et terra, et omnis ornatus eorum. compleuitque Deus die septimo opus suum quod fecerat: et requieuit die septimo ab uniuerso opere quod patrarat. et benedixit diei septimo et 55 sanctificauit illum, quia in ipso cessauerat ab omni opere suo quod creauit Deus ut faceret. Gerundives: -ndus -nda -ndum 'to be -ed'

The gerundive is an adjective based on a verb and declining like mult-us a um. Its meaning is passive, 'to be -ed'. Here is the formation:

amá-nd-us a um habé-nd-us a um 'to be loved' 'to be had'

dīc-é-nd-us a um 'to be said'

miná-nd-us a um¹ pollicé-nd-us a um loqu-é-nd-us a um 'to be threatened' 'to be promised' 'to be said'

3/4

audi-é-nd-us a um capi-é-nd-us a um 'to be heard' 'to be captured' menti-é-nd-us a um1 progredi-é-nd-us a um1

'to be lied' 'to be advanced'

161 Uses of the gerundive

1 As an adjective meaning 'to be -ed', e.g.

trādidit nos necandos 'he handed us over to be killed'

¹ These verbs, being intransitive, would normally be found only in the neuter. See 1611

A number of other verbs take this construction e.g. dō, petō, cūrō etc., e.g.

Caesar pontem in Arare faciendum cūrat 'Caesar saw to the making of a bridge over the Arar.' (Caesar)

2 With any tense of sum, carrying the idea of obligation, duty, necessity (i) personally, e.g.

mīlitēs erant reuocandī 'the soldiers were to be called back', 'had to be recalled', 'needed to be recalled'

(ii) impersonally, in the neuter singular, e.g.

prouidendum est 'it is to be taken care about', 'care needs to be taken' eundum est 'it is to be gone', 'one must go'

3 With nouns, especially ad + acc. to denote purpose, e.g.:

ad ēuertenda fundāmenta 'for the foundations to be overturned', i.e. 'for overturning the foundations' / 'with a view to overturning foundations'.

The ablatives causā/grātiā 'for the sake of' (which follow the phrase which they govern), are commonly used with a gerundive construction to express purpose, e.g.

templī uidendī causā 'for the sake of the temple-to-be-seen', 'for the sake of seeing the temple', 'to see the temple'.

(Cf. honōris causā (or grātiā) 'for honour's sake', 'as an honour'; e.g. = exemplī grātiā 'for (the sake of) an example'.)

NB. Where awkwardness results from literal translation of the gerundive, turn the phrase into an active form in English, e.g. ad mīlitēs necandōs lit. 'with a view to the soldiers to be killed' → 'with a view to killing the soldiers'.

Notes

1 The impersonal construction is very common with verbs which do not take a direct object in the accusative. These cannot be used personally in the passive, so appear in the passive impersonally with a number of adjustments (cf. 155), e.g.

parcendum est feminae 'it is to be spared to the woman', 'the woman must be spared'

Deponents also are used thus, e.g.

ūtendum est sapientiā 'one should use wisdom'

2 'By' a person is normally expressed by a plain dative with gerundives, e.g. omnia sunt paranda Caesari 'everything is to be prepared by Caesari'. But where the verb in gerundive form normally takes the dative, ā/ab+abl. is used instead, e.g. parcendum est fēminae ā mē 'the woman must be spared by me', 'I must spare the woman'.

Exercises

- 1 Form the gerundive of the following verbs and translate (using n.s. for intransitive verbs, 'it must be —ed'): arcessō, dēleō, augeō, prōpōnō, necō, dormiō, commoror, uereor, prōgredior, (optional: attribuō, sūmō, cōnseruō, tendō, praebeō, ūtor, pūniō, cohortor).
- 2 Translate:
 - (a) mihi prouidendum est.
 - (b) ad urbem dēlendam.
 - (c) laboris agendī causā.
 - (d) dux mīlitibus supplicem interficiendum trādidit.
 - (e) ad arcem defendendam.
 - (f) nöbīs progrediendum erat.
 - (g) Cicero ciuis conseruandos curat.
 - (h) ad manūs tendendās.
 - (i) ducis necandī grātiā.
 - j) tibi eundum erit.
 - (k) Cicerō custōdibus coniūrātōrēs cūrandōs trādet.
 - (l) ad ārās dēlendās.
 - (m) Catilinae arcessendī causā.
 - n) ad uoluntātem conseruandam.
 - (o) Lentulus omnia Catilinae delenda attribuit.
 - (p) dēlenda est Karthāgō.
 - (q) arx capienda erat.
 - (r) dolor augendus non est.
 - (s) supplicium sümendum erit.
 - (t) supplices tradendi non sunt.
 - (u) ā tē cīuibus parcendum est.
 - (v) cīuibus ā mē nocendum non erat.

- nīl sine ratione faciendum est. (Seneca)
- ōrandum est ut sit mēns1 sāna2 in corpore sānō. (Juvenal)
- nüllī enim nisi audītūrō dīcendum est. (Seneca)

3 Give the Latin for:

- I must go away.
- Cicero will have to take care.
- To preserve harmony. (Use ad + acc.)
- For the sake of exacting the penalty. (Use causa or gratia + gen. after the phrase)
- To summon the citizens. (Use ad + acc.)
- We had to go forward.
- Our fatherland must be preserved.
- The conspirators must be punished.
- We must not harm our fatherland.
- Cicero should spare no conspirator.

timeo, metuo, uereor 'I am afraid to/that/lest'

These 'verbs of fearing' can take an infinitive or subjunctive construction.

They take an infinitive construction when English does, e.g.

timeo îre 'I am afraid to go' ueritī sunt dīcere 'they were afraid to say'

They take a subjunctive construction with ne (negative ut or ne non) when the meaning is 'fear that/lest'. One would expect a subjunctive here: the certainties about the usual conditions and nature of events have disappeared (cf. 138). E.g.

> uereor nē Caesar mox redeat 'I am afraid that/lest Caesar will soon return > timent ut ad patriam ueniant 'they are afraid that they will not reach their fatherland' > metuimus në Cicero satis praesidi non habeat 'we fear that Cicero does not have enough of a guard'

Observe that

Section 5D

fearing $+ n\bar{e} =$ 'fear that/lest' (i.e. what you want not to happen may happen) fearing $+ ut/n\bar{e} \ n\bar{o}n =$ 'fear that . . . NOT' (i.e. what you want to happen may not)

Notes

- 1 The subjunctive is controlled by rules of sequence (see A-G Intro.(a)).
- 2 Any verb of effort or precaution (i.e. which expresses the idea of apprehension, worry, danger or anxiety) can use this construction, e.g.

prouidendum est ne populo Romano desis 'care must be taken lest you fail the Roman people'

3 As with purpose clauses, any reference to the subject of the main verb inside the clause will be reflexive; cf. 1451.

- (d) A suppliant does not fear his enemies.
- (e) There is anxiety in case children are killed.
- (f) There was a danger of the city being destroyed.

Virgil's Aeneid

Dido, for all her prayers and entreaties, has fallen irrevocably in love with Aeneas. She lives in his company all day, and when he is absent, clutches Aeneas' son Ascanius to her bosom. All work on the city stops.

heu, uātum ignārae mentēs! quid uōta furentem, quid dēlūbra iuuant? ēst mollīs flamma medullās intereā et tacitum uīuit sub pectore uulnus. ūritur īnfēlīx Dīdō totāque uagātur urbe furēns.

The shepherd who has been hunting her has shot his iron-tipped arrow from long range and caught her by surprise. As she takes to flight and runs over the hills and woods of Crete, the huntsman does not know it but the arrow that will bring her to her death is sticking in her side.

Rēs gestae dīuī Augustī

In this passage we read how Augustus was offered oversight of public morals. One wonders how he might have responded to Virgil's picture of Aeneas' entanglement with Dido.

Grammar and exercises for 5E

163 Passive perfect participles

You have already met passive perfect participles being used in ablative absolute construction (151). They can, of course, be used in agreement with any noun in any case, though they are less often used as adjectives (nāuis capta = 'the captured ship') than predicatively (nāuis capta = 'the ship, having been captured' . . .). See 77.

mīlitēs captī in carcerem dēductī sunt 'the soldiers, having been captured, were taken off to prison'. (Here captī is nom. pl. m. to agree with 'soldiers', the subject of the sentence.)

custodes uisos secuti sunt 'they followed the guards after they had been seen', 'they saw the guards and followed them'. (Here uīsos is acc. pl. m. to agree with 'the guards', the object of the sentence.)

mihi captō auxilium dedit 'he gave help to me having-beencaptured', 'though I had been captured, he gave me help'. (captō is dat. s. m. to agree with mihi.)

NB. Another common meaning of nauis capta is 'the capture of the ship', e.g.

ab urbe condită 'from the foundation of the city'

Hannibal uictus Römānös metū līberāuit 'the defeat of Hannibal freed the Romans from fear'

164 Summary of participles

- (a) Present participles, '—ing': 1 -āns (-ant-), 2 -ēns (-ent-), 3 -ēns (-ent-), 4 and 3/4 -iēns (-ient-); cf. 120
- (b) Future participles, 'about to —': stem of perfect participle + -ūrus -ūra -ūrum; cf. 81-3
- (c) Perfect participles, (deponent) 'having —ed': stem of perfect participle + -us -a -um; (others) 'having been —ed'; cf. 77, 151

All are adjectives, and agree with the person or thing they describe.

NB. Only active verbs which take an object in the accusative have a passive participle used as an adjective. For example, uentus and parsus are impossible in that form because both come from verbs which are intransitive: ueniō takes ad + acc., and imperō takes a dative. These forms exist only in the impersonal perfect passive, e.g. uentum est lit. 'it has been come', i.e. 'people have come'; imperātum est lit. 'it has been ordered' i.e. 'orders have been given'. You will have noticed that the 4th p.p. of intransitive verbs is always given in the -um form.

Exercises

- 1 Translate the participles in this list. Say whether they are deponent or passive: commorātus, coctus, mortuus, ūsus, datus, adiūtus, agitātus, lātus, gestus, cognitus, conātus, secūtus, intellēctus, locūtus, exortus, promissus, sūmptus, frāctus, motus, (optional: portātus, pollicitus, inuentus, hortātus, nūntiātus, minātus, necātus, reductus, perfectus, uocātus, amplexus, arbitrātus, seruātus, īnstructus, dispositus, ueritus, tēnsus, obsessus, questus).
- 2 Translate these sentences:
 - (a) Lentulus tenebrās conspicātus nihilominus negāuit sē mortem timēre.
 - (b) cēterī custodēs ā consulibus dispositos sequēbantur.
 - (c) consul secum multa locutus supplicium sumere constituerat.
 - (d) Celer ā senātū missus in agrō Pīcēnō erat.
 - (e) agmen ā consule înstructum Catilina uidit.
 - (f) Catilinae montibus et copiis hostium clauso1 fuga erat nulla.

- 3 Translate into Latin using perfect participles passive to translate 'when' and 'as' clauses. NB. None of these sentences calls for the ablative absolute.
 - (a) When they had captured the soldier, the guards killed him.
 - (b) After the column had been seen, Catiline hurried towards it.
 - (c) When the guards had been set Cicero gave them instructions.
 - (d) The appearance of the column as it had been drawn up was not worthy of the commander.
 - (e) Catiline's soldiers advanced, using weapons previously¹ captured.

¹ claudo 3 clausi clausus I shut in, cut off.

165 dum, antequam/priusquam

dum takes the present indicative where 'while' means 'at one point during', e.g.

dum Cicero haec loquitur, Catilina abiit '(At one point) while Cicero was speaking, Catiline left'

But imperfect indicative is used where the 'while' clause covers the whole period described by the main verb, e.g.

dum Cicerō sequēbatur, Catilīna fugiēbat 'while Cicero was following, Catiline was fleeing'

2 dum 'until'

dum + indicative indicates the idea of time only, e.g.

manē dum redierō 'wait until I get back' dum + subjunctive indicates anticipation or intention, e.g.

manē dum redeam 'wait for me to come back'

Cf. manēbat dum Catilīna castra mouēret (subjunctive) 'he was waiting for Catiline to move camp' mānsit dum Catilīna castra mouit (indicative) 'he waited until Catiline (actually) moved camp'

3 antequam/priusquam 'before' antequam and priusquam work rather like dum: indicative expresses purely time, subjunctive anticipation or intention, e.g.

with indicative: antequam abiit, epistolam scrīpsit 'before he left, he wrote a letter' with subjunctive: Catilina abiit antequam legiones Romanae peruenirent 'Catiline left before the Roman legions should arrive'

NB. ante- and prius- are often split from quam, e.g. ante uenī quam uir 'I arrived before the man' (Ovid).

4 dum (dummodo, modo) + subjunctive

A specialised meaning of dum is 'provided that', 'on condition that', e.g.

omnia faciam dum amīcus fīās 'I will do anything provided you become my friend'

166 utpote quī (quae quod) + subjunctive utpote reinforces the causal sense of quī i.e. 'as is natural for one who'. The verb is subjunctive. Cf. quippe quī 140.2. E.g.

miser sum, utpote quem Cynthia amet 'I am wretched, as is natural for one whom Cynthia loves'

NB. ut quī is also used in this way.

Reading exercise / Test exercise

Note especially in reading this passage (i) the use of the participle in Latin, where a clause or other formulation would be needed in English; (ii) that accusative future and perfect participles may actually be infinitives without esse and form part of an indirect statement.

L. Tarquinius, another captured Catilinarian, gives information to the senate, similar to that of Volturcius.

While at Rome this punishment was being exacted¹ from Lentulus, Catiline drew up his forces. He was waiting until² troops should be sent from his allies. But after it was reported that Lentulus was dead and the conspiracy revealed, he started to make³ his way through the mountains. The consul Antonius, sent by the senate with the purpose of⁴ defeating him in battle, pursued him. Metellus also moved his camp from Picenum, to obstruct Catiline as he hurried towards Transalpine Gaul. After Catiline saw that he was shut in by mountains and enemy troops, he decided to join battle as soon as possible with Antonius, in order to give more⁵ hope to his soldiers.

Virgil's Aeneid

At the command of the gods, Aeneas abandons Dido (who commits suicide) and continues on his journey. Eventually he arrives in Italy, befriends the local King Latinus, and is offered the hand of his daughter Lavinia in marriage. This causes civil war to break out between Aeneas and Turnus, to whom Lavinia had previously been betrothed. In preparation for this epic contest, Venus has Vulcan make Aeneas a special shield, on which the whole of Roman history to come is foreshadowed. Aeneas gazes in wonder at it: the final scene his eyes rest on is that of Augustus triumphant over his enemies.

at Caesar, triplicī inuectus Rōmāna triumphō moenia, dīs Italīs uōtum immortāle sacrābat, maxima ter centum tōtam dēlūbra per urbem. laetitiā lūdīsque uiae plausūque fremēbant; omnibus in templīs mātrum chorus, omnibus ārae; ante ārās terram caesī strāuēre iuuencī. ipse sedēns niueō candentis līmine Phoebī dōna recognōscit populōrum aptatque superbīs postibus; incēdunt uictae longō ōrdine gentēs, 10 quam uariae linguīs, habitū tam uestis et armīs.

hīc Nomadum genus et discīnctos Mulciber Āfros, hīc Lelegās Cārāsque sagittiferosque Gelonos finxerat; Euphrātēs ībat iam mollior undīs, extrēmīque hominum Morinī, Rhēnusque bicornis, tālia per clipeum Volcānī, dona parentis, mīrātur rērumque ignārus imāgine gaudet attollēns umero fāmamque et fāta nepotum.

Here Vulcan had moulded the Nomads and the Africans with their streaming robes; here were the Lelegians and Carians of Asia and the Gelonians from Scythia carrying their quivers; there was the Euphrates moving now with a chastened current; here were the Morini from the ends of the earth in Gaul, the two-horned Rhine, the Scythians from beyond the Caspian, never conquered before, and the River Araxes chafing at his bridge. Such was the shield that Vulcan made, and Venus gave her son. Aeneas marvelled at it, and rejoicing at the things pictured on it without knowing what they were, he lifted onto his shoulder the fame and fates of his descendants.

Notes

1 The perfect subjunctive active is formed by taking the stem of the 3rd p.p. and adding -erim -erīs -erit -erīmus -erītis -erint. Observe that, in this respect, it is almost identical in form to the future perfect (see 156). (The only difference is that the future perfect has the 1st s. in -erō and usually a short i at -eris, -erimus, -eritis.) Note the normal active personal endings (-m, -s, -t, -mus, -tis, -nt).

2 Note that in 1st and 4th conjugations the forms amā-rim etc. and audi-erim are common. Cf. dēlēu-erim and dēlē-rim.

Summary

Perfect active subjunctive: 3rd p.p. in -erim -erīs -erit -erīmus -erītis -erint.

Perfect deponent/passive subjunctive: perfect participle + sim sīs sit sīmus sītis sint.

Exercises

- 1 Form and conjugate the perfect subjunctive of these verbs (form passive only when requested): dispōnō (passive), cohortor, perueniō, occupō, pūniō (passive), moueō, ūtor, cōnficiō, uereor, sūmō (passive), (optional: portō, oblīuīscor, eō, possum, ferō (passive), audeō, cōnsīdō, īnstruō (passive), persequor, aduocō (passive)).
- 2 Pick out the perfect subjunctives in this list, detailing tense and mood (i.e. indicative or subjunctive) of the others: frēgistī, curāuerīs, mōueris, āfueram, ēgisset, īnstrūxerō, sūmpserim, properāuit, adlocūtus sit, ūsus esset, praebuerit, rogāuerint, arbitrātus erit, iussī sītis, nōluimus, mīseritis, dūxerīmus, conuocāta sit, interfectus erit, petīta sīs, (optional: uīceram, uīnxerīs, secūtae sīmus, passa est, prohibitus sit, conuocāuerītis, temptāuerimus, impedīuissem, cōnsiderāuimus, exorta essem, uīsum sit, collocāuerim, questus erō, oppresserīmus).

170 Use of perfect subjunctive

It is used in certain constructions already met, e.g.

- (a) Subordinate clauses in indirect speech (142)
- (b) Result clauses, tam (etc) . . . ut + subj. '(so) . . . that', 144, e.g.

potest fierī ut īrātus dīxerit 'it may be that he spoke in anger' (Cicero).

- (c) cum + subj. 'since', 'although' 124, 141 (but not usually 'when').
- (d) quī+subj. in generic or causal sense, 140.
- (e) Fearing clauses (timeo (etc.) ne), 162.

In these cases it should be translated as a plain past ('I —ed') or perfect ('I have —ed'), whichever fits better.

171 Perfect subjunctive: independent usages

The use of the present subjunctive in an imperative or potential sense has already been met (152 and 153). The perfect subjunctive is also used in these senses, e.g.

- (a) Jussive: ne petiueris 'do not seek' (= noli petere).
- (b) Potential: dīxerit aliquis 'someone may say' errāuerim fortasse 'I may/could perhaps have been wrong'.

Exercises

1 Translate:

- (a) tū nē quaesierīs . . . (Horace)
- (b) nüllam aciem, nüllum proelium timuerīs. (Livy)
- (c) ne hostibus cesseris.
- (d) nüllī inuīderīs.
- (e) në restiteris.
- (f) quis tibi hoc dīxerit?
- 2 Translate into Latin (using ne + perfect subjunctive for prohibitions):
 - (a) Do not be daring.
 - (b) Do not reveal this plan.
 - (c) Do not give yourself up.
 - (d) Do not harm the state.
 - (e) Do not kill the consul.
 - (f) Someone may assert.

Indirect (reported) questions

You have already met indirect statements ('I say that': 98-9, 143) and indirect commands ('I tell/urge/persuade etc. someone to': 134). Consider the following examples:

- rogō quid faciās 'I ask what you are doing'.
- nesciuit cur uënisset 'he did not know why he had come'.
- quaero quo iturus sis 'I am enquiring to where you are about to go'.

All these report direct questions: (a) 'What are you doing?' (b) 'Why have you come?' etc. Quite simply, Latin reports these questions in exactly the same way that English does, except that the verb is in the subjunctive. All you have to do is to translate the subjunctive as if it were the identical tense of the indicative.

Notes

- 1 num (or an) in indirect questions mean 'if', 'whether'; num quis means 'if anyone' (cf. ne quis, sī quis 1343, 1452, 1391; forms 14).
- 2 necne in indirect questions means 'or not'.
- 3 As with indirect statements and commands, references to the subject of the main verb are reflexive, e.g.

Caesar mīlitēs rogāuit utrum sē audīre possent necne 'Caesar asked the soldiers whether they could hear him (= Caesar) or not'

4 Where Latin uses future participle + sim/essem to express the future, you should translate this into a simpler future in English, e.g.

> Strobīlus nescīuit ubi aulam cēlātūrus esset 'Strobilus did not know where he was about to hide the pot' i.e. 'would hide the pot'

Exercises

- Translate these sentences:
 - omnēs rogant num seruos acceperit Catilina.
 - nescit consul utrum ad urbem an ad Galliam Catilina iturus sit.
 - Metellus sciebat quo Catilina progressurus esset.
- nemo scit quot milites habuerit Manlius.
- nesciō quantam praedam Catilīna adeptus sit.

- ciues rogant num consul coniuratores punire constituerit.
- quis rogauit utrum ignauus esset Lentulus necne?
- Sallustius nārrat quālis Tulliānī faciēs fuerit.
- omnēs scīmus quot legionēs Catilīna īnstrūxerit.
- consules rogauerunt num copiae Catilinae magnae futurae essent.
- scīre uelim utrum Catilīna an consul uictūrus sit.
- rogāuī utrum Catilīna ipse suos mīlitēs in proelium dūxisset necne.

2 Translate these sentences:

- scrībis tē uelle scīre quī sit status1 rēī pūblicae. (Cicero)
- quid faciendum sit, ā faciente discendum² est. (Seneca)
- considerabimus quid fecerit, quid faciat, quid facturus sit. (Cicero)
- uīuam an3 moriar, nūlla est in mē metus4. (Ennius)
- nihil est difficilius quam quid deceat uidere. (Cicero)

Section 5F

3 Translate into Latin (See R3 Note 4 for strict rules):

- I would like to tell you why you have been called together.
- You all know how idle Lentulus has been.
- Do not tell me how many enemies are pursuing us.
- I urge you to remember how much hope you have placed in this battle.
- Someone may ask why we are fighting.

Conditional clauses: 'if x had happened, y would have happened'

Where a sī ('if') clause uses the pluperfect subjunctive and the main clause uses a pluperfect subjunctive, the meaning is 'if x had happened, y would have happened' (cf. 139), e.g.

- sī Catilīnam uīdissem, fūgissem 'if I had seen Catiline, I would have fled'
- sī effūgissent, Rōma dēlēta esset 'if they had escaped, Rome would have been destroyed'

¹ stat-us ūs 4m. situation

² discō 3 I learn.

³ an or: note that there is no preceding utrum.

⁴ metus (unusually) is f. here.

Notes

- 1 This meaning is sometimes expressed by imperfect subjunctives (see 139³).
- 2 Mixtures of the set formulae are also possible, e.g. sī hoc fēcissem, laetus essem 'If I had done this, I would (now) be happy'.

Exercises

1 Translate into English:

- (a) nisi Lentulus ignāuus fuisset, rēs pūblica magnō in perīculō fuisset.
- (b) sī coniūrātōrēs dīuitiās habuissent, Catilīnae sē numquam adiūnxissent.
- (c) Catilīnae mīlitēs, nisi eos necessitūdo pugnāre coēgisset, effugere conātī essent.
- (d) uīcisset Catilīna, nisi Fortūna eī inuīdisset.
- (e) sī Catilīnae satis frūmentī fuisset, in montibus manēre constituisset.

2 Translate into Latin:

- (a) You would all have lived your life in exile, if I had not made this plan.
- (b) If Lentulus had been brave, our danger would not now be so great.1
- (c) If you had possessed wealth, you would now be fighting against me.²
- (d) Catiline would have gone into exile, if he had foreseen the idleness of Lentulus.
- (e) If Catiline had not made a speech, his soldiers would not have realised how much danger there was.

174 quōminus, quīn + subjunctive

1 quōminus (= quō minus, 'so that . . . not') is used after verbs of preventing, hindering, restraining, obstructing, and is an extension of the purpose or result clause constructions already met (144, 148). The best translation in these circumstances is usually 'from', e.g.

- mē impedit quōminus eam 'he hinders me so that I cannot go / from going'
- eīs obstitit quōminus īrent 'he stood in their way so that they could not go', 'he opposed their departure'
- nāuēs uentō tenēbantur quōminus in portum uenīre possent 'The ships were prevented by the wind from coming (= 'so that they could not come') into the harbour'

NB. See further Reference Grammar S2(f).

- 2 quin (qui ne 'how not?') is generally found in a negative context and has a number of usages of deliberative, consecutive and indirect force using the subjunctive:
 - (a) After negative expressions of preventing e.g. nīl tē impedit quīn eās 'nothing prevents you from going / so that you cannot go'.
 - (b) Meaning 'but that', 'without', 'that not' in negative contexts, e.g. numquam eum uideō quīn rīdeam 'I never see him but that I laugh / without laughing', numquam ēgressus sum quīn uidērer 'I never went out but that I was seen / without being seen'; nēmo tam sapiēns est quīn erret 'no-one is so wise but that he makes a mistake / that he does not make a mistake'.

Note also the expressions facere non possum quin 'I cannot do (a thing) but that' 'I cannot help —ing'; fieri non potest quin 'it cannot come about but that . . .', 'it is impossible that . . . not'; non multum abest quin 'it is not far from being the case that . . .'

(c) In certain negative expressions of doubting meaning '(but) that', e.g. dubium non est quin 'there is no doubt (but) that . . .'; non dubito quin 'I do not doubt (but) that . . .'; dubitari non potest quin 'it cannot be doubted (but) that'.

Examine the following examples:

non dubium erat quin Catilina uinceretur 'there was no doubt that Catiline was being defeated' nēmo dubitābit quīn Lentulus ignāuus fuerit 'no-one will doubt that Lentulus was a coward' nēmo est quin sciat 'everyone knows' fierī non potest quīn rēs pūblica salua sit 'it is impossible that the state will not be safe'

Catilina facere non poterat quin früstra loqueretur 'Catiline could not help speaking to no purpose'

Reading exercise / Test exercise

In indirect speech there are three basic constructions: (i) statements are expressed by acc. + inf.; (ii) commands by ut/ne+ subjunctive; (iii) indirect questions by a question word + subjunctive. As you know, subordinate clauses within it also have subjunctive verbs. You need also to know that in extended passages, indirect commands are often represented by subjunctive alone. In reading, the most important thing is to be aware when such an extended passage begins: once the fact of indirect speech is spotted, the next thing is to remember that the tense of the introductory verb will affect the tense of all subjunctives.

58: Caesar has just won a battle at the river Arar against one canton (pag-us1 2m.) of the migrating Helvetii. They send him an embassy, headed by Divico. is ita cum Caesare ēgit: sī pācem populus Romānus cum Heluetiīs faceret, in eam partem itūros atque ibi futūros ubi eos Caesar constituisset atque esse uoluisset; sīn bellō persequī perseuerāret, reminīscerētur et ueteris incommodī et prīstinae uirtūtis Heluetiorum. quod improuiso unum pāgum adortus esset, cum eī quī flūmen trānsīssent suīs auxilium ferre 5 non possent, ne ob eam rem aut suae magnopere uirtuti tribueret aut ipsos despiceret. se ita a patribus maioribusque suis didicisse, ut magis uirtute quam dolo contenderent aut însidiis niterentur. quare ne committeret ut is locus ubi constitissent ex calamitate populi Romani et internecione exercitus nomen caperet aut memoriam proderet.

Virgil's Aeneid

Eventually, Aeneas and his rival Turnus come face to face. Aeneas is about to kill him, but Turnus pleads for his life. In this passage, Aeneas is about to yield to Turnus' entreaty, when he sees Pallas' sword-belt glittering on him (see note). Aeneas kills him, and the Aeneid ends.

Grammar and exercises for 5G

Gerunds: -nd- forms, '-ing'

We have already seen that verbs can form adjectives (i.e. participles and gerundives), when they act like adjectives in agreeing with nouns or pronouns, e.g.

> naue capta nautae effugerunt 'with the ship captured, the sailors fled' hic homo monendus est 'this man is to be / must be warned'.

Verbs can also form nouns. As such, verbs take the form of the infinitive, or the gerund, which has exactly the same forms as the neuters of the gerundive (see 160). The declension is as follows (acc. to abl. as for 2n. nouns):

	1	2	3
	'loving'	'having'	'speaking'
nom.	amá-re	habé-re	dîc-e-re
acc. {	amá-nd-um amá-re	habé-nd-um habé-re	dīc-é-nd-um dīc-e-re
gen.	amá-nd-ī	habé-nd-ī	dīc-é-nd-ī
dat.	amá-nd-ō	habé-nd-ō	dīc-é-nd-ō
abl.	amá-nd-ō	habé-nd-ō	dīc-é-nd-ō
	4	3/4
	'hearing'	'capturing'
nom.	audi-re	cáp-e-re
acc. {	audi-é-nd-um audi-re	capi-é-nd-ui cáp-e-re	n
gen.	audi-é-nd-ī	capi-é-nd-ī
dat. abl.	audi-é-nd-ō audi-é-nd-ō	capi-é-nd-ō capi-é-nd-ō

Deponents have exactly the same forms and active meaning, i.e. mina-ndum 'threatening', pollice-nd-um 'promising', loqu-e-nd-um 'speaking', menti-e-nd-um 'lying', progredi-e-nd-um 'advancing'.

Usages

- 1 The infinitive is used as a noun-gerund in e.g. dulce est amare 'it is sweet to make love' 'love-making is pleasant'. Here amare is noun-subject. Cf. cupiō ambulāre 'I desire to walk' 'I like walking'. Here the infinitive is a noun-object. With prepositions, the -nd- form is used, e.g. ad amandum 'with a view to loving'.
- 2 ad + acc. 'for the purpose of', e.g. ad dicendum 'for the purpose of speaking', 'with a view to speaking'. The gerund may take an object, e.g. ad nauem capiendum 'to capture the ship'. Cf. 161.3 (gerundives).
- 3 causā/grātiā + gen. 'for the sake of', 'for the purpose of', e.g. dīcendī causā 'for the sake of speaking' (note word-order), habendī grātiā 'for the sake of having', 'in order to have'. Cf. 161.3 (gerundives).
- 4 In the abl., e.g. dīcendō 'by speaking', ambulandō 'by walking' (cf. innuendo 'by hinting'), e.g. ūnus homo nobīs cunctando restituit rem 'one man (i.e. Q. Fabius Maximus Cunctator) restored our fortunes by delaying' (Ennius).

N.B. Remember the irregular gerunds eund-um 'going' (eō), oriund-um 'rising' (orior). faciundum 'making', 'doing', gerundum 'doing' etc. are also found, for faciendum gerendum. The key vowel was originally -u-.

Exercises

- 1 Form, translate and decline the gerunds of the following verbs: exorior, dormiō, petō, nōscō, fugiō, commoror, teneō, eō, (optional: uoluō, uulnerō, occidō, uersor, reperiō, agō, gerō, taceō).
- 2 Translate:

176 quisque and quisquam

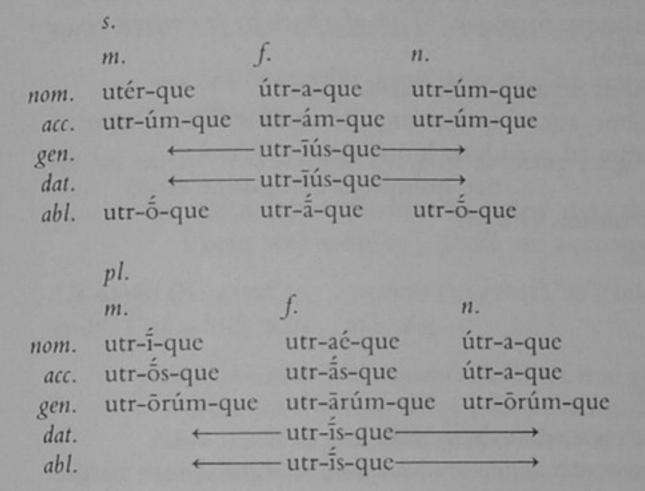

quisque means 'each and every', 'everyone'. It is often used with the superlative, e.g. optimus quisque 'each and every best (male)', 'all the best men'; pessima quaeque 'each and every most wicked woman', 'all the most wicked women'.

quisquam means 'anyone', 'any' and is normally found in negative contexts, e.g. nec quisquam 'and not anyone', 'and no-one'.

quisque and quisquam decline like quis (29) + que/quam. Note the neuter of quisquam is quicquam and the neuter of quisque is quidque or quodque.

177 uterque

uterque means 'both', 'each (of two)' and declines as follows:

Cf. alter, nūllus, tōtus, ūnus, sōlus etc. which also decline exactly like mult-us a um except for the gen. s. in -īus and the dat. s. in -ī.

178 4th declension neuter corn-ū ūs 'horn', 'wing of army'

s. pl.

179 Further comparative clauses

1 atque/ac

atque/ac is used after adjectives or adverbs which express 'likeness' or 'unlikeness', such as īdem 'the same', alius 'different', 'other', aliter 'differently', contrā 'opposite', 'contrary', par 'equal', pariter 'equally', perinde 'in like manner', similis 'like', 'similar'. E.g.

iussērunt simulācrum Iouis, contrā atque anteā fuerat, ad orientem conuertere 'they ordered (them) to turn the statue of Jupiter towards the East, contrary to what it had been before' perinde ēgit ac dīxit 'he acted just as he said'

2 Correlatives

You have already met ut meaning 'as', which acts as a correlative to sīc or ita 'thus', e.g. ut tū imperās, sīc/ita ego faciō 'as you order, so I do'. In the same way, tam 'so' is answered by quam 'as', e.g.

tam beātus erat ille quam miser ego 'he was as (lit. so) happy as I unhappy'

tot 'so many' is answered by quot 'as many', e.g.

tot uirī sunt quot fēminae 'so many men there are, as many (as) (there are) women', 'there are as many men as women'

Cf. tantus ('so great') . . . quantus ('as great', 'as'); tālis ('of such a sort') . . . quālis ('of which sort', 'as'), e.g.

tanta sapientia e i inest quanta u is 'there is so great wisdom in him as great (as there is) force', 'he is as much brain as brawn' tālem uirtūtem praebēbat quālem Horātius 'he showed bravery of such a sort as the sort (which) Horatius (showed)'

3 Unreal comparisons

quasi, uelut, tamquam mean 'as if', 'as though' and (with or without sī added) take a subjunctive where the comparison is unreal or hypothetical. Constructions under 179.1 add sī. e.g.

ita sē gerit quasi stultus sit 'he is behaving as though he were a fool' (but he is not) perinde agit ac sī hostis sit 'he acts just as though he were an enemy' (but is not)

1 The speaker is Cato the Censor (234–149). He is talking about old age with Gaius Laelius (b. 186) and Publius Scipio Africanus (Minor) (c 185–129), who are pictured as young men at the time of the conversation. His particular theme here is what can be done to overcome what are normally seen as the peculiar drawbacks of old age.

resistendum, Laelī et Scīpiō, senectūtī est eiusque uitia dīligentiā compēnsanda sunt, pugnandum tamquam contrā morbum sīc contrā senectūtem, habenda ratiō ualētūdinis, ūtendum exercitātiōnibus modicīs, tantum cibī et pōtiōnis adhibendum, ut reficiantur uīrēs, nōn opprimantur. nec uērō corporī sōlum subueniendum est, sed mentī atque animō multō magis; nam haec quoque, nisi tamquam lūminī oleum īnstillēs, exstinguuntur senectūte. et corpora quidem exercitātiōnum dēfatīgātiōne ingrauēscunt, animī autem sē exercendō leuantur. nam quōs ait Caecilius 'cōmicōs stultōs senēs', hōs significat crēdulōs oblīuiōsōs dissolūtōs, quae uitia sunt nōn senectūtis, sed inertis ignāuae somniculōsae senectūtis. ut petulantia, ut libīdō magis est adulēscentium quam senum, nec tamen omnium adulēscentium, sed non proborum, sīc ista senīlis stultitia, quae dēlīrātio appellārī solet, senum leuium est, non omnium. (Cicero, Dē senectūte (Cato Maior) 35–6)

Reread the text of 5G(iii) and then translate this passage into Latin:

When the fighting¹ was finished, you would have seen many corpses in the place. It was also possible to see² how much daring¹ there had been in Catiline and in his army. Each man had fallen in the place which he had seized by fighting. Nor had anyone run away. Catiline, who had run into the middle of the enemy for the purpose of dying quickly, was found far from his own men. He still retained the ferocity of expression³ he had had³ when⁴ alive. But the victory was not a joyful event for the Romans. All the best men had died or been wounded seriously. Those who had come out for the purpose of stripping corpses found not only enemies, but also friends and relatives as they turned over the cadavers. There were both joy and sorrow in the camp that night.

² Use uidērī poterat (lit. 'it could be seen').

3 Do not forget to insert a qui clause here, though English neglects it.

4 Not needed: use adj. alone, agreeing with subject.

Notes

- 1. 1 dēsinās: jussive subjunctive (see 152).
- 1. 2 quod: tr. 'that which', picked up by perditum. dūcās: jussive subjunctive, cf. dēsinās (see 152).
- 1. 5 nobis: pl. for s. is very common in poetry, especially with personal pronouns. The dative expresses the agent (usually expressed by ā/ ab + abl.).
- 1.6 illa: n. pl. 'those things (sc. I am reflecting on)'. Note cum is postponed, though it introduces the clause. iocosa is used as a noun.
- 1. 10 quae fugit: the clause is introduced by the next word sectare: sc. eam to make sense of it.
- 1. 13 inuītam: agrees with tē: sc. 'since you are . . .'
- 1. 18 cui: sympathetic dative (!); see 88.2.

Notes

Structure: in 1. 1, Furius and Aurelius are addressed as friends of Catullus, and in II. 2–12, their friendship is shown by the number of places they are prepared to go to with Catullus – whether (sīue) Catullus will go to x or (sīue/seu) y or (sīue) z. Ll. 13–14 summarise the past 12 lines, describing Furius and Aurelius as parātī (ready) to do all this (omnia haec (13)). At 15, we find out what they should in fact do: nūntiāte 'give a message' to Lesbia. Ll. 17–24 describe the content of the message, in subjunctives (uīuat . . . ualeat . . . respectet) – 'let her . . .'

1. 2 extrēmos: hold until solved (by Indos).

- 11. 3–4 lītus: subject of the ut clause. Take longē closely with resonante and hold longē resonante Eōā until solved (by undā: the function of the abl. phrase is revealed by the passive form of tunditur). NB. Here ut means 'where'.
- 11. 7–8 quae: n. pl. hold until solved (by aequora: 'the plains which . . .' obj. of colorat). colorat: possibly refers to the silt left by the Nile after its annual flood.

1. 9 altās: hold until solved (by Alpēs).

- II. 10–12 Caesar was engaged in the conquest of Gaul from 58–49. In 55 he crossed the Rhine and made an expedition into Germany. In the same year came the first of his two forays across the Channel to Britain. The words in I. 11–12 are in apposition to monimenta. The horribile aequor may refer to the English Channel (which caused Caesar many problems). But it is a scholar's correction, not the version preserved by the MSS.
- 1. 17 cum suīs: hold until solved (by moechīs). ualeat: a 3rd. person form of ualē 'farewell' (but see also the basic meaning of the verb).
- 1. 18 trecentõs: agreeing with quõs '300 of them' (!) held back for effect.

1. 21 meum: hold until solved (by amorem)

ll. 23-4 The word-order is complex: hold praetereunte until solved by arātrō – the abl. is not absolute, but instrumental after the passive verb tāctus . . . est. As often, postquam, which introduces the clause, is postponed. The subject is flōs.

180 Hendecasyllables (= 'eleven syllables')

The first five poems of Catullus which you have read make use of the following new metrical elements:

trāns (+acc.) across

$$Q = anceps$$
 ('doubtful', 'two-edged')
$$- Q Q - Q - Q = choriambocretic \quad (choriamb - Q Q - Q - blended together with cretic - Q - Q)$$

$$Q = bacchiac$$

-que) or

The poems scan as follows:

i.e. two anceps, choriambocretic, bacchiac, e.g. cēnābis bene mī Fabull[e] apud mē

Exercise

Using the above scheme, scan any one of the five poems in this metre, adding the correct word-stress (see rule, p. xv). Then read it aloud, thinking through the meaning as you read.

NB. Remember to check for elision.

181 Scazon ('limping iambics')

Poem 6A(vi) makes use of the following metrical elements:

$$Q = anceps$$
 (doubtful syllable)
- $Q = anceps$

(The combination anceps + cretic is known as an iambic 'measure'.) The poem scans as follows:

i.e. two iambic measures + 0 - - 9, e.g.

The metre is called 'limping iambics' because it seems to limp to a close. The sprightly iambics of the first two measures are rounded off not by a third, but by the 'limping' $\circ --\circ$.

Exercise

Using the above scheme, scan 6A(vi), adding the correct word stress (see rule, p. xv). Then read it aloud, thinking through the meaning as you read.

NB. Remember to check for elision.

182 Sapphics

Poem 6A(vii) is made up of stanzas in Sapphic metre, so named after the seventh-century Greek poetess from Lesbos, Sappho, who specialised in them. Sapphics use the following metrical elements, all of which you have already met:

$$- \circ -= cretic$$

$$\circ = anceps \text{ (doubtful syllable)}$$

$$- \circ \circ -= choriambocretic \text{ (see 180)}$$

$$- \circ \circ -= choriamb$$

Sapphics scan as follows:

First three lines:
$$-0 - |y| - 00 - 0 - |y|$$
Last line: $-00 - |y|$

I.e. cretic, anceps, choriambocretic, anceps (×3), choriamb, anceps. E.g. Fūr[ī] et Aurēlī comitēs Catullī...

Exercise

Using the above scheme, scan poem 6A(vii), adding the correct wordstress (see rule, p. xv). Then read it aloud, thinking through the meaning as you read.

NB. Remember to check for elision.

For the metre see p. 318 and 183.

- 1. 1 praetereā: Lucretius has noted that men have an inborn knowledge of the gods' existence, but misinterpret the evidence of their senses so as to think the gods responsible for phenomena in the world. caelī rationēs: part of an indirect statement introduced by cernēbant (verb uertī).
- 1. 2 uaria: acc. pl. n. Hold until solved (by tempora) second subject of uertī.

- 1. 3 quibus: abl. pl. f. solved by causīs; normal order would be: nec poterant cognoscere quibus causīs id fieret.
- 1. 5 trādere et . . . facere: these two infinitives are in apposition to perfugium, i.e. 'handing over . . . supposing . . .'. omnia flectī: indirect statement depending on facere (illōrum nūtū also belongs to this indirect statement).
- 1. 6 -que: postponed it joins this line to the previous one. deum: gen. pl. (see 16).

- 1. 13 cum: postponed it introduces the clause beginning tālia dīuīs.
- ll. 14–15 This sentence is arranged as a tricolon with anaphora (see p. 315). The verb (peperēre) is held back until the third limb. The subject is ipsī (i.e. early men), the exclamatory words (quantōs . . . quanta . . . quās) are all acc., agreeing with the objects. The verb constructs with acc. and dative to mean 'I produce x for y'. minōribu' = minōribus (the s is cut off to make the syllable light).
- 1. $16 \, \bar{u}llast = \bar{u}lla \, est. \, \bar{u}el\bar{a}tum$: sc. 'for a person (to . . .)'. It was the Roman custom to pray with the head veiled.
- 1. 17 uertier ad lapidem: Romans approached statues of the gods from the right, then, after praying, turned right to face them, and prostrated themselves (see 1. 18). Apart from stone statues, though, there were boundary-stones (terminī) and other sacred rocks which were venerated by the placing of garlands on them, or the pouring of oil. omnīs: acc. pl. f. Section 6D

1. 29 turbidus: with abl. of respect caenõ. Used predicatively with gurges (i.e. 'a torrent, murky . . .' not 'a murky torrent'). uāstā . . . uorāgine: abl. of description (qualifying gurges). The prose order of this line would be: hīc gurges, turbidus caenõ, uāstāque uorāgine, aestuat . . .

1. 30 omnem: acc. s. f. Hold (solved by harēnam). Cōcytō: = in Cōcytum.

1. 31 portitor: in apposition to the subject Charon. Tr. 'as harbour-officer' (since he, like similar people in the Roman world, collects tolls and controls access to the harbour where his boat stands). hās: acc. pl. f. Hold until solved (by aquās); the phrase is the object of seruat.

1. 32 terribilī squālōre: abl. of description. cūī... mentō: lit: 'for whom on the chin'. Tr. 'on whose chin'. Dative is commonly used in poetry for genitive in such expressions. plūrima: nom. s. f. Hold until solved (by cānitiēs).

1. 33 stant flammā: lit. 'stand with flame' i.e. 'are staring and ablaze'.

1. 34 sordidus: nom. s. m. Hold until solved (by amictus). nodo: abl. of means 'by -'. Charon is wearing a cloak knotted (not fastened with a pin) over his left shoulder, leaving his right arm and shoulder bared for his work.

1. 36 ferrūgineā: abl. s. f. Hold until solved (by cumbā: the abl. expresses place). corpora: i.e. the dead.

1. 37 sed crūda deō uiridisque senectūs: sc. est. deō 'the god's'.

11. 39-41 All these people make up the turba of 1. 38; the nominatives (mātrēs, uirī, corpora, puerī, puellae and iuuenēs) are in apposition to turba.

1. 39 dēfūncta: nom. pl. n. governs uītā, and is used predicatively with corpora (i.e. 'bodies finished with . . .' not 'finished-with bodies'. Cf. turbidus in 1. 29).

1. 40 magnanimum hērōum: depends on corpora.

l. 41 impositī: nom. pl. m. - cf. dēfuncta . . . corpora (l. 39). Used predicatively with iuuenēs, i.e. 'youths placed . . .' not 'placed youths . . .'

ll. 42, 44 quam multa . . . quam multae: 'as many as (the . . . which)'.

1. 42 autumnī frīgore prīmō: autumnī depends on frīgore. The abl. phrase expresses time.

1. 43 cadunt: here tr. 'die' (or lāpsa as 'having slipped' (sc. 'off the tree') and cadunt as 'fall' (sc: 'to the ground')). aut ad terram gurgite ab altō: this belongs in the new simile, introduced by quam multae in 1. 44.

1. 45 fugat: sc. eas (= 'the birds').

1. 46 trānsmittere: infinitive of indirect command (poetic use of a Greek construction instead of the normal ut + subj.; see 134). prīmī belongs with trānsmittere cursum.

1. 47 amore: abl. of cause 'from desire (for)'.

1. 48 sed: postponed (normally first word in a clause). nunc hos: sc. accipit. 1. 49 harēnā: = $r\bar{s}$ (where the boat is standing and where access is gained to it). This line is the cue for Aeneas to ask the Sibyl why some people are allowed to sail, while others are kept on the shore. The answer is that only the buried may cross; the unburied, quite apart from the religious taboo on their crossing, have no coin with which to pay for their passage. Among the unburied, Aeneas meets his steersman Palinurus, who was lost overboard before the Trojans arrived in Italy.

1. 50 alii i.e. the Greeks (also for the other things mentioned in ll. 50-3).

ll. 50–2 mollius . . . melius: the comparison is with the Romans, sc. 'than you Romans'. mollius: qualifies spīrantia. Tr. 'in more flowing (i.e. lifelike) lines'.

1.51 uīuōs: acc. pl. m. Hold until solved (by uultūs: possibly the adjective is used predicatively (cf. lines 39 and 41 above), i.e. 'faces which live', not 'living faces'). dūcent: in the sense 'bring forth'.

1. 52 caelī: i.e. 'of the heavenly bodies'. The phrase caelī meātūs is object of dēscrībent.

1. 54 surgentia sīdera: i.e. 'the risings of the stars'. Cf. 163 Note.

Grammar and exercises for 6D

See pp. 318–20 for the principles of Latin metre, and the scheme for hexameter.

183 The hexameter in Lucretius

The metre is used by both Lucretius and Virgil, but Lucretius is in some ways less strict. Lucretius for instance allows elision of -s to produce a light syllable, e.g.

minloribu' nlostrīs (for minloribus nlostrīs)

Here are the first three lines of the Lucretius passage scanned for you:

praeterela caelli ratilones | ordine | certo et uaril[a] annorlum cernlebant | témpora | uerti nec poter ant quibus | id fierlet cognioscere clausis.

NB. The caesura (see above p. 320, note 2) comes after caelī, annōrum, id (3rd foot).

184 Archilochean

The metre Horace uses in Odes 4.7 is called Archilochean, after the seventh-century BC poet Archilochus of Paros. The scheme is a couplet, made up as follows:

(a) Hexameter (see above p. 000).

(b) Half-hexameter, with dactyls (-00) only: -00 -00 2.

E.g.

diffüglére niules, redelunt iam glramina clampis arboriblusque com ae

185 Elegiac couplet

The metre used by Martial (e.g. pp. 208–9), Crotti (p. 287) and Ovid in Fastī (p. 405) and Amōrēs I.5 is the elegiac couplet. It consists of a hexameter (see above p. 319), followed by a pentameter, the scheme of which is:

E.g.

adposult medilo | membra leulanda torlo

There is always a caesura (see p. 320, note 2) in the place marked by in the example and the scheme.

Exercise

Scan the lines which you have translated in each section, taking care to watch for elisions. Mark foot divisions with . Mark caesuras in hexameters with \{, in pentameters with \|. Add the correct word stress (see rule, p. xv). Read each piece aloud, thinking through the meaning as you read.

A-G Verbs

Introduction

(a) Sequence

When the main verb of a sentence is PRESENT, FUTURE, FUTURE PERFECT, or PERFECT (meaning 'have —ed'), the sequence is 'primary', and subordinate subjunctives can only be present, perfect, or future participle + sim. When the main verb of a sentence is IMPERFECT, PERFECT ('I —ed'), or PLUPERFECT, the sequence is 'secondary' or 'historic', and subordinate subjunctives can only be imperfect, pluperfect, or future participle + éssem (or fórem). (For an exception, see 144.)

(b) Transitive/intransitive

A verb is said to be 'transitive' (transe \bar{o} transitus 'I cross over') when it controls a direct object in the accusative, e.g. port \bar{o} 'I carry' is transitive (in aúlam port \bar{o} 'I carry a pot' aulam = object, accusative), but pore \bar{o} 'I obey' is not (in \hat{e} \bar{i} pore \bar{o} 'I obey him' \hat{e} \bar{i} = object, but dative), nor is uen \bar{o} 'I come' (in uen \bar{o} 'I come to the gate', uen \bar{o} is controlled by uen.

(c) Meaning

témpus tríbus pártibus constat ('consists of' + abl.): praetérito, praesente, futuro (Seneca).

Present tense (durative)

This is a durative form, and means 'I am—ing', but also serves to mean 'I—', 'I do—'. It can also mean 'I begin to—', 'I can—', 'I try to—' and 'I have—ed and still am—ing', e.g. sexāgintā ánnōs uīuō 'I have been living for sixty years (and still am)'.

The present tense can also be used where one would naturally expect a past tense. It makes the action more vivid. This usage is called the 'historic' present.

Future tense (durative)

This is again durative, and means 'I shall be —ing', but is used also for 'I shall —'.

Imperfect tense (durative)

This means 'I was —ing', 'used to —', 'kept on —ing', 'tried to —', 'began to —'. But it can also be translated 'I —ed', since English does not always pay as close attention to the durative aspect of the verb as Latin.

Perfect tense (completed)

This means 'I have -ed', 'I did -', 'I -ed', 'I have done with -ing'.

Pluperfect tense (completed)

This means 'I had -ed', 'I had been -ing', 'I finished -ing'.

Future perfect tense (completed)

This means 'I shall have —ed'. Frequently it is best translated 'I shall —' or 'I have —ed' in English, e.g. póstquam líbrum légerō 'after I have read the book'.

(d) Principal parts

Active verbs generally have four principal parts, deponents have three (see the list at G). The principal parts give the key to all the forms of the verb, as follows.

Active verbs

hábe-ō: stem of active/passive forms of the present, future and imperfect indicative, subjunctive, imperative, gerund(ive) and present participle. (Note that 1st conj. verb stems end in

-a-, e.g. ámō, stem ama-; contrast hábe-ō, stem habe-; đíc-ō, stem dīc-; aúdi-ō, stem audi-; cápi-ō, stem capi-) habé-re: key to correct conjugation (so the correct endings of present, future and imperfect forms). Stem of imperfect subjunctive (habére-m etc.)

hábu-ī: key to all the perfect active forms hábit-us: key to all the perfect passive forms, and the future participle/infinitive active

Deponent verbs

pollíce-or: stem of all present, future and imperfect forms. (See note on 1st conj. stems above, under hábeō)

pollicē-rī: key to conjugation pollícit-us: key to all perfect forms, and future participle/

NB. We give the fourth principal part of all deponent and transitive verbs in the form of the perfect participle (ending in -us), e.g. amātus (ámō). Intransitive verbs have the 4th p.p. printed in the n.s. (-um), e.g. cúrsum (cúrrō). Where no perfect participle exists, we have printed the 4th p.p. in the form of the future participle (ending in -ūrus), e.g. fugitūrus (fúgiō). Where neither future part. nor past part. is known, we print—in the 4th p.p. position. All dictionaries give as the 4th p.p. the 'supine' (see A7 for form and function).

- 1 The future (or 'second') imperative is formed by adding -tō (s.), -tôte (pl.) to the present stem (e.g. amátō, habétō, póscitō, audítō, cápitō). It expresses an order which is not to be obeyed immediately. E.g. laédere hanc cauétō 'Take care (in future) not to rub her up the wrong way' (Catullus).
- 2 'Future' subjunctive active is formed by future participle + sim sīs sit, e.g. amatūr-us sim etc. or future participle + éssem éssēs ésset (sometimes fórem fórēs fóret), e.g. amātūrus essem (amātūrus fórem). Sequence (see A-G Intro.(a)) determines whether sim or éssem/fórem is used.

Notes

1 The stem is identical with that of the perfect participle. The form is identical with acc. s. of 4th declension nouns. It is used in the acc. (-um) and abl. $(-\bar{u})$.

2 The main uses are:

- (i) To express purpose, after verbs of motion, e.g. lēgātōs ad Caésarem míttunt rogātum auxílium 'They send ambassadors to Caesar to ask for help' (Caesar).
- (ii) To form the 'future infinitive passive'. See below B2, 1182-3.
- (iii) In the ablative with a few adjectives, e.g. mīrābile díctū 'wonderful to relate'.

D Semi-deponents

Some verbs in Latin have present, future and imperfect tenses in ACTIVE forms, but perfect, pluperfect and future perfect tenses in DEPONENT forms. Meaning is NOT affected by this change. E.g.

aúdeō 2 aús-	us 'I dare'	fio fieri fáctus	'I become', 'I am made', 'I am done' aúdeō	'I dare'	fīō	'I become'
audébõ	'I shall dare'	fiam	'I shall become'
audēbam	'I was daring'	fīḗbam	'I was becoming'
aúsus sum	'I have dared'	fáctus sum	'I became' aúsus éram	'I had dared'	fáctus éram	'I had become' aúsus érō	'I shall have dared'		'I shall have become'

Note the irregular conjugation of fio:

1st s. fio 2nd s. fis

3rd s. fit 1st pl. __1

2nd pl. -1

3rd pl. ffunt

Notes

1 Semi-deponents have past participles just like full deponents, e.g. aúsus 'having dared', fáctus 'having been made', 'having become'.

2 Similar verbs are gaúdeō 2 gauísus 'I rejoice', sóleō 2 sólitus 'I am accustomed; fido 3 fisus 'I trust'.

3 aúdeo has a regular subjunctive aúdeam -ās etc. and a form aúsim used only as a potential, meaning 'I would dare'. Cf. uélim 'I would like'. See 153.2.

Imperative 'do not (wish)!'

Notes

- 1 -se was the original infinitive ending (cf. és-se). Since s becomes r in between vowels (cf. ónus, H3(d)Note), amāse becomes amāre. When attached to a consonant stem, s becomes assimilated to it, e.g. uelse \rightarrow uélle; $n\bar{o}l$ -se \rightarrow n $\bar{o}lle$.
- 2 uólō and mālō have no imperative. But the original imperative of uólō, uel, became the conjunction meaning 'or'.

F1 Defective verbs

These verbs lack certain forms.

(a) coepī, meminī, odī

NB. inquam is used only to introduce direct speech.

F2 Impersonal verbs

These verbs have only the third person singular in each tense, an infinitive and a gerund:

opórtet 'it is right for (the accusative) to (infinitive)' décet 'it is fitting for (the accusative) to (infinitive)' dédecet 'it is unseemly for (the accusative) to (infinitive)' miseret 'it moves (the accusative) to pity for/at (the genitive)', 'x (acc.) is sorry for y (gen.)' paénitet 'it repents (the accusative) of (the genitive)', 'x (acc.) regrets y (gen.)' piget 'it vexes (the accusative) at (the genitive)', 'x (acc.) is sick of y (gen.)' púdet 'it moves (the accusative) to shame at (the genitive)', 'x (acc.) feels shame at y (gen.)' taédet 'it wearies (the accusative) at (the genitive)', 'x (acc.) is tired of y (gen.)' libet 'it is agreeable to (the dative) to (infinitive)', 'x (dat.) chooses to Y (infin.)' lícet 'it is permitted to (the dative) to (infinitive)' (also with ut + subj.)

plácet 'it is pleasing to (the dative) to (infinitive)', 'x (dat.) decides to y (infin.)'

Note the principal parts: they are all regular 2nd conjugation, e.g. opórtet oportere opórtuit. líbet, lícet and plácet are also commonly used in the passive perfect, líbitum est 'it pleased', lícitum est 'it was allowed', plácitum est 'it was decided'.

The following impersonal verbs are followed by ut + subjunctive or accusative and infinitive constructions:

áccidit 'it happens (that)' (ut + subj.)

appáret 'it is evident (that)' (ut + subj. or acc. + inf.)

constat 'it is agreed (that)' (acc. + inf.)

rēfert interest

'it is important (that)' (acc. + inf. or ut + subj.)

NB. 'It is of importance to me, you etc.' méā, túā, súā, nóstrā, uéstrā réfert or ínterest. Both réfert and ínterest take a genitive, e.g. ínterest ómnium 'it is in the interests of all' (Cicero).

Verbs which do not control an object in the accusative cannot be turned into the passive directly, and have to adopt an impersonal third person singular form, e.g.

tur lit. 'it is being gone', i.e. 'people are going' uéntum est lit. 'it has been come', i.e. 'there has been an arrival', 'people came'

míhi non créditur lit. 'it is not being believed to me', i.e. 'credence is not being given to me' éīs parcēbātur lit. 'it was being spared to them', i.e. 'they were being spared', 'clemency was being extended to them'

G Principal parts of irregular verbs

This list contains the principal parts of all irregular verbs met in the course together with a few important additions. Verbs are listed without their prefixes (e.g. for inuéniō see under uéniō). There are two exceptions:

- (a) Where a verb is normally found only with a prefix, e.g. confligo.
- (b) Where a verb has been met in the course only with a prefix.

The Total Learning Vocabulary (p. 557) contains the principal parts of all compound irregular verbs learned. Note that where a verb has no perfect participle, the future participle appears where that exists.

Notes

- 1 Virtually all 2nd decl. nouns are masculine. An exception is húm-us īf. 'ground'.

Notes

1 Consonant- and i-stem nouns can be masculine, feminine or neuter. The following clues can help:

Masculine: nouns ending in -ōs, -ō, -or, -er (main exceptions: dōs 'dowry', f.; ōs ōris 'mouth', n.; arbor 'tree', f.)

Feminine: nouns ending in -x, -ās, -dō, -gō, -iō, -ūs (if polysyllabic), -ns (main exceptions: dux 'leader', m.; fās 'right', n.; ōrdō 'rank', m.; mōns 'mountain', pōns 'bridge', fōns 'fountain'; dēns 'tooth'; all m.)

Neuter: nouns ending in -us, -ūs (if monosyllabic), -en, -al, -ar, -re, -le

- 2 Finding the nominative can be difficult with such nouns. Note the following clues:
 - (i) Gen. s. ending in -cis, -gis: nominative in -x (e.g. pācis→pāx)
 - (ii) Gen. s. ending in -tis, -dis: nominative in -s (e.g. uirtūtis→uirtūs)
 - (iii) Gen. s. ending in -pis: nominative in -ps (e.g. principis → princeps)
 - (iv) Gen. s. ending in -ris: nominative in -s, -r (e.g. témporis→témpus, mắtris→mắter)
 - (v) Gen. s. ending in -lis: nominative in -l (e.g. solis→sol)
- 3 As a general rule (a) nouns with the same number of syllables in the nominative singular as in the genitive singular (parisyllabic) have genitive plurals in -ium, e.g. ciuis, gen. s. ciuis, gen. pl. ciuium. These are i-stem. (b) nouns with more syllables in the genitive singular than in the nominative (imparisyllabic) have gen. pl. in -um, e.g. uírtūs, gen. s. uirtūtis, gen. pl. uirtūtum. These are consonant stem.

The major exceptions to (a) are cánis cán-is m. or f. 'dog', iúuenis iúuen-is m. 'young man', sénex sén-is m. 'old man', sédes séd-is f. 'abode', páter pátr-is m. 'father', máter mátr-is f. 'mother', fráter frátr-is m. 'brother', accípiter accípitr-is m. 'hawk', all of which have gen. pl. in -um. The rule for major exceptions to (b) is given in the note under fūr.

nom.	mánus	mánūs

gen.	mánūs	mánuum
dat.	mánuī	mánibus)
abl.	mánũ	mánibus (mánubus)

Notes

- 1 Most 4th decl. nouns are masculine.
- 2 The gen. s. in $-\bar{i}$ is found in early Latin.

(b) (Neuter) corn-u us 4n. 'horn', 'wing of army'

s. pl.

s. pl.
nom. rēs rēs
acc. rem rēs
gen. rḗī (rē) rḗrum
dat. rḗī (rē) rḗbus
abl. rē rḗbus

NB. 5th decl. nouns are mostly feminine, but dies 'day' is usually m. (f. when it means the goddess 'Dies', or a special day) and its compound merīdies 'midday', 'south' is always m.

H6 Greek declensions

Roman poets often use the Greek forms of Greek nouns, especially for names. Mostly only nom., acc. and gen. s., nom. and acc. pl. are found. The other cases have the normal Latin forms. Here are some examples.

1st declension Aenē-ās ae m. 'Aeneas', Priámid-ēs ae m. 'son of Priam', Eurydic-ē ēs f. 'Eurydice'

nom.	Aené-ās	Priámid-ēs	Eurýdic-ē
voc.	Aenḗ-ā	Priámid-ē	Eurýdic-ē
acc.	Aené-ān	Priámid-ēn	Eurýdic-ēn
gen.	Aené-ae	Priámid-ae	Eurýdic-ēs
dat.	Aené-ae	Priámid-ae	Eurýdic-ae
abl.	Aené-ā	Priámid-ē (-ā)	Eurýdic-ē

Notes

- 1 The pl. of such nouns is as for séru-a, except that nouns in -des have gen. pl. in -um, e.g. Aenéad-um 'of the followers of Aeneas'.
- 2 The Latin form of names like Eurýdicē is often found e.g. Cýbel-a Cýbel-am etc. 'Cybele'.

abl.		quō	quā	quō	+	-quíbus (quīs)

Notes

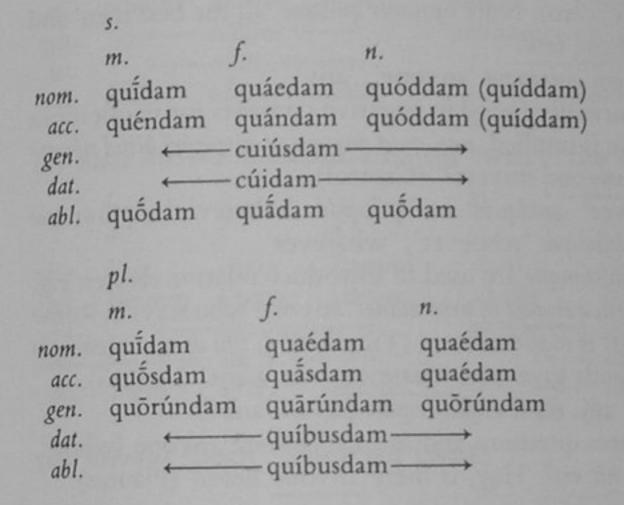

1 After sī, nē, nisi, num, the meaning of quis (Indefinite) is 'any', 'anyone', and nom. s. f. and n. pl. nom./acc. are always qua.

2 quis is quite often used for quī (adj.) e.g. quis . . . púer? 'What boy?' (Horace) Cf. áliquis I5(b) Note 2 below.

3 qui, an old ablative form, as an interrogative means 'how?', e.g. qui fit, Maecenas? 'How does it come about, Maecenas?' (Horace).

15 Compound pronouns

(a) quidam quaédam quóddam 'a', 'a certain'

(b) áliquis áliqua áliquid 'someone' and áliquī áliqua áliquod 'some'

dat.	+	– álicui —				(lious
abl.	áliquō	áliquā	áliquō	áliquō	áliquā	áliquō

Notes

1 The pl. is the same as for ali-+ quī (I4 above), except that the n. pl. is áliqua.

2 áliquis is quite often used for áliquī (adj.). e.g. num ígitur áliquis dólor in córpore est 'Surely there isn't any pain in your body?' (Cicero). Cf. quis, 14 Note 2.

(c) Other compound pronouns

(i) quisque quaéque quódque 'each and every', 'everyone'.

quisque is very often used to mean 'every(one)', e.g. súa cuique natiónī religiō est, nóstra nóbīs 'every nation has its own religion, and we have ours' (Cicero). Note óptimus quisque 'all the best men' and quótus quisque 'how few!'

(ii) quisquam quisquam quicquam 'anyone', 'any'.

quisquam is normally found in negative contexts (or in questions where a negative is implied, e.g. quid quisquam suspicarī áliud pótest? 'what else can anyone suspect?' (Cicero)).

(iii) quisquis 'whoever' quidquid or quicquid 'whatever'; quicumque quaecumque quodcumque 'whoever', 'whatever'.

quisquis and quicumque are used to introduce relative clauses; e.g. férreus est, heu, heu, quisquis in úrbe mánet 'anyone who stays in Rome (oh dear, oh dear) is made of iron' (Tibullus). dī tibi dent quaecumque óptēs 'may the gods give you whatever you want' (Plautus).

(iv) écquis 'anyone?' adj. écqui écqua/écquae écquod 'any?'
ecquis introduces questions and means 'Is there anyone (who)?', e.g. heus, écquis hīc est? 'Hey, is there anyone here?' (Plautus).

NB. Compounds of quis decline like quis. See above I4. Compounds of qui decline like qui. See above I3. But not all forms are found in all of these pronoun/adjectives.

I6 Special pronoun-adjectives

NB. Genitive and dative s. are not common, and occasionally the 2nd declension forms (gen. s. m./n. áliī f. áliae; dat. s. m. áliō f. áliae) are found. alteríus (gen. s. of álter) is also used for gen. s.

15-7 Pronominal nouns/adjectives

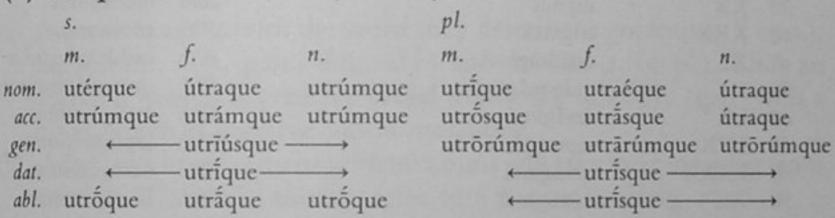

(b) núll-us a um 'no(one)', 'not any', 'no man'

(c) álter álter-a álter-um 'one (of two)', 'the one . . . the other'

(d) utérque 'both', 'each (of two)'

NB. The following special pronoun/adjectives also decline like lóng-us aum elsewhere, but have gen. s. in -īus and dat. s. in -ī: ūn-us aum 'one', sốl-us a um 'alone', tốt-us a um 'the whole', ūll-us a um 'any', úter útr-a um 'which of two?', 'whichever of two', neúter neútr-a um 'neither'.

mīlle mīlitēs = one thousand soldiers dúo mīlia mīlitum = two thousand(s) (of) soldiers tría mīlia mīlitum = three thousand(s) (of) soldiers etc.

17, J Adjectives, adverbs

2 Latin has three other sets of numerals. One answers the question 'How many each?', e.g. singul-ī ae a 'one each', then -nī. e.g. bīn-ī ae a 'two each' (distributive adjectives). A second answers the question 'How many times?', e.g. sémel 'once', bis 'twice', ter 'three times', quáter, then -iēns, e.g. mīliēns 'a thousand times' (numeral adverbs). A third answers the question 'Of how many parts?', e.g. tríplex tríplic-is 'threefold' (multiplicative adjectives).

3 The ending -ēnsimus was, after the Augustan period, often written -ésimus.

J-K Adjectives, adverbs and prepositions

J Introduction

- (a) Adjectives agree with the word they describe in gender (m., f. or n.), case (nom., acc., gen., dat., abl.) and number (s. or pl.). Thus an adjective which is genitive plural masculine can only agree with a noun which is genitive plural masculine.
- (b) Adjectives in agreement with no nouns will take their meaning from context. They will usually refer to a person or thing, e.g.

bónī (nom. pl. m.) 'good men'.
bónae (nom. pl. f.) 'good women'.
bóna (nom. pl. n.) 'good things' 'goods'.
fugiéntēs (nom. pl. m. or f.) 'people as they are fleeing' rogántī (dat. s. m. or f.) 'to the person asking'.
mors málum est 'death is a bad thing'.

(c) Some adjectives are often used predicatively. That is, instead of being best translated as adjectives (e.g. uir bónus 'a good man'), they should be translated as adverbs (e.g. uir laétus ábiit 'the man went away happily') or nouns (e.g. súmmō mónte 'at the top of the mountain'). The words most commonly used thus include those denoting position (e.g. súmmus, médius, próximus), quantity or order (e.g. prīmus, sōlus, tōtus), and attitude of mind or manner (e.g. laétus 'happily', inuītus 'unwillingly').

² Like tôtus i.e. gen. s. ūnīus, dat. s. ūnī; pl. ūnī, ūnae, ūna, like pl. of lóngus (I6(d) Note).

Notes

1 diues has also a set of i-stem endings (in brackets), which are commonly used. Both diues and pauper are often used as nouns. See 47.

2 Other consonant-stem adjectives are caélebs caélib-is 'unmarried', cómpos cómpot-is 'possessing', ínops ínop-is 'poor' (abl. s. -ī), mémor mémor-is 'mindful' (abl. s. -ī), párticeps partícip-is 'sharing', sóspes sóspit-is 'safe', supérstes supérstit-is 'surviving', uétus uéter-is 'old'.

J3 Comparative and superlative adjectives

These are formed as follows:

Comparatives ('more —', 'rather —', 'quite —'): gen. s. stem + -ior, (neuter -ius)

Superlatives ('very—', '—est', 'most—', 'extremely—'): gen.
s. stem + -issimus, or nom. s. + -rimus (in the case of adjectives which end in -er in the nominative, e.g. púlcher→ (comparative) púlchrior→(superlative) pulchérrimus)

Note also the irregular superlative, gen. s. stem + -limus, of six adjectives in -ilis, viz. fácilis 'easy', diffícilis 'difficult', símilis 'similar', dissímilis 'dissimilar', grácilis 'slender', húmilis 'lowly': e.g. facíl-limus.

J2-3 Adjectives, adverbs

The declension of comparative and superlative forms is as follows:

(a) Comparative adjectives: lóngior lóngius 'longer'

(c) Irregular comparatives and superlatives: bónus, málus, múltus, mágnus, páruus

bón-us a um		óptim-us a um	'good', 'better', 'best' (cf. ameliorate, optimise)
mál-us a um	(meliőr-is) péior (peiőr-is)	péssim-us a um	'bad', 'worse', 'worst' (cf. pejorative, pessimist)

múlt-us a um	plūs (plū́r-is)	plūrim-us a um	'much', 'more', 'most' (cf. plus (+))
mágn-us a um	maíor (maiór-is)	máxim-us a um	'big', 'bigger', 'biggest' (cf. major, maximise)
páru-us a um	mínor (minốr-is)	mínim-us a um	'small/few', 'smaller/fewer/less', 'smallest/fewest/least' (cf. minor, minimise)

NB. These decline quite regularly (see lóngior longíssimus) except for plūs:

NB. $pl\bar{u}s$ is really the comparative of the adverb $m\dot{u}ltum$ 'much', while $pl\dot{u}r\bar{e}s$ is the comparative of the plural $m\dot{u}lt-\bar{\iota}$ ae a. The s. $m\dot{u}ltus$ has no true comparative.

J4 Adverbs

(a) Regular and irregular positive adverbs

1 Regular adverbs

A common way of forming adverbs in English is to add '—ly' to an adjective (e.g. 'slow-ly', 'quick-ly', 'passionate-ly'). In Latin, adverbs (which never change) are also regularly formed from adjectives as follows:

Adverbs based on 1st/2nd declension adjectives: add -ē to the stem, e.g. stúltus→stúltē 'foolishly'; míser→míserē 'unhappily'; púlcher→púlchrē 'beautifully'. A very few end in -ter, e.g. hūmānus→hūmāniter 'gently', and some in -ō, e.g. cértō 'for a fact'.

Adverbs based on 3rd declension adjectives: add -(i)ter to the stem, e.g. fórtis→fórtiter 'bravely'; aúdāx→audācter 'boldly'; céler→celériter 'swiftly'. But note an important exception: fácile 'easily'

13-5 Adjectives, adverbs

2 Irregular adverbs

```
bónus→béne 'well'.

páruus→paúlum '(a) little', 'slightly'.

múltus→múltum 'much'.

mágnus→magnópere 'greatly'.
```

NB. lóngē (regularly formed from lóngus 'long') 'far'.

(b) Regular comparative and superlative adverbs 'more —ly', 'most —ly'

Comparative and superlative adverbs are formed from the comparative and superlative adjectives.

	'foolishly'	'more foolishly'	'most foolishly'
Adjective	stúlt-us	stúlt-ior	stultíssim-us
Adverb	stúlt-ē	stúlt-ius	stultíssim-ē
	'quickly'	'more quickly'	'most quickly'
Adjective	céler	celér-ior	celérrim-us
Adverb	celér-iter	celér-ius	celérrim-ē

NB. The comparative adverb has the same form as the neuter of the comparative adjective.

(c) Irregular comparative and superlative adverbs

Most of these are only irregular in so far as the corresponding adjective has irregular comparative and superlative forms. If you already know the adjective forms, most of these adverbs are formed quite regularly from the adjective:

béne mále paúlum múltum magnópere	'well' 'badly' 'a little' 'much' 'greatly'	mélius péius minus plūs mágis	'better' 'worse' 'less' 'more'	óptimē péssimē mínimē plūrimum máximē	'best'. 'worst', 'very badly'. 'very little'; 'no'. 'most'; 'a lot'. 'very much'; 'most'; 'yes'.
magnopere	greatly	magis	more	maxime	very much; most, yes.

J5 'Comparative' constructions

(a) Comparative

1 quam means 'than' when it is used with a comparative, e.g. tū sắnior es quam égo 'you are saner than I'. Cf. mắlō pắcem quam béllum 'I prefer peace to war' (málo = mágis uólo 'I want x more than y'). Observe that the two things compared are in the same case, e.g. maiorem habeo librum quam túum (líbrum) 'I have a larger book than yours'.

2 But Latin can also compare two items by dropping quam and putting the item compared in the ablative, e.g.

> tū mē sānior es 'you are saner than I' quis sapiéntior sapiénte est? 'who is wiser than the wise?'

3 Note the use of the comparative + quam quī + subjunctive in the idiom 'too - to do something', e.g.

> sapiéntior est quam qui hoc fáciat '(lit.) he is wiser than one who would do that', i.e. 'he is too wise to do that'

4 Note the use of the ablative of the measure of difference (see L(f)4(iv)) with comparative adjectives or adverbs in sentences meaning 'the more . . . the more . . .', e.g.

> quo própius éa conténtio accédit . . . éo clárius id perículum appáret 'the closer that fight comes, the more clearly that danger appears' (Caelius) > tánto bréuius ómne quánto felícius témpus 'the happier a period (is), the shorter it (is)' (or 'seems to be') (Pliny) (lit. 'by so much shorter every (time is), by how much the happier the time (is)', i.e. 'time flies when you're enjoying yourself').

(b) Superlative quam with the superlative means 'as - as possible', e.g.

cenam quam máximam hábeo 'I have the largest dinner possible' This usage applies equally to adverbs, e.g.

quam celérrime 'as fast as possible'

(c) Other 'comparative' constructions

1 átque/ac

átque/ac is used after adjectives or adverbs which express 'likeness' or 'unlikeness', such as idem 'the same', álius 'different', 'other', áliter, 'differently', cóntrā 'opposite', 'contrary', par 'equal', páriter 'equally', perínde 'in like manner', símilis 'like', 'similar'. E.g.

iussérunt simulacrum Iouis, contra atque antea fuerat, ad orientem conuértere 'They ordered (them) to turn the statue of Jupiter towards the East, contrary to what it had been before' (Cicero).

perinde ēgit ac dīxit 'He acted just as he said'.

2 Correlatives

ut meaning 'as' acts as a 'correlative' to sīc or íta 'thus', e.g. ut tū ímperās, sīc/ita égo fácio 'as you order, so I do'. In the same way, tam 'so' is answered by quam 'as', e.g.

tam beatus érat ille quam miser égo 'he was as (lit. so) happy as I unhappy'

tot 'so many' is answered by quot 'as many', e.g.

tot uirī sunt quot feminae 'so many men there are as many (as) (there are) women', 'there are as many men as women'

Cf. tántus 'so great' . . . quántus 'as great', 'as'; tális 'of such a sort' . . . quális 'of which sort', 'as', e.g.

tánta sapiéntia éī ínest quánta uīs 'there is so great wisdom in him as great (as there is) force', 'he has as much brain as brawn' talem uirtutem praebébat qualem Horatius 'he showed bravery of such a sort as the sort (which) Horatius (showed)'

NB. See J5(a)4 above for other correlative usages.

3 Unreal comparisons

quási, uélut, támquam mean 'as if', 'as though' and (with or without sī added) take a subjunctive where the comparison is unreal or hypothetical. Constructions under J5(c)1 add sī. E.g.

ita sē gérit quási stúltus sit 'he is behaving as though he were a fool' (but he is not).

perínde ágit ac sī hóstis sit 'he acts just as though he were an enemy' (but he is not).

NB. támquam, quási, uélut, sīcut and ut are all used with nouns to express 'like', 'as it were', e.g. monte decurrens uélut amnis 'like a river as it runs down from the mountain' (Horace - speaking of Pindar).

Note also the abl. nouns caúsā and grātiā (+ gen.), placed after the word they govern, meaning 'for the sake of', 'for the purpose of'.

When prepositions are followed by the noun they govern, their accent is determined by treating the two words as one, e.g. $\acute{a}pud$ (natural accent) and $ap\acute{u}d$ $m\ddot{e}$ (as though it were $apudm\ddot{e}$).

Simple sentences may be classified into four categories

1 Statements (including exclamations): e.g. Caésar ábit 'Caesar leaves', quam trístis est 'how sad he is!'

'Potential' statements ('would', 'should', 'could') are expressed by the subjunctive, e.g. uélim 'I should wish', dicat/dixerit aliquis 'someone would/may say', as are 'generalising' statements, e.g. haud inuéniās 'you (i.e. one) would scarcely find', créderes 'you would have believed'.

2 Questions: e.g. abīsne? 'are you leaving?' (-ne turns a statement into a question.) quis ábit 'who is leaving?'

própe (+acc.) near própter (+ acc.) on account of secundum (+ acc.) behind; along; after; according to Double questions are asked with útrum . . . an, e.g. útrum ábīs an mánēs? 'are you going or staying?' ánnōn means 'or not' in direct speech; indirect uses nécne 'or not'. útrum is sometimes omitted (in direct and indirect speech), e.g. ábīs an mánēs?

an is very flexible. It can introduce a plain question (like -ne), or mean 'whether' or 'or'. num means 'surely not?', expecting the answer 'no' (num means 'if' 'whether' in indirect questions, e.g. rógō num ábeās 'I ask whether you depart'). nōnne means 'surely?', expecting the answer 'yes'. écquis means 'anyone' in a question, e.g. écquis ábit? 'is anyone leaving?' (See above I5(c)(iv) and Note.)

'Deliberative' questions take the form 'what am I to', 'should I -?' and are expressed by the subjunctive, e.g. quid fáciam 'what am I to do?' quid fácerem 'what was I to do?'

3 Commands: e.g. ábī! 'leave!'; nölī abīre 'don't leave!'

 $n\bar{e}$ + perfect subjunctive also expresses prohibitions, e.g. $n\bar{e}$ trānsierīs 'do not cross'. $n\bar{e}$ + present subjunctive is used in general prohibitions, e.g. $n\bar{e}$ pétās 'you (i.e. one) should not seek'. $n\bar{e}$ + imperative is common in poetry, e.g. $n\bar{e}$ fúgite hospítium 'do not shun our hospitality' (Virgil).

Jussives ('let us', 'let him', 'let them') are expressed by the subjunctive (present), e.g. abeāmus 'let us leave', fīat 'let there be'.

'Polite' subjunctives express 'please', e.g. ábeās 'kindly leave' (poetic), or general precepts, e.g. sápiās 'you (i.e. one) should be wise'. Often commands are made more polite by the use of fac, uídē 'see to it (that)', cáuē 'take care (not to)', uélim 'I would like (x to)' with subjunctive, e.g. fac míhi scríbās 'make sure you write to me'.

4 Wishes: e.g. uólō abīre 'I want to leave'. The subjunctive is also used to express wishes, e.g. uáleant cīuēs 'may the citizens flourish'. Sometimes útinam (negative útinam nē) precedes the wish, e.g. útinam nē hoc scrīpsíssēs 'would you had not written this'.

uólō + subjunctive sometimes combine, e.g. uólō tū hoc fáciās 'I wish (that) you would do this'.

NB. In general, the tenses are used as in subjunctive conditionals (see S2(c)), present referring to a wish for the future, imperfect to a wish for the present, pluperfect to a wish for the past.

(b) Agreement

1 A verb agrees with its subject in number and person, e.g.

Caésar ádest

ádest is third person, singular, because Caésar (subject) is third person, singular.

2 An adjective agrees with the word it describes in number, gender and case, e.g.

féminam tristem uídeo 'I see the unhappy woman' féminam is accusative, singular, feminine, so tristem is accusative, singular, feminine (see J Intro.).

Notes

1 The verb 'to be' is often omitted in sentences, e.g. níhil bónum nísi quod honéstum 'nothing [is] good except what is honourable'.

2 A singular subject will sometimes take a plural verb, if the subject implies 'a number of people', e.g. pars militum cáptī sunt 'part of the soldiers was captured', 'some soldiers were captured'. Likewise, a list of subjects can be taken all together and the verb be singular, or the verb be singular because the last in the list is singular. Where there are both masculine and feminine subjects described by one adjective, the adjective will tend to agree with the masculine.

3 More information may be added about a noun or pronoun by further nouns or pronouns in the same case, e.g. thésaurus Dēmaénetī, áuī Eucliónis 'the treasure of Demaenetus, grandfather of Euclio'. áuī is genitive, because it refers to Dēmaénetī: it is said to be 'in apposition' to Dēmaénetī.

(c) Sequence of tenses

Primary sequence means that the main verb is present, future, future perfect, or perfect with 'have' (e.g. 'I have loved', not 'I loved'). In these cases, subjunctives used in subordinate clauses are restricted to the present, perfect and future participle + sim.

Secondary or historic sequence means that the main verb is imperfect, perfect without 'have' (e.g. 'I loved') or pluperfect. In these cases, subjunctives used in subordinate clauses are restricted to imperfect, pluperfect and future participle + éssem.

(a) Nominative

The nominative case is used for:

1 The subject of a sentence or clause, e.g. Eúcliō aúlam pórtat 'Euclio carries the pot' (note that the subject of an indirect statement goes into the accusative – see R1).

2 The complement, especially with the verb 'to be', e.g. Eúcliō sénex est 'Euclio is an old man'; Caésar consul fit 'Caesar becomes consul'.

(b) Vocative

The vocative case is used to indicate the person or thing addressed e.g. (ō) Eúcliō, cūr aúlam pórtās? 'Euclio, why are you carrying a pot?'; et tū, Brūte? 'you too, Brutus?'

(c) Accusative

The accusative case limits or defines. It is used in a number of ways.

1 For the direct object of a verb, e.g. Eúcliō aúlam pórtat 'Euclio carries a pot'.

Some verbs take a double accusative. Some examples are:

dóceō 'I teach x (acc.) y (acc.)' rógō 'I ask x (acc.) for y (acc.)'; cf. ốrō 'I beg x (acc.) for y (acc.)' cēlō 'I hide x (acc.) from y (acc.)'

E.g. Eúclio Lyconidem prūdéntiam docet 'Euclio teaches Lyconides wisdom'; mē consília célat 'he hides his plans from me'.

The 'cognate' accusative expresses the same idea as the verb, e.g. uíam it 'he travels on a road'; lūdum lūdit 'he plays a game'.

2 To express motion towards, often with ad or in, e.g.

Eúclio ad aédis uénit 'Euclio comes to the house' Romam éunt 'they go to Rome'

3 To express time throughout, e.g.

trēs dies 'for three days'

4 To express extent of space and its measurement, e.g.

tría mília pássuum ambulāuérunt 'they walked for three miles' céntum pédēs áltus 'one hundred feet high'

5 To express the idea 'in respect of', e.g.

pédēs trémit 'he trembles in respect of his feet' mihi similis fáciem 'like me in respect of the face'

This is very common in poetry.

6 To express an adverbial idea, e.g.

dúlce 'sweetly' quid? 'to what extent?'
múltum 'much'

7 To express exclamations, e.g. mē miserum! 'unhappy me!'

(d) Genitive

The genitive often defines or completes the meaning of a noun. Its most frequent translation is 'of'. Note the different number of relationships that 'of' can indicate.

1 Possession, author or source ('belonging to', 'written by', 'derived from') e.g.

Euclionis aédes 'the house of Euclio'
Vérgili líber 'a book of Virgil' (i.e. written by Virgil)

Note that possession of a characteristic is indicated by the genitive in the following idiom:

stúltī est haec dicere 'it is (the mark) of a fool to say this'

2 Part of a whole, e.g.

mágna pars ciuium 'a great part of the citizens'

Cf. nímis 'too much', sátis 'enough', párum 'too little', áliquid 'some', quid? 'some', 'what?': all take the 'partitive' genitive.

3 Description of content or material ('consisting of', 'containing'), e.g.

poculum áquae 'a cup of water'

- 4 Description of quality or character (always with an adjective), e.g. uir mágnae sapiéntiae 'a man of great wisdom'
- 5 Value, e.g.

hómo níhilī 'a fellow of nothing' i.e. 'of no worth' fémina plūrimī 'a woman of very great (worth)'

- 6 Subjective and objective genitives. Consider the ambiguity of ámor pátris 'the love of the father' - does it mean 'the love which the father shows' (i.e. 'father loves' - father is subject, so 'of the father' is subjective genitive) or 'the love which is shown to the father' (i.e. someone loves father, when father is the object, so 'of the father' is objective genitive)? The context will tell you, but you must be aware of both possibilities. Note that méi, túi, súi, nóstri, uéstri, are objective genitives, i.e. amor nostrī can only mean 'love which is shown to us', not 'love which we feel'.
- 7 Many verbs and adjectives control the genitive case, especially words involving:

Remembering and forgetting (méminī, oblīuīscor) Pitying (miseret) Losing or lacking (égeō) (also with abl.) Filling (plenus) (also with abl.)

E.g.

uerbörum oblīuīscor 'I forget the words' mē miseret túī 'I feel pity for you' cíbī égeō 'I need food' plenus áquae 'full of water'

8 símilis 'like', 'resembling' takes the genitive or dative, e.g. uir méi símilis 'a man like me'.

(e) Dative

The dative case is best dealt with in two parts.

1 People in the dative

The common idea behind all these usages is that the person in the dative will be interested or involved in the action, often to his advantage or disadvantage. The action, in other words, has some consequence for the person in the dative. Often 'to', 'for' or 'from' will translate it adequately. In this sense, the dative case is used in the following ways.

- To indicate the indirect object of the sentence-that is, the person to whom something is given, told, said, promised, shown, e.g. aúlam tíbi dō 'I give you (= to you) the pot' fåbulam mihi nårra! 'tell me (= to me) the story' quid Caésarī dīxístī? 'what did you say to Caesar?'
- To indicate the person to whose advantage or disadvantage something is done, e.g. béne est míhi 'it's fine for me'
- To indicate possession, with the verb 'to be', e.g. est míhi pecūnia 'there is money to me', 'I have money' See also 88.1.
- (iv) As agent, showing by whom something is done, e.g. haec mihi dicta sunt 'these things have been said by me' hoc míhi faciéndum est 'this is to be done by me'
- (The dative of agent is most frequently used with gerundives.) To indicate the person interested in the action (only personal pronouns, always used in lively way) e.g. quid míhi Célsus ágit? 'what is Celsus doing? It interests me / I should like to know / please tell me' (Horace).
- To indicate the person judging, in whose eyes something is the case, e.g. Quintia formosa est múltis 'Quintia is beautiful to many / in the eyes of many' (Catullus).
- (vii) With certain verbs, and adjectives. Examples of verbs are: crēdō 'I believe'. fáueō 'I favour'. fīdō 'I trust'. ignöscö 'I pardon'. ímpero 'I order'. inuídeo 'I envy'.

īrāscor 'I am angry at'.

mínor 'I threaten'.

nóceō 'I harm'.

párcō 'I spare'.

páreō 'I obey'.

persuādeō 'I persuade'.

pláceō 'I please'.

resistō 'I resist'.

subuéniō 'I come to help'.

Many compound verbs, especially those compounded with ob-, sub-, prae-, bene-, male-, satis-, take the dative also.

Adjectives which imply advantage or disadvantage (e.g. nearness, likeness, helpfulness, kindness, trust etc.) take the dative, e.g.

próximus éī 'near (to) him' Caésarī símilis 'resembling Caesar' míhi ūtilis 'useful to me'

2 Nouns (often abstract) in the dative ('predicative' dative)
Nouns in the dative usually show that which a thing serves for or wh

Nouns in the dative usually show that which a thing serves for, or what its purpose is, e.g.

ódiō sum Rōmānīs 'I serve for a hatred to the Romans' i.e. 'am hated by the Romans' uoluptātī sum éī 'I serve for a pleasure to him/her' mīlitēs auxīliō mīsit 'he sent the soldiers to serve for / to be a help'

(f) Ablative

The ablative case has four basic usages. 'By', 'with', 'from', 'in' often translate it effectively.

1 The 'true' ablative denoting separation away from, e.g.

ex úrbe 'out of the city' nátus Ióue 'born from Jupiter' dominātione līberátus 'freed from tyranny'

Under this heading we may list the ablative of comparison ('starting from a point of comparison with'), e.g.

quid móllius úndā? 'what is softer than water?'

L(e)-(f)

2 The 'locative/temporal ablative'. This shows place/time in, on, or at, e.g.

in úrbe 'in the city' térrā marīque 'on land and sea' dextrā 'on the right' tríbus hốrīs '(with)in three hours'

3 The 'accompanying' ablative, e.g.

(i) Of description: uir mágnā uirtūte 'a man (with) of great bravery'.

(ii) Of manner (how something is done): súmmā (cum) celeritāte uēnit 'he came with very great speed'.

(iii) The ablative absolute, e.g. te duce uincemus 'with you as leader, we shall win' (this shows the accompanying circumstances). Cf. P. Note 3.

4 The 'instrumental' ablative, e.g.

(i) Of agent (by whom a thing is done): ab hīs laudātur 'he is praised by these people'.

(ii) Of instrument or means (by which something is carried out): sáxīs sē dēféndunt 'they defend themselves with rocks'.

(iii) Of cause (why something happens): amôre périit 'he died (because) of love'.

(iv) Of measure of difference: tū múltō áltior es 'you are much taller' (lit. 'taller by much'). Note éō 'by so much'; quō 'by how much'; tántō 'by so much'; quántō 'by how much'; paúlō 'by a little'; hōc 'by this amount'; aliquántō 'by a certain amount'. See J5(a)4.

(v) Of price (cf. genitive of value at L(d)5): múltō aúrō hanc aúlam ēmī 'I bought this pot at a price of much gold'; cf. mágnō 'at a high price', páruō 'at a small price', uīlī 'at a cheap price'.

(vi) Of respect: uir pietate grauis 'a man serious in respect of his piety' (Virgil). (This may also be classified as a locative ablative.)

5 Many verbs and some adjectives are followed by the ablative case. Some examples of verbs are:

fúngor 'I perform'
frúor 'I enjoy'
útor 'I use'
pótior 'I take possession of' (also genitive) dőnő 'I present x (acc.) with y (abl.)' abúndō 'I abound in' ópus est 'there is a need of x (abl.) to y (dat.)'

Some adjectives are:

frét-us a um 'relying on'
plén-us a um 'full of' (also genitive) dígn-us a um 'worthy of'

6 Note the following phrases, all of which can be explained in the terms set out above:

siléntiō 'in silence'
iūre 'rightly'
mōre maiōrum 'in the fashion of our ancestors' méā spónte 'on my own initiative' ūsū 'in practice'
fórte 'by chance'
uī 'by force'
nắtū maior 'older' (lit. 'greater in respect of birth') aéquō ánimō 'with equanimity' bónā fidē 'in good faith' méā senténtiā 'in my opinion'
méā caúsā 'for my sake'

(g) Locative

The locative is the remnant of an old case. It is used to express 'at' with names of towns and one-town islands. It has the same form as the genitive in first and second declensions singular, and as the ablative in the first and second declensions plural; in third declension nouns it adopts a form in -ī in the s., -ibus in the pl. E.g.

1st decl. s. Romae 'at Rome' 2nd decl. s. Corinthi 'at Corinth' 1st decl. pl. Athénis 'at Athens' 3rd decl. s. Carthágini 'at Carthage' 3rd decl. pl. Sárdibus 'at Sardes'

Note also the following special usages:

dómī 'at home'
húmī 'on the ground'
rūrī 'in the country' (or rūre)

L(f)-(g), M(a)-(c) Infinitive béllī 'at war' mīlítiae 'on military service'

ánimī 'in the mind'

NB. With towns and one-town islands 'to', 'into' are expressed by the plain accusative and '(away) from' by the plain ablative, e.g.

Rốmam 'to Rome' Rốmā 'from Rome' Syrācūsās 'to Syracuse'

M The infinitive

The infinitive acts as a verb, when it is active or passive, has a present, future or past tense and can govern cases. The infinitive can also act as a noun, when it is neuter and stands in the nominative or accusative case.

(a) As a noun (= gerund)

The infinitive often acts as a nominative or accusative gerund, e.g.

hūmānum est errāre 'to err is human', 'error is human' errāre mālum dūcimus 'we consider error (lit. 'to do wrong') wicked'

(b) As a verb/noun (prolative infinitive)

The infinitive is used after certain verbs, e.g. póssum 'I am able to', débeō 'I ought to', uólō 'I wish to', cónor 'I try to', incípiō 'I begin to', dúbitō 'I hesitate to', sóleō 'I am accustomed to', etc.

It is common with verbs of being said or thought, e.g.

dicitur málus ésse 'he is said to be wicked' uidétur bónus ésse 'he seems to be good'

(c) Indirect speech

The verb of indirect statements (see R1) is in the infinitive, e.g.

pútō tē abiísse 'I think that you have gone away' (lit. 'I think you to have gone away')

(d) Historic infinitive

The 'historic' infinitive is used to describe vividly an action which would normally be in the imperfect indicative, e.g.

> multī séquī, fúgere, occīdī, cápī 'many were following, fleeing, being killed and captured'

N Gerund

A gerund is a neuter noun, formed from a verb, with exactly the same form as the neuter s. of the gerundive (see O), e.g. amánd-um ī 2n. 'love', 'loving'. All such gerunds end in -ndum, e.g. monéndum, capiéndum, regéndum etc. This form is never nominative. It is most commonly used with a preposition or defining noun, e.g.

> ad regéndum 'with a view to ruling', 'in order to rule' ars dīcéndī 'the art of speaking' regéndī grātiā 'for the sake of ruling' capiéndī caúsā 'for the sake of taking', 'in order to take'.

It can take an object e.g. nauis capiéndi caúsa 'to capture the ships' (though some writers might express this by noun + gerundive + caúsā - nāuium capiendarum caúsa, see O Note 3). It can stand on its own in the dative and ablative, e.g.

> docéndo et discéndo 'by teaching and learning' óperam legéndo dat 'he pays attention to reading'

Infinitives also act as gerunds, in the nominative or accusative (without preposition). See M.

O Gerundive

The gerundive is a passive adjective, based on a verb, ending in -nd-us a um, meaning 'to be -ed', 'requiring to be -ed', 'needing to be -ed', 'must be -ed', e.g.

> Roma līberánda est 'Rome is to be freed', 'Rome must be freed', 'Rome needs to be freed' captiuos necándos trádidit 'he handed over the captives to be slain'

M(d), N, O, P Participles

Notes

1 The gerundive usually has the agent in the dative, e.g. Roma Brūto līberanda est 'Rome must be freed by Brutus'.

But verbs which take a dative object have the agent expressed by a/ ab + abl., e.g. míhi parcéndum est ā tē 'it is to be spared to me by you',

'you must spare me'.

2 Where a verb is intransitive, the gerundive becomes impersonal, e.g. eúndum est míhi 'it is to be gone by me', 'I must go'.

3 In cases where a gerundive + noun, translated literally, sound odd, turn the phrase round into an active form, e.g.

> ad mīlitēs capiéndos (lit.) 'with a view to soldiers to be captured'→'with a view to capturing soldiers' > in līberándā pátriā (lit.) 'in the fatherland to be freed'→'in freeing the fatherland' regī creándo 'for a king to be made'→'for making a king'

See N above for this construction expressed by the gerund.

P Participles

There are three tenses of participle in Latin:

The present participle ACTIVE (see A1), meaning '-ing', 'while -ing'.

(b) The future participle ACTIVE (see A2), meaning 'about to --', 'on the point of -ing', 'with a view to -ing'.

The perfect participle ACTIVE (used by deponent verbs), 'having -ed' (sometimes just '-ing': see also C4 Note 2 for passive meaning in some verbs) and the perfect participle PASSIVE (used by transitive, active verbs), meaning 'having been -ed' (see C4, Participles are adjectives and agree in case, number and gender with the noun or pronoun to which they refer. Sometimes they are used as adjectives, merely to describe a noun, e.g. áqua féruens 'boiling water'. But their commonest use is predicative, e.g. Pláto scríbens est mórtuus 'Plato died while writing' (Cicero). Contrast Pláto nóster est mórtuus 'our Plato has died'. See under 'Predicative' in the Glossary of Latin - English Grammar, p. xxi.

1 A participle standing on its own either means 'a/the person -ing etc.'. e.g.

moritūrī 'the (masculine plurals) about to die', 'those about to die' or agrees with a noun or pronoun left out, and refers to a person already mentioned e.g.

rogantī respondit 'to (him) as he was asking he replied', 'he replied to his question'

2 Participles indicate the time of the action in relation to the adjoining verb, i.e. a present participle indicates the action is going on at the same time as the verb, future participle that it will happen after the verb, perfect that it has happened before the verb.

3 Participles, especially present and perfect passive, are often used with a noun or pronoun in the ablative (ablative absolute) to form an accompaniment to the action of a clause. E.g.

> Cethégus, recitatis lítteris, repénte contícuit 'when the letter had been read out, Cethegus suddenly fell silent' (Cicero)

Cf. tē dúce 'under your leadership' (L(f)3(iii)).

4 The relationship between verb and participle can be more than merely temporal and suggest cause, concession, or condition, e.g.

> tímeo Dánaos et dona feréntis 'I fear the Greeks, even though bringing gifts' > non míhi nísi admónito uenísset in méntem 'it wouldn't have entered my head if I hadn't been reminded' (Cicero)

5 The passive participle often expresses not the thing or person acted on, but the very act itself, e.g.

> uiolatī hospites, legatī necatī, fana uexata hanc tantam effecerunt uāstitātem lit. 'violated guests, slaughtered ambassadors, ravaged shrines brought about this massive devastation', but better 'the violation of guests, the slaughter of ambassadors, the destruction of shrines . . .' etc.

O1 Relative clauses: quī+indicative

A relative clause, introduced in Latin by some form of the relative pronoun qui quae quod 'who', 'which', 'what', 'that' (see I4) is an adjectival clause which describes a noun, e.g.

'The girls who are present'

'The book which I gave you is very old'

The word to which the relative pronoun refers is called the antecedent. In the above examples, the antecedent of 'who' is 'the girls', and the antecedent of 'which' is 'the book'.

The relative gets its gender (m., f. or n.) and its number (s. or pl.) from the antecedent; it gets its case from its function within the relative clause. Observe the following examples:

ámō puéllās quae ádsunt 'I like the girls who are present' quae: feminine, plural (because 'girls' is the antecedent); nominative, because 'who' is the subject of 'are present'.

> ubi est frater méus, quem uidere non possum 'where is my brother, whom I cannot see?

quem: masculine, singular (because 'brother' is the antecedent); accusative, because 'whom' is the object of 'I cannot see'.

> ábest rex cúius milites ádsunt 'the king, whose soldiers are present, is absent' cúius: masculine, singular (antecedent 'king'); genitive, because 'whose' means 'of whom', 'belonging to whom', so genitive of possession.

> puerī quibus pecūniam dédī effūgerunt 'the boys to whom I gave the money have run off' quibus: masculine, plural ('boys'); dative, because I gave the money to them.

úbi est sáxum quō percússus sum 'where is the rock by which I was quō: neuter, singular ('rock'); ablative, because it was the instrument by which I was hit.

1 The 'connecting' relative joins the sentence closely to the previous one, e.g.

Caésar mīlitēs mīsit. quōs úbi mīsit . . . 'Caesar sent the soldiers. Whom when he had sent', i.e. 'when he had sent them'

2 Observe the following idioms:

mīlitēs quōs habēbat óptimōs mīsit 'he sent the soldiers whom best he had', i.e. 'he sent the best soldiers he had' quā es prūdéntiā, níhil tē effúgiet lit. 'with what wisdom you are, nothing will escape you' i.e. 'such is your wisdom . . .'

Q2 Relative clauses: quī+subjunctive

When a relative clause 'hides' a clause of result, purpose, cause or concession, the verb is subjunctive:

(a) Hidden result clause, often called 'generic', e.g.

is est qui paupéribus nóceat 'he is the sort of person who harms the poor' sunt qui pútent 'there are people (of the sort) who think . . .'

némo est qui hoc fáciat 'there is no one who does this' némo est quin próbet 'there is no one who does not approve' (note that here quin = ut non)

NB. est qui, sunt qui, when they refer to a definite antecedent, take the indicative, e.g. múltī sunt qui pútant 'there are many who think . . .'

(b) Hidden purpose, e.g.

mīlitēs mīsit quī hóstīs circúmdarent 'he sent soldiers who would / to surround the enemy'

(c) Hidden cause, e.g.

ámō tē quī mē ámēs 'I love you who (i.e. because you) love me'

These clauses often occur with útpote qui or quippe qui.

(d) Hidden concession, e.g.

Q1-2, R-R1 Indirect speech

Vérres, qui uisus múltis diébus non ésset, támen se in conspéctum dédit 'Verres, who had not been seen for many days, nevertheless presented himself to view', i.e. 'Verres, although he . . .' (concessive)

Note

Observe the following idioms:

1 dígnus est qui imperet 'he is worthy to govern'.

2 quō + comparative + subjunctive indicates purpose, e.g. quō celérius effúgiat 'in order that he may escape more quickly'.

3 maior est quam quem uincere póssim 'he is greater than one whom I can defeat', 'he is too great for me to defeat'.

R Indirect speech

When words are not quoted direct but given in reported form (e.g. 'he claimed that she was gone', 'we told him to leave at once', 'she asked where they were'), Latin

- (a) Uses the accusative and infinitive to express indirect statements.
- (b) Uses $ut/n\bar{e}$ + subjunctive (sometimes plain infinitive) to express indirect commands.
- (c) Uses question word + subjunctive to express indirect questions.
- (d) Puts all subordinate verbs into the subjunctive (except that dum 'at one point while' occasionally remains indicative).
- (e) Makes all references to the speaker reflexive.

R1 Indirect statements

When you come across a verb of saying, thinking, reporting, etc., or even a noun implying these actions (e.g. núntius), be ready for an accusative and infinitive construction. This reports what is being said or thought, e.g.

Caésar dīxit hóstīs appropinquāre 'Caesar said the enemy to be approaching' i.e. 'that the enemy were approaching'.

pútō tē púlchrum fuísse 'I consider you to have been handsome' i.e. 'that you were handsome'.

spērō tē mox discessūrum ésse 'I hope you to be about to go soon' i.e. 'that you will go soon'.

Observe that the subject of the indirect statement is in the accusative. and the verb in the infinitive. The tense of the infinitive is the same as what was originally said.

2 Note how English changes in response to the tense of the introductory verb of saying or thinking, e.g.

Caésar dicit hóstis appropinquare lit. 'Caesar says the enemy to be approaching' 'that the enemy are approaching'

Caésar dixit hóstis appropinquare 'Caesar said the enemy to be approaching' 'that the enemy were approaching'.

3 négō means 'I say that . . . NOT'.

4 A reflexive refers to the speaker of the main verb, e.g.

Caésar dixit se discessurum ésse 'Caesar said that he (i.e. Caesar) would leave'.

Cf. Caésar dixit éum discessurum 'Caesar said that he (someone else) would leave'.

Note that se and the other personal pronouns tend to come second in the clause unless emphatic.

5 ésse is sometimes dropped from the infinitive (see above example).

6 fore ut + subjunctive 'that it should come about that' is often used in indirect statements to get round future passive expressions.

7 Remember to start your translation into English with the word 'THAT' - a word which does not appear in the Latin in these constructions at all.

R2 Indirect commands

Indirect commands are signposted by a word of ordering, persuading, commanding etc. followed by ut or $n\bar{e}$. The verb is in the subjunctive – present in primary sequence, imperfect in secondary. E.g.

> míhi imperauit ut abirem 'he ordered me that I should go / to go away' > éos hortati sunt në tristës éssent 'they urged them that they should not be / not to be unhappy'

Notes

1 Observe nē . . . quis 'that no one' (see I4 for declension of quis indefinite), nē . . . úllus 'that not any', nē . . . úmquam 'that never'. 2 References in the indirect command to the subject of the ordering verb are reflexive, e.g.

Caésar mīlítibus imperauit ut síbi parerent 'Caesar ordered the soldiers to obey him' (i.e. Caesar: éī would mean 'him', i.e. someone else)

3 Some verbs take an infinitive construction as in English, e.g. iúbeō 'I order', uétō 'I forbid', 'order not to', e.g.

> iússit mē abīre 'he ordered me to leave' éos progredi uétuit 'he forbade them / told them not to advance'.

4 In extended indirect speech, commands are sometimes introduced without ut, with just the plain subjunctive.

R3 Indirect questions

An indirect question puts the verb in the subjunctive. The rules are complex (see below), but the simplest thing to do is to translate the subjunctive as if it were the similar tense in the indicative, e.g.

> rógat cūr uenerīs 'he asks why you have come' nesciuit quid fáceres 'he did not know what you were doing' petebam quid dicturus ésset 'I was asking what he was about to say / . would say'

Notes

- 1 num and an in an indirect question mean 'if', 'whether'. num quis means 'if/whether anyone' (cf. nē quis, sī quis, nísi quis).
- 2 útrum . . . nécne in an indirect question means 'whether . . . or not'.
- 3 References to the subject of the verb of asking (etc.) will be reflexive, e.g.

Caésar rogauit cur omnes se timérent 'Caesar asked why everyone feared him (i.e. Caesar)'

4 Here are some examples from which you can deduce the chart, given below. They give the full picture of the exact relationship between the sequence, tense of verb and subjunctive required:

main verb	question word	subjunctive	main verb primary	question word	subjunctive rógo	cũr	uénerit	I ask	why	he came / has come / was coming / had come rógō	cŭr	uéniat	I ask	why	he is coming rógō	cũr	uentūrus sit	I ask	why	he will come / he is going to come main verb secondary	question word	subjunctive	main verb secondary	question word	subjunctive rogấuĩ	cūr	uēnisset	I asked	why	he had come rogâuī	cūr	uenīret	I asked	why	he was coming rogāuī	cūr	uentūrus esset	I asked	why	he would come / he was going to come

R4 Subjunctives in indirect speech

(a) All subordinate clauses in indirect speech (except occasionally dum 'at one point while') have their verbs in the subjunctive. The subjunctives follow the rule of sequence, i.e.

Primary main verb: subjunctives used are present (referring to present and future time) and perfect (referring to past time)

R3-4, S Subjunctive

Secondary main verb: subjunctives used are imperfect (referring to present and future time) and pluperfect (referring to past time).

Occasionally future time will be referred to by means of the future participle + sim (primary) or éssem (fórem) secondary. See 142 Note.

- (b) Conditional sentences in indirect speech have a subjunctive in the sī/nisi clause ('protasis'), and an accusative + infinitive in the other part ('apodosis'). The rules of sequence for the subjunctives are the same as those in R4(a) above. Note that only context will now allow you to distinguish between a future indicative condition and a subjunctive condition referring to the future, e.g. (he said that) sī pācem pópulus Rōmānus cum Heluétiīs fáceret, in éam pártem itūrōs could represent (Direct Speech) either (1) or (2):
 - (1) sī pācem . . . fáciat, in éam pártem eāmus 'if (the Roman people) were to make peace (with the Helvetii), we would go to that place . . . 'Present subjunctive (referring to the future).
 - (2) sī pācem . . . fáciet, in éam pártem ībimus 'if (the Roman people) is going to make peace (with the Helvetii), we shall go to that place . . . 'Future indicative.

In the other subjunctive conditions (imperfect and pluperfect), 'would be —ing' and 'would have —ed' (the apodosis) are both represented by future participle + fuisse. E.g. uidémur quietūrī fuisse, nisi essémus lacessitī 'It seems we would have kept quiet, had we not been provoked' (Cicero) (representing direct speech sī+pluperfect subjunctive, pluperfect subjunctive).

S The subjunctive

The subjunctive originally expressed the will, desire, or hope on the part of the speaker that something should be (e.g. uīuat rēx 'may the king live' – this is the speaker's desire). It is used in main clauses and subordinate clauses. In subordinate clauses in classical Latin it is often used merely as a convention, and does not carry its original force (e.g. in indirect questions, see R3).

S1 Main clauses

(Cf. L-V Intro.)

(a) As an imperative

Expresses an order, or prohibition, e.g. nē trānsierīs 'do not cross' or the 'jussive' subjunctive 'let us/him' etc, e.g. eamus 'let us go' amémus 'let us make love'

(b) 'Deliberative' subjunctive

This takes the form 'what am I to?', e.g. quid fáciam 'what am I to do?'

(c) Wishes

Examples are:

sīs félīx 'may you be happy' uólō tū scrībās 'I want you to write'

or, with útinam 'O that!':

útinam adéssēs 'O that you were present'

(See L-V Intro. (a)4.)

(d) Conditional/potential

Examples:

uélim 'I should like to' dixerit áliquis 'someone might/would say' dīcat si adfuisset, uidisset 'if he had been there, he would have seen

S2 Subordinate clauses

The subjunctive may be found in a number of clauses already dealt with elsewhere, i.e. indirect commands, indirect questions, and subordinate clauses in indirect speech (on all of which, see R2 and R3 and R4), relative clauses (see Q2), temporal clauses (see T), causal clauses (U) and concessive clauses (V).

(a) Result (or consecutive) clauses 'so . . . that', 'so . . . as to'

1 The 'that' clause is expressed by ut + subjunctive (negative $n\bar{o}n$). The subjunctive is normally present, imperfect or perfect.

2 There are a number of different words for 'so'. These include: ádeō, íta, tam, sīc, éō.

Note also tántus 'so great', tot 'so many', tális 'of such a sort', e.g.

tántum est periculum ut nemo uenerit 'so great is the danger that noone has come' tam fórtis érat ut uíncī non pósset 'he was so brave that he could not be defeated' íta ágere dēbēmus ut ómnēs nos laúdent 'we ought so to act that all praise us'

3 Consecutive constructions are also used in the following idioms:

tántum ábest ut . . . ut 'x is so far from . . . (ut) . . . THAT' (ut consecutive); fácere non póssum quin 'I cannot do (a thing) but that ...', 'I cannot help -ing'; fierī non pótest quin 'it cannot come about but that . . . not'.

quī + subjunctive can mean 'of such a kind that' (generic), when it is followed by a consecutive construction, e.g. non sum is qui quiescere póssim 'I am not the sort of person who can keep quiet'. Cf. nēmo est quīn próbet 'there is no one of the sort who does not approve' (Cicero) (quin = qui non).

áccidit ut (non) + subjunctive 'it happens that . . . '; perficio | efficio | fácio ut (non) 'I bring it about that . . .'; non múltum ábest quin 'it is not far from being the case that . . . númquam accédo quin ábeam dóctior 'I never approach (you) without going away more learned' (Cicero).

uénio ut uídeam 'I come in order to / to / in order that I may see' uénī ut uidérem 'I came in order (etc.) to see'

Note that $n\bar{e}$ quis = 'that no-one' (see I4 for declension of quis indefinite), $n\bar{e}$ úmquam 'that never', $n\bar{e}$ úllus 'that not . . . any', 'lest any'.

Notes

1 qui+ subjunctive frequently expresses purpose, especially with verbs of movement, e.g.

lēgātos mīsit quī pācem péterent 'they sent ambassadors who should seek / to seek peace'

2 References in the purpose clause to the subject of the main verb are expressed by the reflexive, e.g.

Caésar uénit ut mílites se uidérent 'Caesar arrived so that his soldiers should see him (i.e. Caesar)'.

3 $qu\bar{o}$ + subjunctive expresses purpose when there is a comparative in the purpose clause, e.g.

quō celérius effúgiat 'so that he may escape more quickly'

- 4 perficio | efficio | fácio ut (neg. ne) + subjunctive ('I bring it about that') may express purpose, as well as result (see S2(a)3(iii)).
- 5 Observe how many ways there are of expressing purpose in Latin:
 - (i) $ut/n\bar{e} + \text{subjunctive}$ (see above).
 - (iii) ad + gerund/gerundive 'with a view to —ing' (see N, O). (iv) caúsā + gerund/gerundive
 - (v) The supine (see A7 for formation): used especially with verbs of motion, e.g. milites misit pacem petitum 'he sent soldiers to seek peace'.

(c) Conditional sentences

The 'if' clause of a conditional sentence is often called the 'protasis', the main clause the 'apodosis'.

1 Indicative

Where a conditional sentence uses an indicative in both clauses, translate normally, e.g.

sī tū sápiēns es, égo stúltus 'if you are wise, I am a fool'

(But see Note 1 below.)

Note that English is less accurate about future and future perfects than Latin, e.g.

sī puélla discédet, laetus érō 'if the girl departs (lit. 'will depart') I shall be delighted'

sī hoc fēceris, habēbō grātiam 'if you do this (lit. 'will have done this') I shall be grateful'

2 Subjunctive

Where a conditional sentence has the subjunctive in both clauses, translate with 'would', 'should', 'were', as follows:

- (i) Present subjunctive (refers to future time) 'If x were to happen y would happen'.
- (ii) Imperfect subjunctive (refers to present time) 'If x were now happening, y would be happening'.
- (iii) Pluperfect subjunctive (refers to past time) 'If x had happened, y would have happened'.

E.g.

sī puélla discédat, laétus sim 'if the girl were to depart, I would be delighted'

sī puélla discéderet, laétus éssem 'if the girl were (now) departing, I would (now) be happy' sī puélla discessísset, laétus fuíssem 'if the girl had departed, I would have been delighted'

Notes

1 Latin sometimes mixes indicatives and subjunctives in conditional sentences. Generally speaking, such conditions should be treated on the 'would/should' pattern, e.g.

pons íter paéne hóstibus dédit, nísi únus uir fuísset 'the bridge almost gave the enemy a way across (and would have done), if there had not been one man' (Livy)

- 2 The imperfect subjunctive can be used to refer to past time, e.g. uidérēs 'you would have seen'
- 3 nísi, nī and sī nōn all mean 'if . . . not', 'unless'.
- 4 sī/nísi quis means 'if/unless anyone' (see I4 for declension of quis indefinite). Cf. sī/nísi quándō 'if/unless at any time'.
- 5 siue . . . siue (seu . . . seu) means 'whether . . . or' and introduces alternative conditions, e.g.

síue haec uéra síue fálsa sunt, proficíscar 'whether these things are false or true, I shall set out'

6 The indicative is normal in the main clause (apodosis) of a condition using subjunctive, where it involves the ideas of possibility (e.g. póssum) or obligation (e.g. débeō or gerundive), e.g.

nísi fēlīcitās in socórdiam uertísset, exúere iúgum potuére 'if their success had not turned to sloth, they would have been able to throw off the yoke' (Tacitus)

sī unum diem morātī essétis, moriéndum ómnibus fúit 'if you had delayed for one day, you would all have had to die' (Livy)

7 For conditional sentences in indirect speech see R4(b).

(d) Verbs of fearing uéreor/tímeō meaning 'I fear to' take the infinitive as in English.

uéreor/tímeō meaning 'I fear that/lest' take the subjunctive, and are introduced by nē ('that', 'lest'), ut ('that . . . not') or nē . . . nōn ('that . . . not'). The subjunctive follows normal rules of sequence, e.g.

tímeo ne uéniat 'I fear lest he (will) come' timébam ne uenísset 'I was afraid that he had come'

NB. As with purpose clauses, any reference to the subject of the main verb inside the $n\bar{e}/ut/n\bar{e}$ $n\bar{o}n$ clause will be reflexive.

(e) Verbs of doubting non dúbito 'I do not doubt', non dúbium est 'there is no doubt' and similar negative expressions of doubting are followed by quin + subjunctive, e.g.

non dúbium est quin érres 'there is no doubt that you are wrong'

Notes

- 1 This amounts to an indirect question (see above R3), since it reports 'Are you not wrong?' quin is composed from qui (old abl. of qui quae quod) and the negative -ne. The original meaning (common in Plautus) is 'How not?', 'Why not?'.
- 2 The affirmative (even more clearly an indirect question) is dúbito an + subj. 'I doubt whether . . .'

(f) Verbs of hindering, preventing, forbidding

Verbs like impédiō 'I hinder', dētérreō 'I deter', prohíbeō 'I prevent', óbstō 'I stand in the way of (x doing something)' are followed by nē or quốminus with the subjunctive, unless negative, when they take quốminus or quīn. E.g.

tē impédiam nē/quốminus ábeās 'I shall prevent you from leaving' tē nōn impédiam quốminus/quīn ábeās 'I shall not prevent you from leaving'

But

NB. The infinitive or accusative and infinitive is common after prohíbeō, e.g. prohíbeō tē īre 'I prevent you from going'.

(g) 'Provided that'

dum, dúmmodo, módo can mean 'provided that' (negative dum nē etc.), when the verb is subjunctive, e.g.

óderint dum métuant 'let them hate, provided that they fear' (Accius – Roman tragedian: a favourite quote of Caligula)

T Temporal clauses

These clauses indicate the time at which something takes place, e.g. 'when', 'as soon as', 'after', 'while', 'until', 'whenever', etc.

(a) úbi, ut ('when'), póstquam 'after', símulac, quam prīmum ('as soon as') take the indicative.

Note that when Latin uses the perfect indicative, English frequently translates with the pluperfect, e.g.

úbi Caésar peruénit 'when Caesar arrived/had arrived'

(b) dum, donec, 'while' take the indicative, e.g.

dum uiuo, spéro 'while I live, I hope'

Note that when 'while' means 'at one point when', the indicative is present, e.g.

dum lóquor, hómo intráuit 'while I was speaking, the fellow entered'

- (c) dum, donec 'until' and antequam, priusquam 'before' take:
 - The indicative when the clause conveys nothing but the idea of pure time, e.g. manébat dum Caésar peruénit 'he waited till Caesar arrived'.
 - The subjunctive when the action is expected or waited for or intention is being expressed, e.g. manébat dum Caésar ueníret 'he waited until Caesar should come'; ábiit priúsquam Caésar éum uidéret 'he left before Caesar should see him'.
- (d) cum 'when' takes:
 - 1 The indicative when referring to present or future, e.g. cum uidébis, tum scies 'when you (will) see, then you will know'.
 - 2 The subjunctive (pluperfect or imperfect) when referring to past, e.g. cum haec dīxisset, ábiit 'when he had said this, he left'.
- (e) An exception to T(d)2 is that cum takes the indicative when referring to the past in the following circumstances:
 - When it expresses pure time, e.g. cum égo Romae éram, tū Londíniī érās 'when I was at Rome, you were in London'
 - When it means 'whenever', e.g. cum mē uīderat, laetābātur 'whenever he saw me, he rejoiced'
 - 3 'Inverted' cum, e.g. abībam cum nūntius peruēnit 'I was going away when a messenger arrived'.

U Causal clauses: 'because', 'since' quod, quía, quóniam, quándō all mean 'since', 'because' and their verbs take the indicative when the speaker is vouching for the reason, e.g.

ádsunt quod officium sequúntur 'they are present because they follow their duty' (that is the speaker's explanation) ádsunt quod officium sequántur would mean 'they are present on the grounds that (i.e. the reason is not the speaker's) they follow their duty'.

cum 'since' nearly always takes the subjunctive. After certain verbs, however, it can take the indicative, e.g.

dóleō cum aéger es 'I grieve because you are ill' Cf. laúdō 'I praise', gaúdeō 'I rejoice'.

Notes

1 qui+subjunctive can denote cause, e.g.

ámō tē quī mē ámēs 'I love you who (= because you) love me' quī in such utterances is often strengthened by the addition of quíppe, útpote or ut.

2 Causal clauses are often signposted or picked up by éo or idcirco 'for this reason'.

V Concessive clauses

These are introduced by étsī, etiámsī 'even if'; quámquam, quámuīs 'although' and quī+subjunctive. étsī and etiámsī take indicative or subjunctive like conditional clauses, e.g.

etiámsī tácent, sátis dícunt 'though they are silent, they say enough' etiámsī táceant, sátis dícant 'though they were to be silent, they would say enough' quámquam 'although' takes indicative; quámuīs 'however' takes subjunctive, e.g.

quámquam inimícus es 'although you are hostile' quámuīs inimícus sīs 'however hostile you may be' qui 'who' can be used with concessive force, when it takes the subjunctive, e.g.

égo qui fórtis sim támen fúgiam 'I, who am brave, nevertheless will flee' i.e. 'I, though brave . . .'

NB. lícet 'it is allowed' is quite often followed by a subjunctive verb. In this case it means 'though', e.g. frémant ómnēs lícet, dīcam quod séntiō. 'Though they may all make a commotion, I will say what I think' (Cicero).

W Word-order

(a) Emphasis and scene-setting

1 Caésar in Gálliam conténdit 'Caesar marched into Gaul' may be called for convenience the 'normal' or 'narrative' order of that sentence in Latin. An 'emphatic' order would be in Gálliam Caésar conténdit 'it was into Gaul that Caesar marched' (answering the question 'Where was Caesar marching?'), or conténdit in Gálliam Caésar (answering the question 'What was it that Caesar was doing re Gaul?'). Putting the verb first is common in vivid or excited narrative, when we want to know what is happening at once or when there is no stated subject to the verb, so verb-ending is the only clue to it.

Observe how 'emphasis' affects the position of 'attributive' adjectives, normally placed after the noun (e.g. uir bónus 'good man'). They come first when they define it (emphatically) rather than merely add a description, e.g. útram túnicam māuīs — álbam an purpúream? purpúream túnicam mālō 'Which tunic do you prefer — the white or the purple?' 'The purple's the one I prefer.'

2 Gállia est ómnis dīuīsa in pártīs trēs 'As for Gaul, the whole of it, it is divided into parts – how many? – Well, three actually.' Caesar 'sets the scene' – we are talking about the whole of Gaul – and leaves to the end the real importance of what he is to say: that it is divided into three parts. Observe how he continues: quārum ūnam incolunt Bélgae, áliam Aquitānī 'of which, well, we have one part lived in by – Belgians – and the other by – Aquitanians'. Again, Caesar sets the scene and then gives the really important information: it was Belgians and Aquitanians who lived in two of the parts.

English also uses 'scene-setting' word-order to emphasise in this way, e.g. 'Talent, Mr. Micawber has; capital, Mr. Micawber hasn't' (Dickens).

(b) Shadowing

1 Latin tends to alternate emphatic and unemphatic words or phrases within the sentence. In the example of the coloured tunics given above, the word purpúream in the answer is emphatic, and the word túnicam – less necessary, since we already know that tunics are what is being discussed – carries less emphasis. It is useful to think metaphorically of túnicam being cast into the shadow by the emphatic purpúream which precedes it.

2 Certain classes of words tend to be placed in the shadow of the first 546 important word in the sentence or clause (regardless of whether they are connected with it grammatically or logically). These are: (i) particles like énim, aútem, which connect the sentence they occur in with what precedes; (ii) unemphatic personal and demonstrative pronouns like mē, tíbi, éum, nōs: e.g. hīs míhi rébus, Scīpiō, léuis est senéctūs (Cicero) 'it is because of these things, Scipio, that old age is no burden for me'. Note that míhi interposes itself between two grammatically connected words: hīs and rébus. (iii) The verb, when unemphatic, often gravitates to a position just after the first emphatic word: this happens especially with est as an auxiliary verb, e.g. in Gálliam est Caésar proféctus 'it was for Gaul that Caesar set out'.

3 Adverbial phrases may be 'shadowed' (or 'sandwiched') between two grammatically connected words when they are logically connected with the enclosing phrase: mágnā in hāc rē prūdéntiā ūténdum est 'great prudence must be used in this matter' (in hāc rē limits the application of the prudence to this matter); clārōrum uirōrum post mortem honōrēs pérmanent 'the honours paid to great men remain after death' (post mortem warns us in good time that we are thinking of a special kind of honour — the sort that may be paid after death).

(c) Some consequences of emphasis, scene-setting and shadowing

1 The normal place for subordinating conjunctions is at the beginning of their clause, but when other words in the clause are used for 'scene-setting' (as often in temporal or conditional clauses), the conjunction often ends up immediately before the verb: Caésar in Gálliam cum contendísset 'when Caesar had marched into Gaul'.

2 In accusative and infinitive constructions, if there is no other word with more emphasis, the infinitive often comes at the very beginning, being often followed immediately by an unemphatic pronoun subject: (dixit míhi Caésar) uélle sē cōnsulātum pétere 'Caesar told me he wanted to stand for the consulship'. On the other hand, if one of the other words is emphatic, it will naturally come first (the unemphatic pronoun remaining in second place): (dīxit míhi Caésar) cōnsulātum sē uélle pétere 'Caesar told me that it was the consulship he wanted to stand for'. When it is discovered for the first time that Britain is an island, Tacitus reports the event as follows: hanc ōram nouíssimī máris tunc prīmum Rōmāna clássis circumuécta īnsulam ésse Británniam adfirmāuit, 'that was the first time a Roman fleet had rounded this shore of the furthest sea, and this confirmed that Britain was an island' – 'that it was an island Britain was'.

A brief history of the Latin language

The beginnings

Latin is one of the many languages belonging to the Indo-European family whose members extend from the Atlantic coasts of Europe to India. In Europe itself these languages can be divided into groups: Hellenic, represented by the various dialects of Greek; Italic, consisting of Latin and its close relatives in central Italy: Germanic, including English, German, and the Scandinavian languages; and Celtic, including Welsh and Irish (see Table). Latin is in the unique position of being not only a member of the Italic group but also the ancestor of the last European group, Romance (including Italian, Spanish, and French) which developed later than the rest, within historic times. Though Latin, settled in Latium, was only one of the members of the Italic group that also included Oscan and Umbrian, by the fourth century the energy of the Romans had reduced their neighbours to the status of subject allies, and their languages, known to us only from inscriptions and isolated words taken into Latin, never attained any recorded literary cultivation and succumbed to Latin during classical times.

History of the Latin language

Early Latin

The remains of early Latin consist of later quotations from the works of authors not preserved entire, and of inscriptions, beginning with a brooch from Praeneste (c. 600 B.C.) which reads in Greek letters MANIOS MED FHE FHAKED NUMASIOI (= Mānius mē fēcit Numeriō) 'Manius made me for Numerius'1. Between this date and the beginnings of surviving literary texts with the plays of Plautus (c. 254-184 B.C.) many changes in the language took place, as even these few words show: -os became -us, and -om became -um (see H2(a) Note 2); -d dropped in $med (= m\bar{e})$ and the ablative singulars Gnaiuod (= Gnaeo), sententiad; shefhaked shows a reduplicated perfect (fhe fhaked) in contrast to fecit; the dative singular of the second declension is in -oi and distinct from the ablative; and single intervocalic -s- (Numasioi) becomes -r- (see H3(d) Note). Other evidence shows the early diphthongs ei becoming i (as quei, sei) and oi, ou becoming u, as oinom (= $\bar{u}num$), abdoucit. Whereas classical Latin limits the position of the accent to the second or third syllable from the end of the word, at an early period the accent was on the first syllable of all words and was very strong; as a result the vowels in the syllables immediately after this accent were reduced, and these changes survived the later shift in the position of the accent and can still be seen in verbs compounded with prepositions, e.g. capiō: incipiō; sedeō: obsideō; aestimō: exīstimō; caedō: incīdō; claudō: inclūdō, and also in adjectives with the negative prefix in-, e.g. aptus: ineptus; arma: inermis; aequus: iniquus.

The Empire

By the end of the Republic in 31 Roman rule extended to territories almost completely encircling the Mediterranean, with gaps only on the north coast of Africa, and including all the islands. In the eastern Mediterranean Greek was already established as the second language of the users of a great variety of tongues, but in the West Latin had no such competition, and passed with surprising rapidity from being a lingua franca to being adopted as the language of the country in the Iberian peninsula and Gaul. The conquest by the emperor Claudius in the first century A.D. introduced Latin to Britain but, as in other peripheral parts of the Empire, it did not long survive the collapse of central authority in the Western Empire in the fifth century.

¹ There is controversy over this inscription – it may be a forgery – but the linguistic lessons it encapsulates are not affected.

The Middle Ages

From this point the history of Latin divides into two. (1) In the older Roman territories of Spain and Gaul, where it had ousted the native languages, it gradually developed in its spoken form into the various Romance languages. (2) As the medium of Western Christianity it continued, primarily as a written language of liturgy and administration throughout the old Roman lands and wherever Christianity became established, on the borders of the Empire as in Britain, or beyond them as in Germany and Scandinavia and among some of the Western Slavs. This Christian Latin, though open to local influences on vocabulary and idiom, was transmitted by education, and each generation of students learned it consciously and painfully in an unchanging form. Within communities of the educated such as monasteries and, later, universities, it became a spoken language also, as well as being the normal medium of teaching and writing on serious and technical subjects such as grammar, rhetoric, logic, mathematics, law, medicine, theology and history (though in Britain both Celtic and Anglo-Saxon, and in parts of Scandinavia the vernacular languages were cultivated in written form for learned purposes earlier than elsewhere). As the context of mediaeval Latin was first and foremost a religious one the language of St Jerome's late fourth-century revision of previous Latin translations of the Bible (the ēditiō uulgāta) was immensely influential, and sanctified late popular usages such as a simple sentence structure, changes in the use of cases and the subjunctive, and the abandonment of the accusative and infinitive construction in reported speech. At the same time the ancient practice, more appropriate to native speakers than to learners, of confining literary study to the poets, especially Virgil, was continued, though not without Christian misgivings about their pagan subject-matter, and thus constructions proper to verse found their way into medieval prose works.

The renascences

As the standard and even the continued existence of this mediaeval Christian Latin depended on the efficiency of educational institutions it fluctuated with the stability and prosperity of the region, and its history is marked by a series of renascences following periods of declining standards. One such was the Carolingian Renascence under the Emperor Charlemagne c. 800 A.D., who summoned to his court Alcuin of York to advise him and direct a reform of clerical education, and who made provision for cathedral and monastic schools. A good many classical Latin authors would have been lost to us if their works had not been collected and recopied at this time. A similar renascence took place in the twelfth century, more concerned with creation than conservation, and associated with a greater emphasis on secular learning and the first universities with their devotion to dialectic and professional training in medicine and law. The renascence to which the title 'Renaissance' is normally applied began in the late thirteenth and early fourteenth centuries in Northern Italy and at the papal court at Avignon. It was characterised by an eagerness to search out, copy, and edit new texts, and by an admiration for the style and a sympathetic appreciation of the virtues of the classical period, above all of Cicero, and it marked the beginning of the end of the Middle Ages, which it unfairly stigmatised as a period of barbarism and ignorance.

The Romance languages

Evolution

In one sense Latin is not a dead language but the unchanging written form that has survived down the centuries in parallel with the Romance languages, which represent the further evolution of its spoken form at various times and places. It took quite a long time for the magnitude of the difference to be appreciated: at first, Latin was the written norm and the spoken forms were regarded simply as less careful and less correct forms of the same language, and it is not until about the ninth century A.D. that the first attempts at writing the spoken forms continuously reveal that these had come to be perceived as different languages from Latin. Wherever Latin had become the ordinary language, by late classical times its differing local development created dialects distinct in small ways from their neighbours, and as new states came into being after the Dark Ages, in each a particular dialect, usually associated with the seat of government, acquired prestige; as the size of states increased these prestige dialects took the first steps toward becoming national languages. Thus, in addition to the well-known modern national languages of French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, and all their dialects, the Romance group includes languages representing cultural or former political units such as Provençal and Catalan, as well as the Romance dialects spoken in the Alpine regions and the various islands. Far to the east lies Romanian, first recorded in the sixteenth century, whose survival is something of a mystery. Dalmatian, in present-day Yugoslavia, died out about a century ago. Since the Middle Ages trade and colonisation have carried Romance languages all over the world, so that Portuguese became established in Brazil, Africa, and the Far East; Spanish in Mexico and the rest of South America (hence the term 'Latin America'); and French in North America and Africa.

Variety

While all these languages have diverged from Latin they have not done so in the same way or to the same degree, and the range of variation extends from French at the extreme of innovation to the Sardinian dialects at the conservative end of the spectrum. The process of differentiation must have begun long before the records and was probably detectable to the ear, though not in writing, before the fall of the Empire. To an undeterminable extent the changes as regards sounds represent the influence of the languages spoken before Latin was adopted (the 'substratum'), and as regards vocabulary the contact with other languages since then, e.g. with Frankish (a Germanic language) in France, Arabic in Spain, Magyar and Bulgarian in Romania.

Characteristics

We normally work backwards from the members of a language family in order to reconstruct their unrecorded common ancestor. When we do this with the Romance languages we do not produce a result which exactly tallies with classical Latin, but one which represents a more popular and less literary spoken style, unhappily called Vulgar Latin. While most of the detail is peculiar to each language and dialect, some general statements about the nature of the evolution from Latin to Romance can be made.

I. Nouns and adjectives. (A) All the languages (with the limited exception of Romanian) abandoned the Latin case system, reducing the noun to two forms, a singular and a plural. (1) The singular continues the Latin accusative singular minus the -m (which was already weak, perhaps only a nasalisation, in Latin), e.g. corona(m), It. corona, annu(m), It. anno. (2) The plural either adds -s from the accusative plural (so in Fr., Sp., Port.) e.g. the Latin coronas becomes Sp. coronas, the Latin annos, becomes Sp. anos; or changes the final vowel (so in It., Rom.) as in the nominative plural of the first two declensions, e.g. coronae, It. corone; annī, It. anni. (B) The three gender classes of Latin were reduced to two by the loss of the neuter, with neuter nouns generally becoming masculine. (C) The inflected forms of the degrees of comparison in adjectives and adverbs were replaced by phrases with plūs (It., Fr.) or magis (Sp., Port., Rom.), e.g. Latin aqua calidissima, It. l'acqua più calda, Fr. l'eau la plus chaude, Sp. el agua más cálida, with the comparative replacing the superlative. In place of the inflected adverb, e.g. lente, the Romance languages formed phrases with the Latin ablative mente, e.g. lentā mente, It., Sp. lentamente, Fr. lentement. (D) The indefinite and definite articles were introduced, utilising ūnus, ille, e.g. Latin ūnus homo, ūna domina/ femina, It. un uomo, una donna, Fr. un homme, une femme; Latin ille homo, It. l'uomo, Fr. l'homme; Latin illī/illōs hominēs, It. gli uomini, Fr. les hommes. (E) The insubstantial demonstratives is and hic were replaced by iste, ipse, and compounds of these with ecce, e.g. iste, Sp. este; ipse, Sp. ese; eccu(m) istu(m), It. questo, Fr. ce, cet; ecce illu(m)/illos/illas, Fr. celui, celle(s), ceux.

II. Verbs. (A) The four conjugations were sometimes reduced to three by the redistribution of the third between the second and fourth. (B) The whole inflected passive was lost, except for the participle, which combined with esse to form a new phrasal passive, e.g. Latin amatur but It. è amato, Fr. il est aimé. (C) The future and future perfect and, in most parts, the pluperfect indicative, disappeared, while the pluperfect subjunctive generally replaced the imperfect subjunctive, e.g. cantauisset/cantasset, It. cantasse, Fr. il chantât. (D) The Latin future was replaced by a combination of habeo (less frequently uolo or debeo) with the infinitive of the main verb to give a new Romance future, e.g. cantare-habet, It. canterà, Fr. il chantera. (E) Beside the Latin perfect a new past tense was formed with the present of habere or tenere (in intransitive verbs sometimes with esse), plus the past participle, e.g. habet cantātum, It. ha cantato, Fr. il a chanté; and in parallel with this a new pluperfect was created using the imperfect of the auxiliary verb, e.g. habēbat cantātum, Fr. il avait chanté. (F) The other notable Romance creation was the conditional, formed like the new future but with the imperfect or perfect of habeo added to the infinitive, e.g. cantāre-habēbat/habuit, Fr. il chanterait, It. canterebbe; a parallel past conditional was then formed from the conditional of habeo plus the past participle, e.g. Fr. il aurait chanté. (G) The future participle did not survive, and the present one, except in purely adjectival use, was generally replaced by the ablative of the gerund, e.g. It. cantando.

Vocabulary

The vocabulary of the Latin that developed into Romance often differs from the literary terms for a variety of reasons: the classical word may be physically too slight to survive sound-change and so be expanded by prefixes or suffixes or be replaced by a more substantial approximate synonym, or the classical term may simply have gone out of fashion generally or at that particular social level. So, for example, edo 'eat' is replaced by comedō or mandūcō; ōs (ōris) 'mouth' by bucca (though os, ossis 'bone' survives); ignis 'fire' by focus; magnus 'great' by grandis; apis 'bee' by apicella; auis 'bird' by auicellus or passer; ferre 'to bring' by portāre or leuāre; equus 'horse' by caballus; breuis 'short' by curtus; pulcher 'beautiful' by bellus or fōrmōsus; and domus 'house' by casa or mānsiō. However, as the Romance languages never lost the sense of being connected in some way with Latin they continued to draw new vocabulary from book Latin, and from each other, as they developed into cultivated literary languages in the course of the Middle Ages. These later acquisitions can often be recognised because they are closer in form to their Latin source than the words that have shared the whole development of their particular Romance language.

The Latin element in English

First-fourth centuries A.D.

The Romans attempted the conquest of Britain unsuccessfully under Julius Caesar in 55 and successfully under the Emperor Claudius in A.D. 43, after which they remained in control of Britain (but not of Ireland) until about the end of the fourth century. During this period at least the town-dwelling Britons became familiar with Latin and many words were taken over into their own language and survive to the present day in its descendant, Welsh. At this time the Angles and Saxons, Germanic tribes speaking a language that was to be the ancestor of English, were still on the Continent, living along the North Sea coast of the present Netherlands, though some had already been introduced into Britain to act as a coastal defence force against other Germanic raiders. In the course of trade and service with the Roman army on the Continent some Latin words had been adopted by the Germanic peoples generally, and so were part of their language when the Angles and Saxons began in the fifth century to migrate to Britain and settle there. Some of these words were in fact Greek in origin but were already naturalised in Latin. A number of modern English words have survived from this early period, absorbed partly on the Continent and partly during their first century in Britain.

We have: ark (arca, chest; also the surname Ark-wright), bishop (episcopus), butter (būtyrum), candle (candēla), chalk (calc-em), cheap (caupō; place-names Cheapside, Chipping- 'market'; surname Chapman 'trader'), cheese (cāseus), Chester (castra; and names in -caster, -cester, -chester), church (kyriakon), copper (cuprum), coulter (culter), devil (diabolus), dish (discus), fever (febris), inch (uncia), kiln (culīna), kitchen (coquīna), line (līnea), mallow (malua), mile (mīlle passūs), mill (molīna), mint (coinage, monēta), mint (plant, menta), -monger, as fishmonger (mangō), pitch (tar, pic-em), purple (purpura), pillow (puluīnus), pile (as in pile-driver, pīlum), pin (penna), pine (tree, pīnus), port (portus), post (postis), priest (presbyter), plant (planta), pit (puteus), pound (weight, pondō), sack (saccus), sickle (secula), street (strāta uia), shrive (scrībere), shrine (scrīnium), tile (tēgula), toll (tax, telōnium), turtle (-dove, turtur), wall (uallum), wine (uīnum).

Man'y others have fallen out of use in the course of time while others survive in dialect, as sikker (sēcūrus) 'certain' (later taken over in its French form as 'sure', and then again from Latin as 'secure'), neep (nāpus) 'turnip', soutar (sūtor) 'shoemaker' (and as a surname), or have undergone a change of meaning which obscures the relationship, as 'shambles' (scamellum, originally 'butcher's stall'), 'pine' (poena, originally 'punish', 'torment').

Fifth-sixth centuries A.D.

A little later the English acquired more Latin words of a very similar kind from British speakers in the period immediately after the settlement and before their conversion to Christianity in the seventh century had made any of them familiar with Latin as a written language. Some examples are: anchor (anchora), cat (cattus), chervil (cerefolium), chest (cista), cowl (cucullus), fork (furca), minster (monastērium), monk (monachus), mortar (pestle and m., mortārium), mussel (musculus), nun (nonna), provost (praepositus), punt (pontō), relic (reliquiae), Satur-day (Saturnus; the other days of the week were given Germanic names on the pattern of the Latin ones), stop (up), (stuppāre, from stuppa 'tow'), strap (stroppus), trivet (tripod-em), trout (tructa).

A few others are now archaic or poetical, or of historical interest only: cockle (weed, cocculus), kirtle (tunic, curtus), lave (lauāre), soler (sōlārium; the sunny room or parlour in a medieval castle, now reintroduced in its Latin form in a new context).

Seventh-tenth centuries

During the remaining centuries before the Norman Conquest of 1066 many new Latin words appeared in English books but the majority of them were only superficially anglicised and never became widely used. Their survival rate is accordingly low. Some examples are: alms (eleemosyna), altar (altāre), apostle (apostolus), arch- (archi-), balsam (balsamum), beet (bēta), camel (camēlus), cole-wort, kail (caulis), cook (coquus), cope (garment, cap(p)a), creed ($cr\bar{e}d\bar{o}$), idol ($\bar{i}d\bar{o}lum$), lily ($l\bar{i}lium$), martyr (martyr), mass (service; missa), offer (offerre), paradise (paradīsus), plaster (medical; (em)plastrum), part (part-em), pope (papa), psalm (psalmus), purse (bursa), school (schola), spend ((e)xpendere), title (titulus), and perhaps verse (uersus).

In some cases where the word has survived the original meaning is no longer current, as 'prime' and 'noon' (prīma and nona hora) the first and ninth hours of the monastic day, or 'scuttle' (scutella, diminutive of scutum, originally 'dish', 'platter').

Some members of this late group are more likely to have been borrowed a second time from French than to have survived from pre-Conquest times, and this was certainly the case with many of the Latin loan-words found in Anglo-Saxon, when the modern forms show that they were lost and re-acquired in this way.

Eleventh-fifteenth centuries and after

From the Conquest to the Renaissance a very large number of words of ultimately Latin origin found their way into Middle English, but almost invariably they did so either through French or with the same modifications of endings as similar words had undergone in French, so that direct borrowings are hard to identify. From the sixteenth century this type of borrowing continues but at the same time a substantial number of words come into English as unmodified Latin and retaining such features as Latin plural formations. The largest number of these came in during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries with a sharp decline thereafter, apart from the terminology of the natural sciences. A few examples from each century will illustrate the process.

Sixteenth century: alias, arbiter, area, circus, compendium, decorum, delirium, exit, genius, ignoramus, interim, interregnum, medium, peninsula, radius, species. Seventeenth century: affidavit, agenda, census, complex, curriculum, fulcrum, honorarium, lens, pendulum, premium, rabies, series, specimen, squalor, tedium. Eighteenth century: alibi, bonus, deficit, inertia, insomnia, propaganda, ultimatum, via. Nineteenth century: aquarium, consensus, omnibus, referendum.
